

Mexicans Are Mas... Following All-Day Battle Along the Border

Fully 20 Mexicans Killed By United States Troops; Entire Border in Ferment

American Troops Are Being Rushed to the Rio Grande to Stop Mexicans, Who Are Gathering to Cross Into the United States—One United States Trooper Wounded in the Battle With the Mexicans—It Is Said That the Mexicans Who Fought the American Troopers Were Carranza Soldiers—Washington Admits That Guerilla Warfare Is in Progress Along the Border.

Brownsville, Texas, September 4.—Many Mexicans reported as having massed along the river where today's battle took place, 65 miles east of here, with communication between here and San Benito, in the raid district, all but broken by wire cutters and a sudden calling to arms of all troops stationed at Fort Brown tonight, the situation growing out of today's hostilities has developed swiftly to one of grave possibilities.

Late tonight advices reached here that an attempt had been made to cut all the wires between this city and San Benito, 19 miles north of here. All the wires leading in this direction but one were cut, severed strands being plainly visible. This was done a few miles north of the scene of Thursday's battle with troopers and Mexicans, but in the same section of country.

At Cavazos crossing, where the battle took place today, the river bank is reported tonight to be literally lined with Mexicans, although it is not known whether there are any Carranza soldiers among them.

The so-called Carranza railroad lines run near the crossing and it is reported that a train brought many from Matamoros tonight to the scene of the fight. The place is closely guarded since the firing ceased at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

London, September 4.—Although they continue their retirement in some sectors and are being driven back in others, the Russians, on the whole, have stiffened their resistance and the German allies now have to fight, and fight hard, for every yard they gain.

Another Series of Battles.

South of the Pripet marshes another series of battles is being fought. The Russians along the Str and Sereth rivers are making a stubborn stand, and the Teutons are finding their way southward barred on most of the front.

The French, British and Belgian armies continue an insistent bombardment of German trenches in the west, but thus far the expected offensive has not developed.

FULTON NATIONAL TO LEND ON COTTON

Atlanta Bank Stands Ready to Advance $1,000,000 to Aid Farmers in Gradually Marketing Crop.

The Fulton National bank, of Atlanta, which was last week reappointed a state depository by Governor Harris, announced on Saturday that it stands ready now to lend $1,000,000 on cotton to aid the farmers in the gradual marketing of the crop.

The announcement was issued by A. H. Simms, vice president of the bank, and is as follows:

"The reappointment of the Fulton National bank as a state depository for a period of four years was announced yesterday by Governor Harris."

"The Fulton National bank, like all of the national banks in Atlanta, is showing a large increase in business; deposits being in the neighborhood of $100,000 ahead of the deposits of last year at this period, with no bills payable or discounts."

"The Fulton National is announcing to its customers that it stands ready to advance $1,000,000 on cotton, and is willing to aid the farmers in obtaining the best price possible for their crop."

A number of other Atlanta banks have already announced their intention of lending similar sums, so that, with the co-operation also of the federal reserve banks, it seems there will be plenty of money available for financing the cotton crop.

Alleged Flirtation In Church Described To Judge Johnson

Recorder Advises Correy to Introduce Cosy to Young Ladies, Declaring Accuser Unreasonably Jealous.

It is but a short step from the church to the police station court if you try to make a "dash" in the holy edifice, as was shown by the trial of R. H. Corsey and Henry Correy in the recorder's court Saturday afternoon.

Corsey escorted two young ladies to the McDonald Baptist church, on West Fair street, Friday evening. The old lady, that three under such circumstances is one too many did not hold good, for Corsey did not want any fourth party butting in.

Corsey became smitten with one of the young ladies, made eyes at her and stared at her in church until he became offensive to the ladies, says Correy.

"Cosy's actions were such," stated Correy to the recorder, "that they asked me to take them back home before church was dismissed. Why, the fellow even tried to stare me out of court, and to be could dirt with the girls."

Cosy denied that he did more than look at the girls.

Correy took the girls home, and then returned to the church, where he found Cosy still loitering.

"I went up to him," stated Correy, "and demanded why he had treated the young ladies in such a manner. He replied, 'Nothing,' and then I hit him with my walking stick."

"I saw how the boys listen to me," was the decision of the recorder, "and Corsey did not mean to do anything wrong. He merely wanted to back home before church was dismissed. I will hold these cases open until you both can introduce Cosy to the girls and there will be one a piece. I will hold these cases open until you both can introduce Cosy to the girls and there will be one a piece. Violators of Law Should Get at Least Five Years in Pen, He Says.

Councilman J. N. Renfro was preparing an ordinance Saturday to be introduced in general council Monday, which, if passed, is intended to prove a valuable aid to the city, county and federal authorities in stamping out the dope evil in Atlanta and Fulton county.

Mr. Renfro went with Dr. J. F. Kennedy Saturday morning for an inspection of the hospital now being used for the treatment of drug addicts by the tapering-off process.

"If the city could do so by ordinance, I would advocate sending any person who sells 'dope' to these unfortunate people to the pen for at least five years with no option of a fine," declared Mr. Renfro after his visit to the hospital.

POLICE PERSONALS

Occasionally men rise to fame and wealth as tender ages of 22, but it is seldom that one so young ever gets to be a full-fledged policeman and at the same time bear the reputation of being one of the best qualified of the force.

But, "youth must be served," and this is the case with Charlie Cowan, the "boy policeman" of Atlanta.

OFFICER COWAN, Youngest policeman on force.

He is secretary to Assistant Chief of Police E. L. Jett, besides being record clerk in the office of the chief of police.

His familiarity with every branch of police activity and his thorough knowledge of the working of the police department, equip him so well that he is destined to early promotion in case vacancy should occur.

Charles is pretty well "sun-burned" at present, having just returned from a two-weeks' fishing and camping trip to the Ocmulgee river, thirty miles below the house of the father, Mr. J. McDaniel, at Eastman, where he spent a part of his vacation.

Patrolman E. Collins found the federal government building a concrete bridge across the fold of the beautiful and deep canyon of the Indian river, just in front of the home of his childhood. The National highway will bypass the heart of the Indian reservation at Yellow Hill, N. As was announced recently the contingent fee has been reduced this year from $5 to $3, owing principally to general business conditions. But it is necessary to assess each student this small amount to cover expenses of lighting, heat and power, which are not included in the state of Georgia has generously donated to the building and its entire equipment for this purpose, in consideration of those desiring an education along technical lines, and whose circumstances are such that they are unable to take advantage of the day classes.

The students range in age from 15 to 60 years, there being among them men of experience in the business world, who are seeking further knowledge along technical lines that will be of value to them in their various business enterprises.

There are thirty-four separate subjects of instruction offered, the regular members of the Tech faculty being in charge of the classes. These subjects include all branches of mechanical and electrical engineering, chemistry, mathematics, many practical courses, such as carpentry, foundry practice, structural steel, concrete work and others.

MRS. FLORINE HOLT DIES IN NEW YORK; FUNERAL IN MACON

Notice of the death in New York Saturday of Mrs. Florine Holt, formerly a resident of Atlanta and Macon, has been received by friends and relatives here. Mrs. Holt was living with her daughter, Mrs. J. B. Duke. The body will be brought to Macon for funeral and interment in the old family burying ground.

Mrs. Holt was a member of a distinguished and prominent Georgia family. As Miss Florine Russell, of Macon, she married Dr. William Holt, who was a scholarly physician of that place.

Last year Mrs. Holt went to Europe to consult with leading physicians concerning heart trouble. She had since then lived in London and New York with her daughter, who had married J. B. Duke, president of the American Tobacco company. Mrs. Hugh Willet, of Atlanta, is a cousin of Mrs. Holt.

HENDRIX TO PREACH SERIES OF SERMONS ON "OUR CITY'S LIFE"

Dr. W. R. Hendrix, pastor of St. Mark's church, has announced Sunday evening sermons related to the various phases of the city life of Atlanta.

The first topic for tonight's service is "Our City Character—How best to help the temporary dependent ones without pampering them." It is a delicate and difficult question, but soluble in the Christian love and helpfulness of the great body of good people who seek to save those in their reach, says Dr. Hendrix.

The other topics in their order are "Our City Schools—the opportunity they should afford to every child of whatever station in life." "The value of publicity in helping the best and avoiding the worst in our city's activities." "The Atlanta Spirit—constructive co-operation and good will on the get-together basis as against distracting animosities and selfish, every-man-for-himself life."

These topics are to be discussed from the Christian viewpoint.

Artist Gregg Boosted By Chicago Magazine

Cover design by Lewis C. Gregg, in Atlanta issue of "Buildings and Building Management."

There appears as the cover design of the September issue of "Buildings and Building Management," a Chicago building publication, a striking scene of Atlanta's skyscrapers, looking north from the viaduct out Peachtree street. This cover design is drawn by Cartoonist Lewis C. Gregg, of the Atlanta Constitution. The September issue is called "The Atlanta Number," and the entire issue is devoted to advertising Atlanta as the meeting place of this year's annual convention of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, which convenes here on September 14, for a four-day session, with headquarters at the Piedmont hotel.

An inside page is given up in the magazine to an illustrated story of Cartoonist Gregg, and his "Gilly the Gopher," which is written by Henry F. Martin.

Boost for Gregg.

A part of the story, which is written by Henry F. Martin, is as follows: "And now last, and also least, in the picture at the bottom is to be seen a little, fat, handsome new quarter at Polyphemus, and if you fail to find him listed in 'Who's Who in Atlanta,' just he is 'Gilly the Gopher' in plain English. He is a gopher, and a very good one, and property and particular part of that party, which is written by Henry F. Martin, cartoonist of The Atlanta Constitution, who executed the picture which is the subject of this article. Down here in Georgia, the home of the reptile (I don't mean Gregg), he is known as a gopher, though in other sections he would probably be called a tortoise. Mr. Gregg is an upstanding six-footer, who does not look the least like a gopher, but it is well-nigh impossible for any southern newspaper reader to see a gopher without thinking of Gregg. In all of his cartoons, down in a corner appears the little burrower with the snappy temper, as a mascot, that most of the other artists fared forth, and collected a stock of mascots for themselves. Some twelve years ago an Atlanta physician ordered a patient medicine called gopher oil. He engaged Gregg to design a label for his bottles, and sent more than 500,000 packages called 'Gilly the Gopher' to him. He was given the name of Gilly, and soon became a household name in every town and the south knows the story of how 'Gilly the Gopher' came to be."

Cloud-Stanford Company Opens Handsome Quarters

The Cloud-Stanford company, for more than seven years one of the leading clothing stores of the city, has this date had new quarters at 10 Peachtree street. The new home of the company also has an entrance at 57 North Broad street, since the store runs through the block.

The new building, which is across Peachtree street from the old quarters, has three floors and basement, all of which is occupied by the firm, which has reopened with a brand-new stock of men's wearing apparel. The building has been attractively finished by one of the best known decorators in the city. The main floor and windows have at the entrance artistic decorations and the upper floors are likewise done in bright colors, with the glass also decorated.

The interior of the store contains the remodeled fixtures which have been so greatly admired for their beauty and design, and built after the fashion of the early department stores.

When the Cloud-Stanford company first opened business, on March 14, 1905, more than 500,000 packages called signed visitor's cards and inspected what was then considered the handsomest clothing store in the city. The firm expect to sustain, and they intend to make even further progress, and make of the business one of the best in the south.

BLAKEY IS PLACED IN CHARGE OF BOYS AT THE Y. M. C. A.

C. W. Blakey, recently elected as boys' work secretary of the Atlanta Young Men's Christian association, assumed the duties of his new position Saturday. Mr. Blakey comes to Atlanta from Rockton, Ill., where he has been conducting special Y. M. C. A. work.

The new boys' secretary is a graduate of Central college, Fayette, Mo. He began his association experience as an associate boys' work secretary of St. Louis, Mo. After leaving St. Louis he went to Springfield, Mo., where he served for several years in the capacity of boys' work secretary.

In the spring of 1911 Mr. Blakey went to the Chattanooga association as boys' work secretary, where he remained for two years, proving one of the best men on boys' work ever in the association at that time.

Associated with the new boys' work secretary will be three assistants. Charles J. Stout, of Chicago, will be in charge of the boys' club department, and Fred E. Dunn, of Massachusetts, and H. E. Dean, of Jacksonville, will be in charge of the athletic department.

"Atlanta is one of the two cities in the United States where the boys' work is given equal consideration and advantages with the men," stated Mr. Blakey. "The new boys' work director at the Atlanta and Providence, Ill., are the only two cities where Young Men's Christian associations give the boys equal equipment and facilities."

TEXANS WILL MARK OUT DIXIE OVERLAND ROUTE

Party to Motor From El Paso to Savannah This Week.

Columbus, Ga., September 4.—(Special.)—The Dixie overland highway route, the name of which will be changed to the Savannah-San Diego route, will be logged during the next few days by a party of Texans who will travel the entire route in automobiles.

According to a letter just received in Columbus, those composing the party are E. A. Chandler, of Southern Motoring, Dallas, Texas; Lynn Converse, of Houston, Texas, and Powell Eves, of Dallas, Texas. These gentlemen will first proceed to El Paso and from El Paso they will go to Savannah on the route of the proposed highway. They expect to leave early next week and on route to Savannah will visit Shreveport, Jackson, Meridian, Montgomery, Columbus and various Georgia towns.

It is not improbable that the party will be joined at Columbus by good roads enthusiasts, who will go with them to Savannah. The route from Columbus to Savannah is well defined, and most of it is improved and in excellent condition. There are a few links yet to be completed, work on which is in progress, and before long there will be a complete highway between Columbus and Savannah. The stretch of road in Chatahoochee county which formerly has been a base for automobile thieves is now being converted into an excellent highway.

Next to that covered by the New Testament, Dr. Bricker regards this as the most interesting and important period of human history, and at the same time, the least familiar to the average man. He has been working upon this series for several years, and most cordially invites the more thoughtful of the Atlanta public to be present at the opening of the series, when the subject will be, "Why a Tolerant State Persecuted the Benevolent Church?"

Atlanta Law School's Professors Compiling Their Own Text Books

Two Atlanta lawyers, Philip Weitner and R. E. Troutman, have just written their own text books to meet the needs of their classes in the Atlanta Law School. Mr. Weitner, along with his legal work, has been deeply interested in criminology, and was four years ago, judge of the juvenile court of Atlanta. A professor of criminal law, he was unable to find any text book adapted to the needs of his classes. He has collected one hundred criminal cases in full and about five hundred in brief and edited them in a book to appear under the name of "Georgia Criminal Cases."

Mr. Troutman found the same difficulty in his classes on constitutional law and has prepared "Notes on Constitutional Law," which will be published soon.

These books will be used exclusively in the Atlanta Law school, and, being written especially for the student, will not doubt add greatly to the efficiency of instruction.

IN THE ATLANTA THEATERS

Atlanta Theater Will Open on Friday Night; Attractive Vaudeville Bill at the Forsyth

Keith Vaudeville.
(At the Forsyth.)
The Forsyth theater tomorrow enters upon the second week of this season's vaudeville with Manager George H. Hickman highly elated over the results of the splendid opening. The opening bill drew an attendance that met every expectation and the advance sales for this week and the entire season continue big.

"A Night of the Poets," wherein the sentiment of world poems will be vitalized with pictures and readings, will be the headliner of the second week's offerings at the Forsyth.

This poetic act is one of the most unique and beautiful ever attempted in vaudeville. There will be ten persons in the company, including a reader and a quartet which is said to be exceptionally good. Special emphasis will be laid on the light and scenic effects. The special stage setting is most elaborate.

Albert Berry will be the reader. And while he reads from the famous poets, seated before an open fire, scenes depicting the poet's vision of his lines will be illustrated by life pictures above the big fireplace. The members of the company will be in special costume, in keeping with the sentiment of the poems.

Johnny Ford, an eccentric dancer who can't make his feet behave, and who has made his reputation both in musical comedy and vaudeville, will be another feature of the program this week. New songs and dances have been specially arranged for him, and he will be assisted by Roy Barton at the piano.

A contrast between life behind the scenes and life in front of them will be shown by Martha Russell and Patrick Calhoun in a scenic novelty called "Types of Stageman."

In one scene, for instance, an actor and actress are shown in roles where they hate one another in real life, although on the stage they appear as lovers.

Billy Bouncer, with four people, will appear in a lively comedy act, and Abbott and White will do a musical singing and piano act.

An original iron-jaw wire act, in which a woman holds the wire in her teeth while her partner performs on it, will be a stirring feature of the bill. The Helen Leach Wallin trio appear in the act.

Marie Fitzgibbon is a woman with a sense of humor, a monologist who will appear at the Forsyth this week in really new stories, and what is equally important, she has the art of telling them.

Rounding out the performance will be Heeza Liah and the Pathe news weekly motion pictures. Matinees will be given daily at 2:30 with evening performances at 8:30.

Scene from "When Dreams Come True," at the Atlanta Friday and Saturday.

Kelley Stock Company.
(At the Bijou.)
The Bijou theater will open its doors tomorrow, Labor Day, matinee and night, for the regular fall and winter season, offering as the attraction the ever popular Jewell Kelley stock company, which has in past seasons been the biggest card the Bijou ever had.

Jewell Kelley has taken a long lease on the Bijou and will conduct it under his own direction and supervision. The house will undergo many extensive repairs, and the carpenter, decorator and painter will be much in evidence at the opening of the season.

"When Hearts Are True" will be the opening play. It is one of the late stock releases. The play will be given a beautiful scenic equipment, with every attention to detail.

At the head of the cast will be the charming little leading lady, Miss Rose Morris, and Mr. Jewell Kelley, himself, will be seen in the leading male role. Both are artists of well-known ability and have won their laurels at the Bijou in previous engagements.

Mr. Arthur Blackaller will be the comedian. He comes to the Bijou a stranger, but with a reputation as one of the best stock comedians on the stage. He is a talented stage director and will have the general stage direction of the Bijou.

Mr. Taylor Bennett is an actor of worth who will become a great favorite at the Bijou. He comes from the west, where he has been identified with the best. R. Newton Ross and Johnny Williams are old favorites at the Bijou and will be much in evidence this season. Miss Bettie McCraney is an old favorite who will be back to greet her old friends. Miss Ivy Bowman will assume the character roles and she is considered one of the best in the theatrical field. Mr. Frank Moran will paint the scenery for the plays each week and it is said that he is a master in his line.

A new play will be offered each week and the Bijou will be, as heretofore, the home of good, clean plays for ladies and children. The Kelley company is a household favorite in Atlanta and has invariably played to packed houses at the Bijou. Matinees will be given daily at 2:30, with admission at 10 and 25 cents, and a night performance each evening at 8:30, with night prices at 10, 20 and 30 cents.

Billy Holmes and Ewell Lloyd will be in the box office. And a union stage crew, under the leadership of Buddy McMillan, will work the stage, while an orchestra recruited from the local federation of musicians will be in the orchestra pit.

The Bijou opens under most auspicious circumstances, considering the popularity of the Jewell Kelley company, the drawing power of the theater, and the time of season when the theater beckons to the regular theatergoer.

Seats are now selling at the Bijou box office.

Coming to Atlanta

Miss Evelyn Scotney, prima donna, and Howard White, basso, both of the Boston Opera company, who will appear in joint recital on the Alkahest lyceum course the coming season.

The season ticket sale for the Alkahest lyceum course will last only three days this year instead of an entire week as heretofore. These dates are September 13, 14 and 15, and the place is the Cable Piano company. The schedule of prices is $1 for the balcony, $1.50 for the arena and dress circle and $3 for boxes. If you wish to take advantage of the season ticket rate and hear any of the ten star attractions, which will appear on this course the coming season at the nominal price of 10 or 15 cents, it will be necessary for you to secure the seats during the three days, September 13 to 15. You can do this by calling at the Cable Piano company's store from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. each day, or our town patrons can have their orders filled by mailing checks to Vice President Thomas R. Marshall, whose subject will be filled in the order received.

Those patrons who subscribed for seats the coming season at the closing number last spring may call at the Alkahest office next Friday and Saturday, September 10 and 11, and get their tickets as promised when they subscribed. The first that come will be the first served with their choice of seats as usual.

All of the entertainments will be held in the Auditorium-Armory, which is now arranged so it can be and will be made comfortable for each performance. Those who expect to economize in any way the coming winter have an excellent chance to best here by securing their whole season of entertainment at the nominal sum of $1 or $1.50, and at the same time assist the most worthy institution, the Associated Charities.

The series will open on October 15 with a grand concert by Miss Jenny Dufau, prima donna soprano of the Chicago-Philadelphia Opera company, and assisting artists, and will close on April 4 with a lecture by Vice President Thomas R. Marshall, whose subject will be "National Tendencies." Those two numbers alone are well worth the price of a season ticket, but between these dates eight other celebrities will appear, including Dr. Hamilton Holt, grand opera artist, David Bispham as "Beethoven," and assisting artists, Colangelo's Italian band and orchestra, Mme. Evelyn Scotney and assisting artists, Bettie Jane Dunaway in "Daddy Long Legs," Senator Theodore E. Burton, Edwin Brush and company, magicians.

It is also quite probable that Irvin S. Cobb and John McCormack will appear during the season either as a substitute for two of the above numbers, or as extra numbers with special rates to the season ticket holders. Definite announcement regarding this will be made later.

RIVERSIDE SCHOOL HAS NEW BARRACKS IN PLACE OF OLD

Gainesville, Ga., September 4.—(Special)—Returning students to Riverside Military academy will see the famous south barracks of this popular preparatory school entirely remodeled and rebuilt, following the disastrous fire which visited it during the spring term.

President Beaver has spared no expense in the construction of this building, and it is one of the most imposing on the campus of this school. It contains four well lighted, model class rooms, and, in addition, apartments for three faculty officers with their families and living rooms for sixty cadets.

Special care has been given the living accommodations, and each room is well ventilated, having two windows and a transom and are light and sunny. Each room has a large closet, too.

The indications are that Riverside, which begins its fall term on Thursday, September 9, will open with the largest attendance in its history.

Rheumatism A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It

In the Spring of 1892 I was attacked by Rheumatism and Influenza. I suffered for over three years. I tried several other remedies and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it affected a cure in every case.

I must never suffer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent, simply mail your name and address, and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proved itself to be that long looked for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

Best Treatment for Catarrh S. S. S. Removes the Cause

Specialists in Catarrh troubles have agreed that it is an infection of the blood. The laboratories of the S. S. S. Co., at Atlanta, have proven it. Once you get your blood free from impurities—cleansed of the Catarrhal poisons, which it is now a prey to because of its unhealthy state—then you will be relieved of Catarrh—the dripping in the throat, hawking and spitting, raw sores in the nostrils, and the disagreeable bad breath. It was caused, in the first place, because your impoverished blood was easily infected. Possibly a slight cold or contact with some one who had a cold. But the point is—don't suffer with Catarrh—it is not necessary. The remedy S. S. S., discovered over fifty years ago, tested, true and tried, is always obtainable at any drug store. It has proven its value in thousands of cases. It will do so in your case. Get S. S. S. at once and begin treatment. If yours is a long standing case, be sure to write the S. S. S. Co., Atlanta, Ga., for free expert medical advice. They will tell you how this purely vegetable blood tonic cleanses the impurities from the blood by literally washing it clean. They will prove to you that thousands of sufferers from Catarrh, after consistent treatment with S. S. S., have been freed from the trouble and all its disagreeable features and restored to perfect health and vigor. Don't delay the treatment. Take S. S. S. at once.

Long Period of Bullish Stock Market Is Decidedly Evident

Weak Spots Give Way to Repeated Demonstrations of Ability of This Country to Surmount Difficulties.

New York, September 4.—(Special.) After showing signs of weakness, especially in the war stocks, the stock market has been generally active and the outlook now is for another long period of bullish market movements.

Following increased shipments of grain, raw materials, manufactured goods, etc., showing actual increases over previous weeks, while comparisons are now being made with the depression following the outbreak of war was beginning to be made, they are really far from what they should be, but even so they hold great promise for the future.

New financing during the month of August totaled above $100,000,000, as compared with $40,000,000 in July. This makes a total of $1,000,000,000 in new securities which have been issued since the beginning of the year.

Whenever James J. Hill journeys to New York his views on current conditions are eagerly sought. As a whole, there is a feeling of optimism in the northwest, his views failed to show anything like hope of a boom in the northwest.

The copper metal market has shown a slight advance on an average of about one cent per pound since the beginning of the year, and early spring months when prices for the metal advanced from a low of 15 cents per pound to a high of 20 cents per pound in the early summer.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE STOCKS SHOW GAIN SHORT SESSION OF NEW YORK BANKS

While International Credit Balance Grows Wall Street Worries Over Practical Solution to Restore Normal Status.

New York, September 4.—From Wall Street's viewpoint, since the great European war, the financial development has been as sensational as this week's rally in London.

According to this week's official figures from Washington for the eight months of the year ended with August, the excess of our country's exports over imports amounted to $1,100,000,000.

As has frequently been pointed out in this column, the wild speculation in the stock market has been anticipated by our foreign trade balance which is showing a steady increase.

PRACTICAL AND COMPREHENSIVE WAREHOUSE COTTON LOAN PLAN RECENTLY ANNOUNCED BY THE FOURTH NATIONAL BANK OF ATLANTA

The thirteen names on the above map of Georgia indicate the railway concentration points at which are located bonded warehouses of the Atlantic Compress company.

Whether those who raise or come into possession of cotton desire loans on the staple or not, a reflection upon the marketing plans, suggested by the announcement last week of the Fourth National bank of Atlanta, in connection with its liberal facilities for carrying cotton loans will impress upon the wisdom of promptly forwarding cotton to concentration points.

1. During the heavy cotton crop moving or marketing season, usually from September to November, invariably the most forceful bear argument is cotton receipts. The reason for this is that "cotton receipts" in the past, has meant "cotton for sale."

2. Concentration points are naturally broad spot cotton markets. Year after year, competitive buyers become acquainted with the grades and staple lengths of all cotton raised in the spot cotton markets and in contrast with the seller, with sample in hand, and cotton on the wagon, looking up a "taker" for the fleecy staple, we have eager buyers constantly seeking out the cotton owner who has cotton stored and insured cotton, who has facilities for financing the cotton equal to those of the cotton speculator and trader.

3. Aside from the value of possession of a warehouse receipt for cotton, instantly available as collateral for loans in the principal money markets of the country at minimum rates, the initial expense of shipment to concentration points, weighing, sampling, grading, insurance and storage forms a part of the expense that eventually must be paid, and adds just such amount to the final selling value.

By the way, in connection with this article it will be noted that the staple from all of the cotton growing sections of Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi eventually pass through one of the indicated concentration points, and also that there is hardly a county in the cotton raising section of Georgia in which is not located a correspondent of the Fourth National bank of Atlanta.

The Bank's Plan. Upon application of any farmer or merchant in Georgia, Florida or east Alabama, recommended by one of its correspondents, the Fourth National bank of Atlanta, will loan $300 or more at not exceeding three-fourths of the market value on cotton stored in any of the twenty warehouses of the Atlantic Compress company, for a period not exceeding six months, at the rate of 6 per cent per annum.

Upon request from the prospective borrower, the Atlanta bank will furnish the name of its nearest correspondent bank and application blanks of the following form:

Application and Recommendation. Parties desiring loans must file a written application which will include a recommendation for their bank, being the following form:

To the Fourth National Bank, Atlanta, Ga. Application is hereby made for a loan of $_____ to be secured by _____ bales of cotton to be stored with the Atlantic Compress company at _____ in the following information furnished as a true statement of my condition to induce the bank to grant the loan.

Name _____ Address _____ Occupation _____ (a) Farmer—Land owned _____ (b) Merchant—Total assets _____ Total liabilities _____ Dated _____ Signed _____ Banker's Recommendation. Fourth National Bank, Atlanta, Ga. We have read the above. Our estimate of the net worth is $_____. We recommend the application to you. Dated _____ Signed _____

Carrying Charges. In addition to the freight charges to the holder's nearest concentration point, the maximum storage, weighing, sampling, grading and insurance charges will be 50 cents per bale for the first month, and 30 cents per bale per month thereafter. In some of the Atlantic Compress warehouses the carrying charges are less than above indicated.

Interest Charges. While discount at the rate of 6 per cent per annum, or $3 per $100, is deducted by the bank from the six-month mints in an advance, the unearned interest in case of the sale of the cotton before the due date of the note, that is, the net interest cost to the borrower will be 50 cents per $100 per month.

Amount Loanable Unlimited. In making the loans the bank is requiring that the borrower make note payable to his own order and endorse in blank, thus on account of the very high grade of collateral afforded by the widely known bonded warehouse receipt the bank will be enabled to sell the note in the open market without its endorsement.

Banks as a rule do not like to carry bills payable to a high grade of collateral, and the amount of such safekeeping loans with the federal reserve bank, its other reserve agents and in the open market.

Reserve Bank Approval. The plan announced has the hearty approval of M. E. Wellborn, federal reserve agent of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta. "The management of the Fourth National," says Mr. Wellborn, "has taken advantage of the facilities of one of our most progressive systems of warehouses, and thereby is enabling a farmer in the section who cannot readily begin warehousing his cotton and obtain loans with which to liquidate his debts at the lowest rate ever paid by cotton farmers for borrowing accommodation."

Handcuffed, Thomas had jumped from the running train. Lasseter pursued for 11 miles, but lost the fugitive. Later, returning to Social Circle, he encountered Thomas, minus the cuffs, re-arrested him and returning to Atlanta late in the afternoon.

They are expecting hourly to gain some information that will lead to the fugitives' capture.

These Men Had Catarrh. They Both Took Peruna Both Got Well and Praise Peruna.

Mr. J. Louis Pfau, Jr., 1207 The Temple, 184 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill., writes: "I had catarrh for ten years and tried a great many kinds of medicines, which cost me a lot of money but did me no good. Instead of getting better I seemed to get worse. My eyes were bloodshot, my nose smelled so bad that I was ashamed to go in company. I was night guard at the prison and I would get so dizzy that I would have to catch hold of something to keep from falling. I read about Peruna in the New York World and thought I would give it a trial. I used about ten bottles, and I am cured of catarrh, and the dizzy feeling has left me and I am not bothered with it any more. I keep Peruna in the house, and when I feel a cold coming on I take a little bit of it and it does me good."

WEEKLY REVIEW DRY GOODS MARKET

New York, September 4.—Cotton goods markets have become more active and prices are steadily rising. Wide print cloths and convettibles are a full quarter of a cent up from the low point and bleached and brown sheetings, unbranded, are up from 4c to 3-16c a yard, with sales better than for some time past. Together with an improvement in the primary markets there has been a gain in the demand from retailers and buyers. More inclination is being shown now to cover late requirements, and more confidence is shown in the stability of cotton values as well as in international affairs affecting trade.

ANSLEY PARK GOLF OFFICIALS GOOD SPORTS SCRIBES ALL BUT RUINED GOOD COURSE

By HIRSH RICE ROSSMAN. When the newspapermen's golf tournament at the Ansley Park course is completed the board of governors will hold a meeting to decide whether to complete the job of plowing it up and putting in a crop of inter-club heat taking the money they have in the bank and reconstructing it as a golf link.

As we went around the second time I observed some queer tracks in the turf and some queer holes and holes as to what sort of animal had made them. The mystery was cleared, however, by a dog named 'Gopher' who had been on the turf.

The act of trying to discover if some of the players are using midirons or mattocks in their frantic attempts to play a hole in the turf, is a grotesque sight. Not that they object to the holes torn in the turf, but being ready to try anything, they are interested in how a man can dig such deep holes with any of the accustomed tools.

GOOD NIGHT BALL

bet the ball Looie Gregg borrowed from me that he is the winner of the second flight. Some Clever Athlete. They tell me that the matches between Golf and Henry Grady Jr. were the real class game and that there was less torturing between them than there was between Clever Athlete and Henry Grady Jr.

So, one morning this summer, after the year of the big turf, the turf was plowed around till the first cart went out to Ansley Park and Mack got out his equipment and explained the game.

Play by Holes

No. 424 Yards, Par 4.—Gardner drove to the rough, and Anderson's first shot hit the hole. Gardner's second shot cleared a trap on his second, and Gardner's iron shot hit missed a hole but he had more of it left in the air and it dropped on the green not far from the flag. Anderson drove the ball out to the pin and Gardner's third shot did not touch the cup. Gardner tried for a two, but missed his shot.

Brewerton Was Stung Near the Hole

Some Goodyear Tires Travel Half The World's Circumference

The Mileage is There Do You Get It?

To Men Whose Tires Cost Too Much

We never quote the remarkable mileages attained on Goodyear tires. But such reports come by the hundreds.

Some men are careful, some careless. Some use big-enough tires and some don't. Roads and conditions differ. So does luck. And mileage varies likewise.

But We Do This:

In every Goodyear Fortified Tire we give you all we know to minimize cost per mile.

We embody five great features used by no other maker. We give you other extras which are rare. And just those extras will this year cost us $1,635,000.

We make our anti-skid—the Goodyear All-Weather—a double-thick tread. That double thickness on this year's output of this type will cost us a million dollars.

And this year's additions—unasked-for additions in rubber and size—will cost us $500,000.

In Winning Twin Bills The Barons Lead League

Birmingham, Ala., September 4.—(Special.)—The double bill of ball players for double-headers is proverbial, but in the case of the Barons, the twin bill has an ardent admirer. For, inasmuch as Birmingham has registered ten of the victories accredited to its record via the double-header route, Molesworth is perfectly satisfied.

Fels in the same number of engagements. Atlanta has won one double-header from Jawn Dobb's hirings. Birmingham has won two double-headers from Chattanooga, and two from Memphis. The first double bill was captured from Atlanta. Memphis has won two from Birmingham and one each from Little Rock and Chattanooga. Atlanta has taken both ends from Mobile, Chattanooga and New Orleans. Little Rock, in addition to trouncing another New Orleans, has beaten Birmingham and Little Rock, while Memphis has won Mobile and Memphis. Mobile won two twin bills from Atlanta and Little Rock. But what ticksles Moley the most is that on September 10-11 at New Orleans the Barons play a double-header each day with the high flying Pels, while the Barons are still high flying. The Pels in the chase for the hunting.

200 PERSONS KILLED IN MEXICAN WRECK

Washington, September 4.—Two hundred persons, including women and children, were killed in a train wreck several days ago 200 miles east of Mexico City, on the road to Vera Cruz. American refugees who were aboard the train following reached Vera Cruz with the news. American Consul Silliman reported today that the disaster was "an appalling one."

"IRON HINDENBURG" SHEATHED WITH NAILS

Berlin, September 4.—(Via London.)—As many thousands as could pack themselves into the square surrounding the Column of Victory witnessed today the dedication of the colossal "Iron Hindenburg"—a 30-foot wooden statue, which will be sheathed with gold, silver and iron nails, sold to raise a fund for rebuilding East Prussia. The Princess Augusta Wilhelm, representing the empress, drove the first gold nail into the base of the statue. Possessors of gold nails, bought for 100 marks ($35) apiece, then filed up in a seemingly endless procession. It was hours before the purchasers of silver nails, which cost five marks each, could even get to the statue. It probably will take days and even weeks before the iron nails already purchased are put into place. The total amount realized by the advance sale is expected to run into hundreds of thousands of marks.

NOTORIOUS FORSTNER DIES ON BATTLEFIELD

Berlin, September 4.—(Via London.) Lieutenant Baron von Forstner, who gained notoriety as the result of the Sapern incident, has been killed in action. Lieutenant von Forstner was reported to have been killed near Louvain in September, 1914, but official records were silent on the subject. The Sapern incident occurred at Sapern, Alsace, where the 8th German infantry under Colonel von Reuter was stationed in 1913. The citizens of the town had difficulties with the soldiers and showed strong anti-German feeling. Lieutenant von Forstner provoked several clashes between his men and the inhabitants and told the soldiers to have anyone seen insulting the German flag. He himself snatched a lame shoe maker. For this exploit he was promoted to major. He was three days' imprisonment, although strongly upheld by Colonel von Reuter, his commander.

MURDER CONFESSION DENIED BY NEGROES

Providence, R. I., September 4.—A complete repudiation of the alleged confessions of three negro accomplices of a new turn today to the case of Mrs. Elizabeth Tiffany Blair Mohr, at whose door the police had laid the death of her husband, Dr. C. Franklin Mohr. Mrs. Mohr's arrest, according to the police, followed admissions by George V. Healls, chauffeur for Dr. Mohr; C. Victor Brown, formerly employed as a porter at the physician's Newport estate, and Henry Spellman, a half-brother of Brown, that she had hired them to assassinate her husband, upon whom she sought vengeance because of personal abuse and his attentions to other women. A three days' search for evidence to corroborate these statements apparently has met with little success. The revolver with which the physician and his secretary, Miss Emily G. Burger, were shot, have not been recovered, though in their reputed confessions the negroes said they would be found in a brook near the scene of the attack.

NEGROES ALSO SAY Mrs. MOHR Had Nothing to Do With Killing Husband.

Chief of Police Thomas F. Robbins, of Barrington, in whose district the murder was committed, and who has charge of the investigation, said tonight that so far as he knew none of the negroes ever had signed a confession. Woman Maintains Innocence. Mrs. Mohr has stoutly maintained her innocence and explained the murder by saying Brown had had a grudge against the doctor since his discharge from employment at the Mohr home, and that robbery probably was an added incentive. Today's repudiation of the alleged confessions was made unusually and without the knowledge of counsel. It was made in the form of a statement given to a newspaper man admitted to the jail by the warden. They declared they were wholly innocent, as was Mrs. Mohr, and that they could prove alibi; that the alleged confessions were made under duress while they were subjected to "third degree" methods; that the police had put in their mouths statements which they assented in anger or devotion, and that it was common report that Dr. Mohr had a grudge against his wife.

GERMANY FRIENDLESS, ASSERTS DR. DERNBURG

Berlin, September 4.—(By Wireless to Tuckerton.)—The German Economic Association for South and Central America, of which Dr. Edward Dernburg has been elected president, was formed by combining the German-Argentine Central association and the German-Brazilian Commercial association. The committee of the new organization defines its purposes as being to foster relations, especially of a commercial and economic nature, between Germany and Latin-America; to collect the countries in question and to contribute among members of the association and to the press news concerning the countries. The meeting at which this association was founded was largely attended. Representatives of various government departments were present. The president of the German-Brazilian association, Herr Maschke, stated that the new enterprise was intended to prepare during the war for future developments and that Germany's connections with Central and South American countries which play a most important part in the countries' commerce should be closer rather than otherwise after the war. Dr. Schulte said that Argentina should provide certain staples which before the war were imported from Russia.

STONE CASTLE CHAPTER ISSUES FINE YEAR BOOK

The Duty of Daughters Aptly Shown in Well Balanced Program.

"Here's to the land where roses grow, Unchilled by breath from mountain snow. Where winds blow warm from over the sea, And hearts are rebels and reckless and free. Where waters flow smooth and skies are bright, And the mockingbird sings through the velvet. Where the jasmine twines on the broad live oak, And the grass moss floats on the breeze like smoke. A land of love and laughter and song, Where the sunlit days are never too long. A land of witchery and beauty untold, Where only the hearts of the dead are cold."

The above beautiful quotation is from a poem entitled "Georgia" written by a gifted Georgia girl, Ella Harley Granddaughters of the American Revolution, and occupies the first page of the splendid year book recently gotten out by the Stone Castle Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is one of the best balanced programs on Georgia that has ever been printed. Romance and sentiment have their place on its pages, but it is the association of the Indian tribes with the country during the years of colonization and early settlement, the struggles of the first settlers and the great need which produced the many forts and blockhouses built along the frontier for the protection of their homes and families. And the reward we of the twentieth century are reaping from the brave acts and well laid out plans of these brave men is brought out in the papers on Georgia's industrial development and in the naming of the fine men who have served as our governors.

Are we carrying on the great work begun by our forefathers? Are we doing things to be proud of? Are we true patriots? Patriotism like conservation in its broadest sense includes many things. It is the endeavor from caring for the helpless orphan and giving our fellow Georgian who is unfortunately down and out a new start, to raising flags and honoring our heroes of the past, the stories of these courageous men may spark to create a burning love of country in the hearts of our boys of today. We must know the men of the past who helped to build our state. Below we publish the names of the Governor Telfair, Governor Matthews and Governor Handley from the pen of Joseph T. Derry and will follow with others next week.

Let us not forget to honor our warriors and statesmen of the past and build monuments and mark sites of forts and battlefields at the same time. Let us again honor the Stone Castle chapters year book let us remember that the most noble and patriotic work that can be done is helping to elevate the lives and aspirations of those who are unable to help themselves. He done loves God and his country, who loves and serves his fellow man.

EDWARD TELFAIR.

Edward Telfair was born in Scotland in 1733 and received an English education at a school of Kirkcaldy. Coming to America at the age of 20 as agent for a mercantile house he resided in Virginia, then removed to Halifax, N. C. and in 1766 settled in Savannah, where he engaged in mercantile business. He was active with the Georgia patriots and was active in 1774 collecting funds at Savannah and forwarding supplies to the Bostonians suffering from the effects of the Boston port closing. He was one of the band who, under the leadership of Joseph Habersham removed the powder from the magazine and was a member of the Council of Safety as a member of the continental congress from Georgia signed the ratification of the Articles of Confederation July 24, 1776, and was in 1783 one of the commissioners to make a treaty with the Cherokee chiefs.

Edward Telfair was twice governor of Georgia and upon the occasion of President Washington's visit in 1791 to Augusta, at that time capital of the state, he entertained the president brilliantly at his family residence at the Grove. He died at Savannah September 17, 1807 in the seventy-second year of his age.

GEORGE MATTHEWS.

George Matthews was born in Augusta county, Virginia and in early childhood was sent to the military academy in a battle with the Indians at Point Pleasant on the Great Kanawha. Governor 1772. He was a member of the American revolution and was appointed colonel of the Ninth regiment of the United States and served under Washington at Brandywine and Germantown. Being taken prisoner in a skirmish, he was for a while on a prison ship in New York harbor. After being exchanged he commanded the Third Virginia in the attack on the General Nathaniel Greene and shared the hardships, perils and triumphs of the campaign. He was the first to cross the mountains and Georgia from British rule. He purchased in 1785 a tract of land called the Georgia Estate, situated in Georgia, and removed thither with his family. His reputation as a soldier gave him prominence and he was elected governor in 1787 and during his term the constitution of the United States was ratified at Augusta, January 2, 1788. Being re-elected to that high office in 1793 he served until January 15, 1796. It was during his last year as governor that he secured the Yazoo land act as was enacted, conveying to four associations one hundred thousand dollars a tract of Georgia's western lands amounting to five million acres, lying between the Mississippi, Tennessee, Coosa, Alabama and Mobile rivers. A bill ratifying the treaty was passed in 1796 a new legislature under the influence of General James Jackson repudiated the Yazoo act and burned the records of it in the public square of Louisville, at that time the capital of Georgia. The act was ordered to be null and void and the money to be refunded to whomsoever it might belong. But the original purchasers had already sold tracts of land to many parties, who at once began to besiege the congress of the United States all her lands west of her present western boundary, embracing the greater part of Alabama and Mississippi. The United States took this problem off Georgia's hands and the

SALVATION ARMY LAYING ITS PLANS FOR WINTER WORK

Brigadier A. W. Crawford, of the southeastern division Salvation Army, and his corps of workers are making extensive plans for the fall and winter campaign of that organization in Atlanta and vicinity. Formal opening of this campaign will take place on Saturday, Sunday and Monday September 11, 12 and 13. Heretofore meetings will be held in the nature of rallies and business meetings. Brigadier Crawford, who has been at work in the northern part of the division, will return to Atlanta in time to take charge of the meetings and will be assisted by Captain and Mrs. J. W. Gordon, in charge of the Atlanta work, by Captain Nichols, by Ensign Ballester, of Griffin. All of the division and local Atlanta officers will also participate.

COMMERCE SCHOOL AT TECH TO START ON SEPTEMBER 8

The work of Georgia Tech's school of commerce will commence on September 8, when Professor W. S. Kell will be at room 401 Western building for the registration of the old and new students. Several of the old men will be taking examinations at the same time the period of examinations for the school is extending through Saturday September 11. Professor Kell states that the old men appear to be in fine fettle for the coming year's work and the indications are that there will be a strong class of new students from among the young business men of the city for the entering evening classes in commerce, accounts, finance and commercial law. A banquet will be held Tuesday night, September 7, at the Hotel Ansley at which time graduates of the school of commerce will be there to give talks to the old men and those who will be in the school this year. Boosters for the banquet state that the old heads are going to turn loose ideas which will prove a factor in the commercial life of Atlanta.

supreme court in 1801 declared the Yazoo sale valid. Thereupon the government paid all claims on account of it. GEORGE HANDLEY, son of Thomas Handley was born near Sheffield in Yorkshire England February 9, 1752. He emigrated to America in 1765, warmly espoused the cause of the colonies served in Georgia and South Carolina and distinguished himself by his energetic distinction in several engagements, and in 1788 was elected governor of Georgia. He died December 17, 1793.

KEELY'S Fashion calls for Plaids

We have them in new styles from both foreign and domestic looms. A costume, to be of the highest fashion, must have in it somewhere a touch of plaid. Especially desirable is the use of plaid silks in the skirts of serge dresses. Combinations of green and blue; red, green and blue; brown and blue; black and high colors, are shown here tomorrow in great variety.

Silk plaids

New silk plaids in charming variety of Roman plaids, Scotch plaids, fancy plaids and over-plaids. 36-in. Louisine plaids $1 --full yard wide, particularly adaptable for new combinations with solid woollens. 36-in. overplaids $2 --yard wide chiffon over-plaids, are the swellest creations of the season for dresses and waists. Awning striped taffetas $2 --40-in. wide, new combinations of black and blue, green and blue, purple and blue. Pekin stripe taffetas $2 --these popular styles are the scarcest item in the silk world and are adapted to waists and combinations.

Wool plaids

TO THE STONE THROWERS FROM THE GLASS HOUSES!

Now that the fury of the wholesale denunciation of the people of Georgia by outsiders who neither knew, nor sought to ascertain all of the incidental and direct facts bearing on the thing of which they have been so vehement in their denunciation of a whole state, has spent itself, The Constitution dismisses the incident with these few words:

We pass the significant fact that the most vicious of the criticisms against the state comes from sources whose standards, in the scale of civilization, are not a whit higher than that to which, upon gross misrepresentation, they allege Georgia to have fallen.

But that is somewhat aside from the question. We are not disposed to retort, "You're another." It is no part of our policy to measure up the shortcomings of others as palliation of our own.

The worst and the most regrettable phase of this whole affair is that the general denunciation of the state has been based upon misrepresentation and suppression of the facts, or upon half-truths—too often more dangerous than the deliberate falsehood which usually speaks for what it is.

The people of Georgia do not condone lynch law!

No newspaper has been more severe in its condemnation of it than The Constitution. Outrages against the law are no more condoned or approved in Georgia than in other states, north or south. It is an unfortunate fact, but we cannot escape it, that violence without the law will manifest itself at times, and it is no respecter of communities. It will always be so this side of the millennium.

Those who have been so glib in their arraignment of a whole people, and most violent in their criticism, have been careful not to give their readers, in their news reports, the benefit of an impartial presentation of all the incidents and developments of the situation.

Not for a moment do we pretend to say that all the facts would in any sense have justified mob law, but they would have let the world see the situation in its every bearing, and if it had not justified events it might at least have given the outside public the benefit of the Georgia viewpoint.

Another unfortunate factor has been the effort at outside interference with the processes of our courts. The principle of non-interference with court processes pending trial in any case has been ruthlessly violated by those who seized upon misstatement and misrepresentation to damn us at the very outset.

Looking backward, it is easy to see where a certain measure of popular resentment was created by this outside interference—a resentment calculated to arouse at certain points the thought of resentment where before it had not existed. Neither is this offered as in any sense condoning mob action, but it may be well enough to keep in view for future guidance.

If the people of the whole country had known all the story as Georgia knows it, while there would have been no less condemnation of lynch law, either here or elsewhere, there could not have been the same wholesale denunciation of an entire people based upon deliberate suppression, or upon a presentation of half-truths.

Now the vituperative wave has spent its force and time has begun its curative work, the language and ingenuity of vilification having been exhausted, it is best that the book be closed on the whole affair.

Georgia is all right! She is able to take care of herself—and will do so.

Those who are bent upon unjustly attacking a whole people cannot be reached by an appeal to reason, nor by a request for fair play.

Nor can they harm the state nor its good name.

Having shot their bows, and done their worst, they have now returned to their own glass houses, thanking God that they are so much better than anybody else, and yet leaving on their doorsteps records showing that they are neither a whit better—and perhaps no worse—than the people of Georgia.

To all the irreconcilables who still stand out in their vicious indictment of a whole people, the state of Georgia politely informs them that they may go to the devil!

THE GEORGIA CARNIVAL.

All Georgia, we believe, will join enthusiastically and wholeheartedly in the big carnival, representative of the state and her varied resources, which the business interests of Atlanta as represented in the heads of the city's many civic organizations propose to stage here this fall.

While the project is as yet only in its incipient stage, following organization and the announced determination to make it the best and most extensive display of this kind yet seen in the south, a tentative program has been prepared which is indicative of a genuine prosperity revival in this program educational and entertainment features have been so combined as to attract from both viewpoints, and the foundation has been laid for a week which, including also, as it will, the Southeastern fair and cattle show, promises more in substantial results to Georgia than any effort of this kind yet undertaken.

With Beaumont Davison as president and Edward Young Clark as general manager, all the energy and enthusiasm necessary for success will be thrown into the project. Mr. Clark won his spurs as secretary of the Brooks County Chamber of Commerce, where he engineered an animal industry show that brought to Quitman last summer, a town of 4,000 inhabitants, 20,000 people to see an industrial parade of 1,100 moving vehicles, stretching out for three miles.

Atlanta business men are confident that where this could be done in Quitman, a similar project could be staged in Atlanta on a multiplied scale. The proposed combination of events is one that must attract not only Georgians, but thousands of interested visitors from neighboring states. Backed by the Atlanta and Georgia Chambers of Commerce, it will be widely advertised as an opportunity to get under pleasing and gala auspices a birdseye view of Georgia and her many industries.

But there is more than this back of the enterprise. There is in it a desire and an opportunity to distract the minds of Georgians and their neighbors from the war and its effects and from other unfortunate conditions and events upon which they have dwelt already too long, and to set them to thinking of Georgia and its future—the prosperity and happiness that are already within their grasp, if they will but reach out and take them. Built upon this foundation, a fair and carnival will mean progress in a double sense, for it will bring together in concrete form the substance which will attract and induce united and harmonious effort.

Every business man in Atlanta, every citizen, should place himself heart and soul behind this project, and when this is done they can rest assured the active and substantial support of Georgians everywhere will be forthcoming.

OUR COTTON ABROAD.

An effort has been made in some quarters to justify the cotton contraband declaration by precedent based upon incidents during the civil war—but there is neither precedent nor legal authority for such declaration.

The present case is very different from the case of a ship laden with contraband merchandise destined to a blockaded port of a belligerent, but for purposes of deception consigned primarily to a neutral port.

In such a case, the belligerent power would clearly have the right to intercept the ship en route to the neutral port and confiscate the shipment, because the transaction really constitutes a direct shipment of contraband goods to a blockaded port of a belligerent, and the intervening consignment, being merely a badge of fraud, affords no protection.

The present unfortunate situation can be clearly grasped and digested by a separation and recognition of the two inherent principles involved.

First, no nation at war has ever successfully maintained the right to interfere with legitimate commerce between ports of neutral nations, and

Second, contraband articles cannot be confiscated when shipped from a neutral port to a neutral port unless en route to a port of a belligerent.

It seems clear that under the first principle, American shippers have the right to ship anything they may produce direct to neutral ports, provided the transaction is not intended as a cloak to cover a mere step toward an ultimate destination to a blockaded port of a belligerent.

This being undoubtedly true, then even if this country should be compelled to accept the allies' declaration of contraband, we should demand that the allies refrain from interference with all cotton shipments destined to neutral ports, except in cases where the allies possess reasonably sufficient evidence to justify the conclusion that the particular shipment which is the subject of seizure is really intended for a blockaded port of Germany, Austria or Turkey, being consigned intermediately to a neutral port, merely to cover the real destination.

In all cases where the allies confiscate cotton merely on suspicion and without previous proof of its ultimate destination to a hostile blockaded port, this government should insist not only upon prompt payment of the actual value of the cotton, with all incidental loss and expense, but should insist upon heavy penalties for the infraction of the international rights of American shippers.

Referring to the second principle above mentioned, it seems clear that the entire doctrine of contraband will be destroyed if we are to recognize the right of any nation at war to convert innocent articles of merchandise into contraband goods by an ipse dixit, or a mere arbitrary declaration to that effect, for once conceding that right as a principle of international law, every nation would instantly declare all merchandise contraband, without definition or distinction.

The doctrine of contraband is based upon the right of a belligerent nation to insist that no neutral nation shall supply the enemy with articles intended for or capable of use in maintaining war.

In time of peace, England specifically recognized this principle, and the London declaration specifically embraced cotton in the list of merchandise that should never be declared contraband in war.

The declaration of London has the moral effect of treaty obligation with the United States, and it is not a satisfactory answer to our government for Great Britain to say that conditions of warfare have subsequently changed and that the use of cotton by Germany in the manufacture of ammunition now justifies the inclusion of cotton in their contraband list.

The real reason actuating the allies in declaring cotton contraband is to be found in the principle that non-contraband articles shipped through neutral ports, even though intended for use by a belligerent, cannot be confiscated, and if seized and detained the owners must be compensated for the full value, whereas contraband goods, if proven to be intended for a belligerent, may be seized and confiscated without compensation.

England found that American shippers were freely sending cotton abroad, being willing to take the risk of seizure and detention, in which event the actual value of the shipment was paid to the shippers, and if the consignment succeeded in reaching a German destination it brought a fancy price. The same shippers would hesitate before taking the chance of earning the fancy price at the risk of a total loss from confiscation.

From the standpoint of the allies, this is wise and expedient, but our government should see to it that the rights of American shippers shall not be subservient to any rule of expediency adopted by belligerents, and not justified by the principles of international law.

So much for the principles involved. Now, what about carrying them into effect? No patriotic citizen of the United States desires to see this country involved in war with any of the belligerent nations.

American diplomacy has admirably succeeded in persuading Germany to abandon her well considered purpose to put an end to English commerce regardless of the rights of American travelers.

American diplomacy has succeeded in persuading England to relieve the practical embargo against certain imports to this country.

The same methods and factors which brought about these improved conditions should be vigorously applied to remove the handicap of contraband from the main American export crop—cotton—and to permanently protect its path across the seas to every neutral port where cotton is desired.

War purchases have depleted the gold supply of England and France, and now pounds sterling are selling in New York at the lowest levels on record.

This condition cannot continue indefinitely, and in order to maintain the credit of the allies it is essential that credit arrangements must be immediately effected in this country.

This condition affords the fulcrum upon which the entire situation can be turned. President Wilson has already succeeded so well in dealing with the difficult situation growing out of our foreign complications incident to the war that he may be depended upon to get the best results possible in adjusting our difficulties with Great Britain on this all important subject.

Take your pick of Mexican "situations" That country has them to burn.

The "reconstructed man" of Europe is now prepared to go down to history on crutches.

Prosperity signs may soon be so numerous the Grouchtown citizen will complain that they are confusing.

Carranza might get on good reasoning ground if we'd shut off the supply of typewriting machines.

The credit seeking kings have concluded that it really adds to their dignity to answer the ring of the great American dollar.

"Wilson works wonders"—that's the alternative line from Great Britain. And we are just in the morning of the wonderful times!

HOT SHOTS FROM SAM SMALL ON ATTACKS ON GEORGIA

By Sam W. Small.

No one can rightly put the state of Georgia to the defense of her civilization and her justice. She is as fully competent to vindicate her motto, "Justice, Wisdom and Moderation," as any other state of the union is to uphold and vindicate its own moral integrity and civic probity.

Her laws are no more irrefragable than those of other states, and no less her people are no more lawless at heart, or defiant of humanity and equity than those of any other state with which she is associated on equal footing in the union that she herself helped to form.

Her Present Impachment.

Just now because of a recent deplorable event that incident has been seized upon as the basis for a general impachment of the "civilization of our state by certain pressmen and publicists of other sections of the nation Georgia is being pilloried before public opinion and pointed at as an example of "an outlaw state in which human life is valued at the minimum, social order is upon a barbaric plane and justice is in the keeping of the mob that respects neither the law of God or man."

While these omnibus charges growing out of ignorance and ancient prejudices, tend to arouse our hottest indignation and put the spur to our spirit of reclamation, it is better now and will be far better for our future justification before the world, to stand patiently and courageously to the facts of our case and ignore, as spasmodic and slanderous the revilings based upon purchased misrepresentation promoted sentimentality and misdirected mercy. The true character of Georgia will be found steel proof against all of them.

No Defense of Mobs.

No more than any other sane and Christian Georgian do I counsel approve or excuse mob rule and lynch law. After a long experience with Georgia civil administration and the course of justice within the state I am firmly convinced that nowhere at any time or for any cause does the government of the commonwealth need the voluntary and extraordinary assistance of the mob.

Courts may be slow of movement, practice in them on the criminal side may be characterized by legal technicalities and dilatory tricks, and they may irritate the public temper, but they are defects that the people can, if they will, easily and quickly remedy at the polls and in the halls of legislation. They never can rightly justify the setting aside of the established machinery of the courts and the sovereign right of the state by her authorities to execute her laws in all their justice and integrity.

The Psychology of the Mob.

We must remember that the word "civilization is a flexible and comparative term. No nation is its standard and no section of this nation can claim to be its true and perfect exemplar. Civilization is the expression of the conscience of a people working through its religious, civic and material forces. It varies in forms and practices from age to age from land to land as you journey with the sun. It is well therefore for those who assume the robes of criticism and condemnation to found their judgments upon the known facts of history of evolution and of the spirit that binds men together as a tribe, a community or a state.

And history records that that spirit, however high of purpose and humane affords, is not proof anywhere at all times to such and violent reversions—to the revival of elemental passions and the uncoded acts of self government. The psychology of the mob is Adamic and automatic.

The Record of Georgia.

The long and honorable record of Georgia as an American state is comparable with that of any other state of the union. As a colony she was founded in mercy and morality with the historic motto "Non Sibi sed Alia"—not for ourselves, but for others. She was the only one of the original colonies and states to deny herself traffic in slaves and in rum. She was the first to establish in this western world a school-home for orphans and the first real Sunday school on this hemisphere. She was in the first rank with those who rejected British rule and the first to tear down a statue of the king. She was the first to establish a definite state university for the higher learning. She was the first to probe and punish public corruption in the Yacoo frauds. She contributed statesmen of the highest order to the early councils of the new republic and has not ceased since to be eminent in the legislation of the nation.

She founded the first American college for women. She built the first state owned railroad on the continent and owns it yet, and sent the first steamship from her port that crossed the Atlantic ocean. She pioneered the cotton manufacturing industry and on her soil was invented the gin that made it the paramount staple product of this nation today. One of her sons discovered anesthesia, by which the pains and surgical miseries of countless millions have been avoided and ameliorated throughout the civilized world. She has always been far ahead of the times in the paramount staple product of this nation today.

One of her sons discovered anesthesia, by which the pains and surgical miseries of countless millions have been avoided and ameliorated throughout the civilized world. She has always been far ahead of the times in the paramount staple product of this nation today. One of her sons discovered anesthesia, by which the pains and surgical miseries of countless millions have been avoided and ameliorated throughout the civilized world. She has always been far ahead of the times in the paramount staple product of this nation today.

She Stands Untrifled.

Now, confronting an assault by a small and unknown clan of her own citizens upon the due course of her justice she also confronts a flood of falsehoods, slander and insinuation against her people and her state and founded upon absolute ignorance of essential truths that when known at once silence the detractor.

Those facts which give the lie absolute to these slanders of Georgia cannot be brought now to the minds of the nation that have so long and so fully absorbed the poison of misrepresentation. But knowing them ourselves we stand unafraid of public opinion until it shall recover sanity.

What We May Suffer.

While we are trusting to the desire and diligence of our authorities to discover in due time the actors in recent events and to bring them to open judgment by their fellow citizens, we must suffer under whatever avoidance of Georgia may be practiced by the misinformed and whatever loss of sympathy the unreasoning may withhold. In good time the people of America at large seeing our patience, realizing our good faith and being convinced by the steady integrity of our government and social science, will cast aside these present frenzied misjudgments and yield to Georgia the justice that is now submerged under a cloudburst of prejudice, malice and self-righteous Phylloxera.

Until then we must say to our furious detractors in the words of the Righteous One "Let him that is without sin cast the first stone."

Who Are Our Detractors.

We cannot forget that the first teachers of mob law in America were the pluperfect saints who dated from Plymouth Rock, that religiously we must suffer under whatever avoidance of Georgia may be practiced by the misinformed and whatever loss of sympathy the unreasoning may withhold.

In good time the people of America at large seeing our patience, realizing our good faith and being convinced by the steady integrity of our government and social science, will cast aside these present frenzied misjudgments and yield to Georgia the justice that is now submerged under a cloudburst of prejudice, malice and self-righteous Phylloxera.

Worse Than All That.

Take down your histories and read the records of Philadelphia—the City of Brotherly Love and home of the "North American" newspaper that vilified Georgia and its bloody annals of mobocracy and anarchy. read of Wilmington in Delaware and its stake to which a negro was chained and burned only a few years ago, travel a few miles northwest to Coatesville, Pa. and find another case of the same fiery murder in the name of law and courts, go on to Urbana, Ohio and see a mob take a negro from a company of state militia and hang him at the courthouse door and then spot the map at Washington courthouses, Ironton and Springfield like anarchistic acts stop off at Danville, Springfield, Calver and Belle Ville in Illinois and witness like orgies of bloody mob rule, run up to Chicago and see a gamblers' tong war with dynamite bombs defying all police discovery and escaping punishment by any court and jury. Oh the list is long, bloody and black with horrors but Dr. Lyman Abbott, of The Outlook never denounced Pennsylvania, Ohio and Illinois as "an outlaw state. Why then, does he

"The King's at Prayer"

By FRANK L. STANTON.

I. FLUTTERING wings in the morning there Over a valley of world-despair? Holy messengers from on high Cleaving the gloom of the battle-sky? What spirits wait on kingly state To wait a message to heaven's gate Of a weeping world, left desolate? The blight is bloom, and dark is fair.— "The king's at prayer!"

II. PRAYETH the king for the fallen ones,— Mothers that mourn o'er war-slain sons? God cannot hear him for the guns! For the homes, grief-hidden and far away From graves that gloom in the morning gray? Whether it be for these—for all, To answerless earth his accents fall? Where red his tide of battle runs— God cannot hear him for the guns! Silence the thunder of earth's despair — "The king's at prayer!"

III. BUT up from the depths and pure from the sod The prayers of millions rise to God, The pleadings of a stricken land To stay the sword in the war king's hand, To give the Peace of the Kingdom place, Bowed in ashes before God's face, And these be the prayers the high God hears Sweet as the music of singing spheres, And the stricken shall rise before God's eyes From a war made world of tears and sighs While judgment falls in the darkness there On the kings at prayer!

reserve that infamous epithet for Georgia, in which he has been received heretofore with honor and accepted as a prophet? It is all emetic, sickening and disgusting to the stomach of an honest mind!

Also to the Record: I find on examining some recent records from the State prison bureau that Georgia can well afford to stand up, in a line with all her sister states and be examined upon her virtues as to her respect for law, life and property and be unashamed before any of her judges. I have only time and space here to quote the figures of a recent year's record of commitments to prisons in several states, per 100,000 of population in each of them. Note the showing: Of "crimes against public policy" the ratio of commitments to prison terms were in that year, as follows: Georgia, 23 per 100,000 population; New York, 29; Massachusetts, 37; Pennsylvania, 132. Of "crimes against property" Georgia's ratio was 18.5; New York's 67; Massachusetts 71; Pennsylvania 49. Of "crimes against the person" Georgia's ratio was 14.3; New York's 18.9; Massachusetts, 21.6; Pennsylvania's, 23.3. Now, what do you think of these figures? They represent the comparative "law and order" in the states named. Georgia certainly Georgia has no cause to blush for her status in that company. And right there I think for the present, this commentary can be justifiably ended.

The Holland Letter

A small block of the shares of the Winchester Arms company of New Haven, Conn., secured a quotation as reported a few days ago of approximately $2,000. Another quotation reported a day later showed a considerable falling off, but there were many surmises that it was not so likely that a quotation may be reported within the fall of an offering of at least $10,000 a share for this stock. The incident reflects not only the understanding that this corporation has received and is to execute orders for the stock, but it also indicates that there may be hundreds of millions and the profits upon which would be proportionately large, but also reflects the excitement and interest which have been maintained throughout New England on account of the reports of very heavy war orders.

Whoever will be able to make much money by buying the Winchester Arms company stock for very little of it can be secured. In accordance with the original plan of Governor Winchester—he was lieutenant-governor of Connecticut when Massachusetts was still a state, and it is likely this corporation has always been very closely directed and operated organization in the United States. Those who are fortunate enough to possess stock—and these are for the most part members of the family—cannot be tempted by any conceivably offering of money to part with it. If any is sold it will represent no more than a small and occasional holding.

Nevertheless this reported offering of $2,000 a share for a stock that is likely to go on record as one of the largest offerings ever made for shares of an industrial corporation's stock. It is commonly reported in the financial district that the highest quotation for the stock of any American industrial corporation was that of $400 a share for stock in a corporation which manufactured beer. But when it was borne in mind that the capital stock of this corporation is, comparatively speaking very small, white, on the other hand, its business and its growth, it is not surprising that such a good understanding of the reasons why so great a quotation for a share of the stock of this corporation was recorded.

Most Valuable Stock. In the financial district it is said that probably the most valuable, market value, of the shares of any industrial corporation, is that of the stock of the Northern Pacific Corporation of Providence, R. I. whose output is tools. There are reports that as much as $10,000 a share has been offered for the stock of this corporation, but there is no likelihood that while the present generation is living there will be a market for the stock of this corporation. It is likely that the greater part of this represented the appreciation of Northern Pacific stock which he was able to buy shortly after he retired from the post of secretary of war in Cleveland. He secured a considerable block of the stock at a time when the quotations for it were very low. His fortune was accumulated in much the same way as that of E. H. Harriman who bought Union Pacific stock when the former was under the great railroad company were very low and who retained enormous advances upon the stock after he perfected the system. Lamont would not sell his Northern Pacific stock although had he done so his fortune would probably have been doubled. This is the opinion of a man of great faith toward James J. Hill to whom he owed his financial prosperity.

Comparison Unfair. A comparison, however between quotations for railroad securities which were made at the time great corners or attempted corners were under way cannot be fairly made with the quotations for industrial securities. Sometimes very close corporations which are known to have gained great successes have had the market value fixed upon the stock of the corporations by reason of enforced sales and actions for the purpose of administering on the part of the great industries of the United States, which is a corporation almost as closely managed as the Winchester has only learned the market value of its stock through enforced sales and actions to close out estates. One of these sales, the one of the stock of the Winchester, was made at a price of about $600. But it would be useless for one to offer $600 to the present owners of this stock, since the amount would be far from sufficient to tempt the owner to dispose of the stock.

There has been two banks in New York city whose stock commanded sometimes an excess of $200 a share. That, however, was explained by the fact that the capital of these two banks was very small in one case $200,000 and in another $100,000. No longer is there a quotation of that kind for the stock of the bank whose capital was formerly $300,000, because that capital has been largely increased. There is likely to be some delusion respecting quotations reaching high up into the thousands for stock, for it will probably be discovered that in most cases the capital is very small. The capital of the Winchester company in part explains why New England people were according to quotations, ready to pay as much as $3,000 a share for the stock of this corporation. HOLLAND.

Who Feeds the World?

(From Farm and Fireside.) Wheat is not undisputed king nor cotton either. The egg crop last year was worth about $700,000,000. The bulk of the poultry is produced mainly by the work of women in the cities. The supply from the specialized poultry farms is small compared to that from the farms where women care for the fowls and children gather the eggs. The hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that does its full share in feeding the world.

Dixie Highway in Georgia

An organization of fifty women has been perfected at Guyton, Ga., to assist in the Dixie highway movement in Effingham county.

In every county between Chattanooga and Atlanta activities in the construction of the highway are in evidence. It is the opinion of Mr. Grafton, chief engineer of the Dixie Highway association, that by November 1 the routes, both via Rome and Dalton, will be in good shape.

Good Roads day is being celebrated in many counties to boost the highway movement.

Indiana has a "Dixie Highway Girl," and when the club women from Michigan to Florida do the beautifying work along the roadways, there will be more girl sponsors.

Across the continent from the Atlantic to the Pacific the Lincoln highway is being constructed, and from the west through the central south to Miami, Fla., the Dixie highway is being projected.

Now, The Manufacturers' Record discusses the need of another great highway—this to be known as the Lee and Jackson highway—passing from Washington, the capital of the nation, through the capitals of many states which formed the confederacy.

Work that is being done will stimulate an interest in highways between many important points throughout the country. Bringing good roads into communities is already bearing fruit. Dalton has raised $30,000 of a fund to build a new hotel in the city.

Georgia and Florida federations of women's clubs have taken up the work of planting along the highway fruit and shade trees expressive of the hospitality of their states for the travelers.

In some instances the clubs are working with the aid of the school children and Boy Scouts. One effective plan being carried out by a woman's club is to secure the active co-operation of the various companies of Boy Scouts, giving each company a section of the highway to beautify by carrying away rubbish, cutting down weeds and planting trees.

Work Club Women Should Do To Improve Dixie Highway

(Complying with the request of Mrs. Fitzpatrick, the article, "The Club Work for the Dixie Highway," appearing in this issue was prepared by Mrs. Julia Lester Dillon, Augusta, landscape architect. The article is practical and contains helpful suggestions along the line of conservation and beautification and education.

The first work of the club women, not only of Georgia, but all along the Dixie highway, from Chicago to Miami, and all its branches inclusive, must be the conservation and preservation of the natural growths, trees, shrubs, wild flowers and grasses that at present are along the highway.

Judge S. B. Adams, of Savannah, Defends Ex-Governor Slaton

Savannah, Ga., September 2, 1915.—Editor Constitution: I must enter my earnest protest against the wave of vilification that has swept over Georgia, and still survives, against Governor John Brown Slaton.

Discretion of Trial Judge

As there was no eyewitness to the tragedy involved in the trial judge had the discretion to make the punishment of life imprisonment. Under his view of the case, he ought to have done this.

Decided Conscientiously

I do not, however, propose to go into the details of the trial, or its innocence. It is really not germane to the purpose of this communication. I think that the law, as given to the jury, was fair and equitable.

Those Who Urged Commutation

These who urged commutation, and with approbrium for what he did, then every man who urged, or requested, that the governor should grant clemency to Slaton, are in this predicament.

Should Have Objected Sooner

The solicitor general of the Atlanta circuit, Governor Brown and others appeared at the hearing before Governor Slaton for the purpose of urging that clemency be extended to Frank. It was thought that Governor Slaton was, for any reason, disqualifying.

MRS. FRANK PEARSON TO SING AT ALPHA

Marie Cahill in "Judy, Forget," a Scream From First to Last.

Mrs. Frank Pearson, Atlanta's most popular singer, has been engaged by Manager Powell as an extra attraction at his cozy little theater on Whitehall street, "The Alpha."

The program for the week embraces the usual galaxy of Universal stars in photo-plays of interest. Monday, the tenth episode of "The Broken Coin," entitled "Cornered," will be presented with Grace Cunard and Francis Ford in more thrilling scenes than any picture to be shown during the week without a doubt "Judy, Forget," with the celebrated Marie Cahill starring. It is in five acts and is a veritable scream from first to last.

Judy was a comic opera queen. She had all the joys of Kennebunkport, Maine, to Coronado Beach, Cal., lying awake nights figuring how much money they could spend on her. One day breaking the bank, Judy spent her life dodging the boys and usually came out over the stage with her hair up to avoid the local spendthrifts who gathered about the stage entrance to strew flowers before her. Judy, however, said stage door to her limousine. Oh, she was a cuckoo, was Judy.

HOBART BOSWORTH IN FEATURE AT SAVOY

"Little Brother of the Rich" Shows Famous Star at His Best.

The big feature at the Savoy theater this week will be "A Little Brother of the Rich," which will be presented Tuesday. The principal part is played by Hobart Bosworth, supported by Jane Novak and Hobart Henley.

Paul's intimacy leads to Mrs. Evers' divorce. Later Paul and the Everses are married. Sylvia meanwhile goes on the stage and meets Henry Leamington, a talented but hard-drinking actor. Leamington "makes" her and treats her like a daughter. Paul returns his friendship with Sylvia and a famous actress, and arouses Leamington's jealousy. Paul's wife is killed in an automobile accident.

AT THE VICTORIA.

Mary Pickford This Week in Two Features.

For the coming week the Victoria has arranged four features in addition to a Labor day program for Monday. On Tuesday one of the Famous Players' productions has been secured. Mary Pickford, the celebrated actress, will be shown in a tragic epic, "Hearts Adrift."

Another strange thing about Judy was the fact that she suffered from a nervous affliction, which was a family trait—she could not keep from winking every time she smiled. Men who noticed this were sure to become her admirers, but being rather sensitive about it, she promptly squelched all who attempted to approach her. It just couldn't be helped—that wink of hers—for her mother had done so, and her grandmother, and her mother even before that. So that night Judy winked at Freddy, who was the particular bold young man who was to become her fiance.

Behind the Screens WITH BRITT CRAIG

"Why poke fun at the pictures?" a lassie writes. "You are way behind the times. The screen is now ranked with the stage and literature. You make yourself ridiculous."

But, impulsive madam, or miss, or whatever you be (you neglected to sign your name), may we reply in protest that as long as the phantom drama encourages slap-stick comedy, sloppy out-reckers, sexual pyrotechnics and perturbed heroes, it will not be taken any too seriously.

Further literature has its Nick Carters and Deadwood Dicks; its stage its moonlight maidens and frolicsome romances, and Shakespeare has his critics. The moving picture industry is still young.

"The Silent Voice."

Enhances the value of a conjugal prospect.

"The House With Nobody in It."
—Gaugmont feature.
Nobody home, so to speak.

T. Bara Returns.
Along with Gas House Mike, who took up Sparagat when Chick DeWore went out of office, and "Mildred" Mancini, who abandoned silk shirts because his wife needed the money to play fan-tan, Theda Bara, the well-known vampire, has reformed, and in the next Fox feature will portray "sweet girl" characters.

"The Two Orphans" will be the vehicle in which the wicked Miss Bara discards the blushing, blushing, blushing siren and enticing embrace of the temptress to don the frock and bonnet of the coy young country maid, who "ain't never went out much."

We are as amused as we are disappointed, imagining the erstwhile satanic sorceress blushing beneath the willful, wanton advances of a bashful yokel. How will the thousands of Bara's enjoy it when the ex-vampire repulses a cocktail, and permits her hero to go casually no further than the back of her hand?

"Theda Bara a nice girl? Think of it! Film progress! Progress, your step-brother-in-law! That's a spurt!"

"Kidding a Blonde."
Town Trade Topics.
His smooth and glistening dome never indicated the fact, and his portly figure implied that he was a commercial tourist, rather than artist, but temperament flows in the veins of H. Winburn, ex-actor at the Vaudeville, and as versatile a performer as ever appeared the soul of Euterpe from the bottom of the stage.

It is with deep regret that we see him depart from metropolitan Whitehall for the quietude of the country, or it is rumored he has strayed. Another landmark gone from the old boy's theatrical domain.

It used to be worth all of a measly nickel to drop into the Vaudeville and find the going of footers, the mood of the temperamental Howard. If the pipes of the organ were rumbling madly with waltzes, we under the body, we felt fraternally constrained to urge Howard to come out while we bought a drink. He might be temporarily relieved. But if the depths of his piano issued a merry ring of ragtime, dispersed with under-Winburnesque innovations, we understood it was a different story, and tread now in the Howard by the drinks. But what did Howard do to deserve Howard? (Later, Underwood Howard isn't going to leave after all. Good!)

"The fearless frontierswoman sacrifices herself to save the life of the man she loves, and, she is happy again after which the two find happiness as man and wife."

At the Alpha This Week

MRS. FRANK PEARSON, Popular Atlanta Singer.

Thousands of Atlanta people will be delighted to learn that Mrs. Frank Pearson, one of the city's sweetest singers, has accepted an engagement to sing daily during the next week at the Alpha theater, on Whitehall street. Whenever Mrs. Pearson is announced on a musical program in Atlanta there are hundreds of good music lovers who miss no opportunity to hear her. An evening of music when Mrs. Pearson gave a series of old-time melodies last spring was considered one of the most delightful affairs of the kind this year. For the ensuing week this gifted singer has selected for each day some of the latest and most popular airs from the opera that is now taking New York. Several numbers from light opera will be sung Monday, which is Labor day, and when it is expected a record day will be registered at the theater.

Judging from her past musical career her appearance at the Alpha is certain to attract many new patrons, aside from its usual large patronage.

William (Bill) Sharpe, known far and near as a theatrical man par excellence, is with us again, having acquired the management of the Savoy theater.

There is perhaps no other man better or more generally known in Atlanta than this same old boy. In the past he has been associated with many theatrical enterprises in and around Atlanta, and the day of the old Lyceum theater on Edgewood avenue he was the successful manager, who first brought vaudeville to Atlanta, also one of its first stock companies. We all remember the time when "Ponce de Leon park" was opened as an amusement resort. Bill Sharpe was the man who, in the management of the Savoy we can look for him to repeat his successes of the past, and friends and acquaintances without number are offering congratulations.

After being in charge of the management of the Savoy theater for the past three years, J. F. Jackson has tendered his resignation and will take a well-earned rest. The management of a busy theater like the Savoy is a strenuous job, and as Mr. Jackson has been constantly on the job during his association with the Savoy, he certainly has the vacation coming to him.

Upon his return to the city we sincerely hope that he will decide to again enter business in Atlanta, and that it will be in the amusement line, a line to which he is so well adapted.

AT ALAMO NO. 2. Dorothy Bernard Well Cast in "District Attorney."

Every day the coming week good pictures have been provided at Alamo No. 2. Monday Henry Walthall, Edna Mayo and Bryant Washburn will be seen in a three-act Essanay comedy drama, "The Woman Hater." Tuesday, Dorothy Bernard and George Soule Spencer appear in a five-act V. L. S. E. release, "The District Attorney." Wednesday Mrs. Olga Petrova in the five-act Alco release, "The Tigress." Thursday, Nancy O'Neill in a five-act Fox feature, "Princess Romasoff," based on Sardou's deathless "Fedora." Friday, repeated by request, "Graustark," with Francis Bushman and Beverly Bayne. This picture has never failed to pack houses to capacity whenever it has been shown in Atlanta, as it shows Mr. Bushman at his very best.

Essanay's three-act photo-play, "The Woman Hater," is one of the most exciting comedy dramas ever produced. It was written by H. C. Chatfield-Taylor, the well-known Chicago dramatist and Washington society leader and literature, author of "The Crimson Wing" and a score of other equally famous works of fiction.

The cast is one of unusual strength, including Henry B. Walthall, Edna Mayo and Bryant Washburn. While the photo-play is a comedy drama, yet it calls for the portrayal of all deeper emotions of hatred, fear and love, for which Mr. Walthall is famous.

The settings are exceptionally good and Charles J. Brannan has distilled an artistry in the production of the piece that cannot be excelled.

Mr. Walthall plays the part of the woman hater. This picture is on Monday's bill. "The District Attorney," from the famous play of the same name by Charles Klein and Harrison Grey Lake, is the attraction at Alamo No. 2 Tuesday. The film is in five reels.

"The District Attorney" is a gripping play of American political life. It lends itself especially to motion picture production, because of its plenty of action and exceptionally clever acting. A notably good company of Lubin stars was chosen to portray this impelling photo-play, among which are George Soule Spencer in the title role; Dorothy Bernard as Helen Knipf, H. Van Buren as James H. Gray, and Charles Brandt as the grafting contractor. And as the play fairly teems with tense incidents, the picture is the most of its splendid opportunities.

In adapting "The District Attorney" for the screen, the picture-makers of the Lubin company emphasize the new idea in photo-play tendency—that of selecting a play of action and excitement rather than a play of sentiment. There have been numberless photo-plays of political life, but in bringing this impelling photo-play, among which are George Soule Spencer in the title role; Dorothy Bernard as Helen Knipf, H. Van Buren as James H. Gray, and Charles Brandt as the grafting contractor. And as the play fairly teems with tense incidents, the picture is the most of its splendid opportunities.

Lillian Lorraine. Lillian Lorraine, who is to star in the forthcoming Pathe-Balboa serial, "Neal of the Navy," was born in San Francisco, Cal., in 1892. Like a number of others of the popular stage favorites of the day she made her debut before the footlights in 1912. Her first success was in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," when she was only 4 years old. Subsequently she took a long vacation from the stage at the old Central theater while attending the public schools. At the age of 12 she left San Francisco for New York, just three months before the big earthquake. She obtained a certain amount of fame under the name of Richard Golden almost immediately on her arrival. Her next engagement was with Eddie Foy in "The Orchid," half time in chorus and half doing a small part. Because of her striking personality she was engaged by Foy to play the chorus and gave her a sinking. The impression she made resulted in her being given another opportunity in "The Great Way," with Blanche Ring and Jeff De Angeles. Her first real chance came when she was engaged by Florence Ziegfeld to appear in support of Anna Held in "Miss Innocence." The next year she was featured in "The Girl" and was featured in the "1908 Follies" with Nora Bayes and Jack Norworth. She remained with the "Follies" for the next three years, being started in the "Follies of 1912" when Nora Bayes dropped out.

Andrews, T. P. A. Press Chairman, Offers Suggestions Anent Cotton

Editor Firing Line: Since my letter to you under date of July 24 the British government and her allies as everybody knows have declared cotton absolute contraband of war which we are sold by force in position to know is an unconditional violation of the positive agreement by the nations of the world. They undertake to excuse this conduct on their part upon the theory that the emergency of the case make this action a positive necessity.

We are frank enough to admit that this will unquestionably be of material value to the allied powers in the outcome of this war as it is a reasonable presumption that if cotton as it is understood to be is a necessary ingredient in the manufacture of high explosive and Germany's supply of cotton gives out it will be seen at a glance that Germany's army will be more or less at the mercy of their enemies for the lack of the means to protect themselves.

Nevertheless, we must contend that regardless of how desperate the needs of Great Britain and her allies may be in the prosecution of this war they have no legal right, under international agreement to force a great loss upon this government and especially the south, in order that they may profit by such action. A man might as well justify the act of cracking the safe of any bank or business house upon the ground that his needs were desperate.

However I do not believe that it would benefit this government to press its claims to the point where it would ultimately mean a declaration of war between this government and the allies. It is, however, a sacred obligation upon this government to protect the lives and the property of its citizens and under existing circumstances I believe this government should immediately undertake to protect its own interest and that of its citizens by fixing the price on all export cotton at not less than 12 cents and not higher than 15 cents and in this way force the allies to carry the loss that would otherwise fall upon the cotton producers.

of the south upon those who have closed the markets of the balance of the world against the staple crop of the south upon which all of its commercial operations are based. This could not, and would not, work any hardship upon any section of the United States or upon any other commodity produced in the United States, but could be the most pleasant and certainly the most pleasant manner this government could use to discharge the obligations it owes to its people in the protection of property.

The further fact that cotton being the only staple crop produced in this country that has been declared contraband of war we believe that such action would not only be the means of protecting the cotton producers, but its effect would reach every section of the United States and would at once establish a confidence that would result in immeasurable prosperity throughout all sections. This would be equal to valorization of cotton, which certainly would be nothing less than the duty of the government without any criticism from official sections on the charge of discrimination. It is true that in doing so, limitations could and would be made upon the production in future years during the life of such a law. We believe therefore that President Wilson is fully justified and ought to call an extra session of congress to handle this matter alone, without a moment's delay. We do not believe that this could be classified as a visionary scheme entirely beyond the scope of adjustment because of the unprecedented condition forced upon this government in violation of international law.

If I am right in my conception of this great question, even in a crude way the press of the country, assisted by the statesmen can easily work out a feasible plan by which these results can be obtained.

There is absolutely nothing under the sun to which we are entitled and could be so easily accomplished that would work such magic in the life and vitality of the whole country, and the south in particular and I hope that these suggestions may lead to the deliverance of our people in a speedy and satisfactory manner.

Yours very truly

Reap As You Sow

"He that plants thorns must never expect to gather roses"—so wrote a Brahmin philosopher centuries ago.

This store expects to reap as it sows. If we plant seeds of mistrust and deceit, then the harvest cannot be fruitful of good, because weeds are useless things—they neither nourish nor sustain, and all labor is wasted in gathering them.

Our efforts in all we say and do are directed toward achieving greater trust between the public and ourselves. We strive always to promise only what we can carry out.

We make every announcement in simple language impossible to misconstrue, and the values represented, the merchandise offered, the prices quoted are real, well weighed and accurate.

To this do we attribute the feeling of full confidence existing between this store and its patrons—a feeling that grows daily.

In the Social Whirl

By Isma Dooly.

The tang in the air and the exhilaration it has brought is refreshing the stay-at-homes, and making those who have been away glad they are home. A cup of tea at 5 o'clock has been a popular mode of entertainment at the country clubs in the afternoon, and after a long motor ride the "sweater" is proving the most useful of garments, this being the real "sweater" season in this section of the world. To meet the need of these garments are coming in bright colors and dressy modes, and some are trimmed in fur. The sport hats have a fall touch to them, and are actually being made, some of them, of black velvet and figured velvet in the fall shades.

Miss Catherine Dickey wears a blue sweater, the color of her eyes, which, with her blonde hair and simple white frock, make of her a perfect picture. Mrs. Elric Atkinson wears most becomingly a dark toned purple sweater. Mrs. Robert J. Lowry has a pure white sweater of dressy fashion, which she wears with a skirt of voile in pompadour design.

Miss Lucile Kibrt wears becomingly a yellow sweater with a frock almost the same color. Mrs. John E. Murphy wears with a pink sweater a skirt the same color in the new Kaiser silk. In rose color many sweaters are to be worn, and there are many smart ones to be seen not only in the softer pastel colors and stripes, but in the weave of two tones—those of yellow and blue, blue and rose and black and white.

A GLIMPSE AT THE HATS.

The fall hats have attracted all woman-kind this week, and their conservative fashion, adaptability and modified color assure their favor. Velvet is the material most to be seen, and for the greater hats there is a fullness of both crown and brim, and the tendency is softness rather than the stiff effects which have hitherto been popular.

The "artist" hat is one of the most admired. It is of black velvet, and has the air of those seen in Rembrandt pictures. The brim is soft, fitting closely to one side. The only trimming is a cluster of small roses on each side of the hat near the ear. In black velvet mother chic model has its soft brim turned up in the back. There is tendency of the brim to droop in the front, and the only ornament is a butterfly of plume in the back.

In two shades of beige is a smart hat which could be as well worn with a black suit as one of its own color. It is made of silk and velvet, and the trimming is ostrich tips in the two colors. The tete de negre in even a darker shade than that worn last year is stylish, and is worn as a hat with black bits or crown its own color. In velvet it is seen either in toque shape or one of the new hat shapes medium in size. Fur is used on a trimming, and will be especially smart trimming velvet hats in dark green, the grape shade or black; one illustrating this fashion seen this week is of dark green velvet with fur trimming.

The "Puritan" sailor is scarcely well named, for it is a saucy high crowned looking affair which makes a woman look anything but like a Puritan. It makes her look just typical of the century's smartest dame. The Puritan sailor has scarcely any brim at all, but the crown is trimmed with ribbons sometimes caught with shiny buckles. And with it sometimes is worn a black veil, either of lace or heavy net. It is the fad of the moment, the Puritan sailor. Another fad—and pretty and Frenchy it is—is the Joffre hat, of velvet soft in crown, and turned straight up on both sides. Only a little plumeage trims it on both sides, but little trimming distinguishing the hats of the season. There are smaller sailors of all kinds, some with rolling brims, others with straight ones, and purple is going to be one of the most favored of the fall colors, especially in toques and walking hats.

Dressy neckpieces in fur, muffs and cuffs, even to match the hats, will be made to order by the up-to-date millinery establishments, and the artificial flower still finds itself on Madame's

THE COURTEOUS FRENCH.

Even in the great grief that hangs over them in the tragedy of the war, the constant demand made upon them to relieve the suffering at their door, the women of France find the time and the spirit to be courteous. Surely courtesy and the expression of the most delicate etiquettes, at such trying times, becomes a deep sentiment—a virtue.

Certified Holstein Cow's Milk for Family Use
Probably you have heard that Holstein Milk is the only cow's milk physicians consider suitable for infant feeding. But do you realize it is the best milk for every member of your family?
Holstein milk is the most nutritious of all milk because it is more digestible than ordinary milk. That's reason enough for everyone to prefer it for family use.
In Holstein milk the moderate amount of butterfat is in the form of minute globules less than half the size of those in ordinary milk. These small globules yield readily to the action of the digestive juices and are easily absorbed, while the fat globules in ordinary milk form large, tough curds that resist digestion.
Holsteins are the best breed of cattle. Their milk has the richest vitamin quality that children and the aged especially need. Use it fresh and there will be less sickness in your home.
Visit to our farm will give you confidence in our methods of handling milk.—Certified by Fulton County Medical Association, U. S. P. 97, 079.

Detroit Electric
$1975 to $2275
—always available
That's one of the big advantages of an enclosed car like the Detroit Electric. In rain or shine, cold weather or warm, you can enjoy its use.
It has no cylinder to freeze—no radiator to chill—in winter. It is always clean and free from fumes and odors common to gas cars. Because of the simplicity of its mechanism and the high quality of its construction it is not being constantly laid out for repairs as in the case with some gas cars. Every member of the family can drive it safely and so you get far more use from the modern Detroit Electric than you do from a car that only the head of the family or a trained chauffeur can operate. It "picks up" more quickly than any gas car and is much easier to drive in congested traffic. A demonstration will prove mighty enlightening. Just phone a convenient time.

Newport Rediscovered Itself

Miss Barbara Rutherford, Francis B. Roche and Miss Harriet Post.

With the Closing of the Resort's Most Amazingly Brilliant Season, Six Women Stand Out as Leaders in America's Ultra Exclusive Social Set.

IT'S just about over, it is, the most amazingly brilliant season Newport has had. Newport hasn't been quite able to realize exactly what has happened. Newport is stunned. She is scarcely willing to credit her own eyes and ears—and pocketbook.

Newport, say a decade ago, used to be everything a millionaires with desires to be brilliant in a social way could wish. Everybody who was a body used to be there the summer through. Then came a barren span of years when everybody who was a body got the European fever. Newport glowed with a fitful flame while the millionairesses sought their social triumphs in summer, long campaigns in Europe.

But this Newport season of the year of the great war, 1915, was a Newport season that not only outdid any previous season of ye olden times but sets a standard for many years to come. Nobody could go to Europe so all the old line was there and an encouraging crowd of the brilliantly new.

Such magical names as Mrs. John R. Drexel, Mrs. Herman Oelrichs, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, with which society has been conjured with for many, many years, lost none of their brilliancy and power through being coupled with such newer and newest names as Mrs. J. Gordon Douglas, Mrs. Craig Biddle and Miss Barbara Rutherford.

Mrs. Herman Oelrichs set the ball a-rolling in this gayest season with a remarkable society show on her estate in which New York models, actresses and dancers took part, all of them wearing exquisite gowns of the latest design and style. It was one of the most brilliant shows ever given outside of Paris. It not only made Mrs. Oelrichs secure in her position as social leader of the Newport colony but it also set the keynote for the whole season.

A day or two after the society show which Mrs. Oelrichs played as her trump card, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont showed her hand. Her magnificent summer home, "Marble House," overlooking the sea and shut out from the vulgar horde, was thrown open to the cause of the war babies and the suffragists, and everybody who attended said the thing was "simply exquisite."

As usual Mrs. Belmont took care that not everybody should invade the beautiful grounds. "Three dollars and up" was the slogan. As there were at least 500 people who danced, supped and gazed, the war babies and suffragists got a neat little bunch of change.

The time was set at 3:30 and Mrs. Belmont, changing her usual careful plan, opened her house to the curious.

They surged through the broad portals, walked curiously and boldly through all the rooms, not even omitting Mrs. Belmont's private apartments, admired everything, lingered everywhere. Then they passed through the corridors out on the great wide terraces, and gazed on one of the finest views to be had on the Atlantic seacoast—a soft green sward, white stone balustrades, further on jagged rocks, gaunt, forbidding, majestic and still further the ultra marine sea.

Mrs. Belmont received in a salmon pink gown that made her look very young. She doesn't try to disguise her age—she is the sincerest woman in the 400. She fondly embraced little Consuelo Vanderbilt and said, "Come, dear, won't you pose for your picture with granny?"

With her received Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., in smart white and black. And along came the famous men and women who make the Newport summer colony the gayest and most interesting in America.

The big event was the fox trot contest and who should win but the very prettiest girl out of the entire crowd. She was Miss Robert Willard. She was in dark blue silk, with a jaunty blue hat cocked over one eye, with a coquettish bird cage in one hand with a live bird in it. It caused no wonder that Morgan Belmont picked her out of all the fair ones at Newport. She carried off her silver cup with a smile of triumph.

From the house everybody strolled down to the Chinese pagoda, well guarded by any number of plain clothes men. Among the visitors was Mrs. Charles de Loosy Oelrichs, in a wonderful gown of salmon chiffon with a Japanese sash. Mrs. Joseph Samson Stevens in a white lace toilette, and Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, wife of the governor of New York, in a Paris black and white.

Mrs. Frederick Nielson, mother of Mrs. Vanderbilt, and Mrs. Hamilton Cary, both wore gowns of white and gold—accent on the gold, and they looked positively regal. The T. Saffern Talles, father, mother and both the pretty little Talles, nurse and all—were conspicuous by that Newport rarity—family sociability. Mrs. Willard, mother of the beautiful Roberta, escorted first one and then another of her six daughters about the terraces, looking dignified in black.

The Astors were there, the Vanderbilts clan was all there, Mrs. Chadwick, Mrs. Burke-Roche, Mrs. Martin, Preston Gibson, they were all there. And near the end, entered the rival—Mrs. Oelrichs herself. She was wearing the blue dress of her last week's party—and the women gasped, for they detected in this, so they thought, a subtle feminine stab. For, from time immemorial, for a woman not to dress up for her friend's party, is a crime.

Mrs. Oelrichs took a look around, stepped into the ice cream marquee, listened for a minute to Ferris's fiddling—snapped, "No, I won't," when that persistent Martin boy said: "Tessie, buy some candy?" and left, after carefully avoiding the cameras. Then Mrs. Belmont came out of the house and mingled with her guests, smiling the smile of Von Hindenburg, Von Mackensen and other conquerors.

It was moonlight when the party broke up. Little Consuelo Vanderbilt accompanied "Granny" to the gate and innocently asked, "Where's Aunt Tessie?"

Mrs. Belmont smiled her smile and replied: "She went home early, dear." Those who heard understood. Mrs. Belmont had scored one.

It was at the Oelrichs fashion charity and fete that Mrs. John R. Drexel laid tighter claim to her record as the "Best Dressed" of Newport. There had been much gossip during the summer to the effect that Mrs. Drexel seemed rather careless of her honors and was not going to do much to maintain them.

But the gossip was set at naught when the beautiful society leader promenade across the lawn of "Rosaciff." Every society woman who was worth while was there, of course, and the creations that were worn were stunning in every sense of the word. In anticipation of the event they had spent many weary hours with modiste and masseuse only to discover that Mrs. Drexel had not been caught napping.

She used the blazer stripe, so popular in wash materials, carrying it into chiffons and satins. The gown was developed in mauve and wistaria stripe and heavy cream lace applique. The smock lines were suggested by a rather wide graduated peplum of lace and the entire upper portion of the blouse and sleeves were lace.

Taupe chiffon rose from the natural waistline in points over the front of the blouse, and formed a hand and smart bow at the elbow. A carmine rose at port or at a Biarritz ball, she accomplishes it. Once at a European fashionable resort the bodice of a gown she wore was so covered with diamonds and pearls that it glittered and glinted like a coat of highly polished mail. It is still a matter of society history.

The statuesque or sculptural beauty of the affair was Mrs. Craig Biddle, who simply swept the spectators off their feet by her beauty and dignity when she took the part of "America" in the pageant. To begin with, she is one of the handsomest women in America. Heading the pageant of nations she wore a simple undergarment across which was draped the American flag. In her hand she held aloft a torch. With her superb stature, with her colorful costume, with the electric torch casting its strange light on her and a crown of gold on her floating black hair, she made a picture that will long be remembered by those who saw it.

Nor will anyone ever forget the beautiful star that suddenly and surprisingly shot up over Newport and remained suspended over the exclusive colony the whole summer long, causing gasps of admiration, of delight, sighs and heavings of longing.

She was the young Miss Barbara Rutherford, by all odds the sensation of the season, by all odds the most beautiful and fascinating of the younger Newport set.

Her features are delicious. The oval of her face is perfect. One puzzles long in wonderment whether her graceful neck, her sensitive mouth with beautifully formed red lips or her long, narrow and dark eyes is her most bewitching feature. She wears her hair bobbed, which makes her look somewhat like the beautiful Mrs. Vernon Castle, yet there is more seriousness in her expression, more of rich beauty in her features than in the somewhat frail type of beauty of the famous lady of the society dances. Immediately she took her place as the loveliest of the Newport summer set and there was not another all summer long even to challenge her supremacy much less to displace her from it.

The prettiest and best dressed woman—in contradistinction to Mrs. Drexel as the best dressed—was Mrs. Annie Gordon Douglas. It is not so much the clothes she wears as the way she wears them that brings Mrs. Douglas into prominence. Expert as is her dressmaker the clothes which she fashions would not be remarkable on a woman less able to carry them gracefully.

Moreover there is something spitefully piquant about the young Mrs. Douglas. Whatever she does, even to dabbing the powder rag against the top of her nose, is captivating.

Cheerfulness—Courage—Great Muscular Strength—Is Latest Formula

Discovered by Scientists

A PERSON whose mind is filled with doubts and despondency can do less labor than the person who has confidence and courage. In other words, according to the conclusions reached by Dr. William E. Sadler after exhaustive research, the mental state directly affects the muscles.

"Confidence and courage are indispensable to the performance of gigantic muscular feats," says Dr. Sadler. "Profound fear may even temporarily paralyze muscular action. Chronic fear or worry produces a relative paralysis of the entire muscular system. Fear and grief produce flabby, relaxed and weakened muscles, while faith adds to the tone and strength of every muscle in the body."

"As a practical illustration of the enormous influence exercised by the mind on the muscular system we will cite the following: A certain young man had long studied and worked to secure a position as private secretary to a prominent business man. After the receipt of two or three letters it began to look as if he would fail in securing the coveted position. He was downcast and depressed. During this period of discouragement he had his strength test taken—every group of muscles was tested by means of a specially devised machine called the dynamometer. This test showed his total strength to be not quite 3,000 pounds. Three days after this test he received a telegram announcing his appointment as private secretary to the gentleman in question. Of course, his joy knew no bounds, his delight was supreme, and another test of his muscular power gave a total strength of almost 5,000 pounds, an increase of considerably over 50 per cent in muscle strength—capacity for work. The first test was effected with considerable exertion and noticeable displeasure, while the second test was taken with keen pleasure and evident delight."

CONFIDENCE AND COURAGE ARE INDISPENSIBLE

TESTING THE GRIP

GRIEF FEAR AND WORRY CAUSE DEPRESSION OF CHEST

STOOP SHOULDERS RESULT FROM MENTAL DEPRESSION.

"Careful laboratory tests respecting the physio element in muscular fatigue go to show that the mental state has much to do in determining the degree of physical weariness which follows the performance of definite muscular tasks. Confidence and courage increase the 'hand-squeeze' power, that is, when one squeezes with all his might on a little hand dynamometer, if the mind is dominated by faith one is able to register a strength test considerably higher than when one is controlled by doubts and repressive fears. Fear, both acute and chronic, is shown by repeated experiments actually and definitely to decrease the 'hand-squeeze' power."

"Strength tests covering practically every group of muscles in the body have been made upon the same person when in different mental states. It is difficult to believe the results of some of these observations. A change in the mental state, as when receiving bad news or becoming suddenly frightened, is sufficient to decrease the showing of physical strength from 25 to

AFTER HER MENTAL REJUVENATION SHE REGISTERED AN INCREASE OF OVER 100 PER CENT.

GOOD CHEER AND OPTIMISM DEVELOP THE CHEST

65 per cent. Single groups of muscles have by fright had their total strength decreased as much as 75 per cent.

"Good cheer and optimism also help in the development of the chest. Men of courage and women of faith, as a rule, possess strong, robust and well-developed chests. Their lung capacity is usually above the average. The unfortunate and melancholic victims of grief, fear and worry almost invariably suffer from a depression of the chest as well as a depression of spirits.

"There are two important tests which may be applied to the lungs, one to ascertain the lung strength, the other to disclose the lung capacity. Faith and fear indirectly influence both the strength and capacity of the lungs by their power to modify the depth of breathing and consequently to control the development of the chest. When patients are improving, as they become more cheerful and hopeful their lung tests begin to show an increase in capacity. We have observed patients within one month's time, as a result of increased courage and an improved feeling of general well-being, increase their lung capacity from 15 to 20 per cent.

"A certain patient who had long believed herself to be suffering from an incurable disease was very much depressed and discouraged. The best lung capacity test in her case was in the neighborhood of 150 cubic inches. Thirty days after she fully accepted the idea that she would get well—after she had become enthusiastic in the mental and physical cultivation of health—she registered a lung capacity of 215 cubic inches. This great gain in capacity was not equal, however, to her remarkable gain in lung strength. In her state of despair and discouragement she was able to register but one pound of mercury in the test of her blowing power, whereas after her mental rejuvenation she registered a blowing strength equal to two pounds of mercury, an increase of 100 per cent in expiratory power."

"It thus appears that hollow chest and stoop shoulders may result from mental discouragement as well as from physical depression, either of which seems to be able to bring about that state of physical indifference and muscular weakness observed in nearly all cases of shallow breathing and weak chests, whether observed in young or old."

Live as in Prehistoric Times

SCIENCE has proven to us beyond a doubt that long before men and women lived in homes and even huts they lived in the branches of trees. The strength found in a new born baby's hands and fingers is an inheritance of prehistoric ages, when children and grown-ups alike spent much of their leisure by day and lived at night in the branches of trees.

There are a few tribes that still cling to this most primitive way of living. The Guaranis, who live along the Orinoco River in South America, continue this practice because, during a large part of the year, their country is flooded.

The trees are a species of palm, which not only yield them an abundance of food but also an excellent support for the simple houses which they make in them. The beams are fastened from tree to tree. It is upon this scaffolding that the trees are erected.

The floors are covered with plastering of mud on which fires are built for cooking their food. As the climate is warm they do not inclose the sides of their houses but need only a good roof to keep out the rain. The early explorers were astonished at seeing fires in the tree tops.

The Australian bushmen wish only a shelter from the rain, and if they can find a cave or overhanging rock that will shelter them they will build no house. If there is no such natural shelter they select a place where small trees or bushes grow together and weave the branches together and cover them with grass. This forms a roof to keep off the rain.

GARLIC Greatest Foe of TUBERCULOSIS Germ?

DR. WILLIAM C. MINCHIN, a British practitioner, announces that he has achieved excellent results by the use of garlic as a remedy for lung complaints.

Dr. Minchin relates that his attention was first drawn to garlic by the case of a young man who came to him with a very severe case of tuberculosis of the bones of the leg and foot. He advised amputation. This the sufferer refused. Six months later he met the young man, walking about, with his leg almost well. The youth told him he had been treated by a man whose name he gave, with a poultice which had been known for generations as a scrofula cure. The man in question told Dr. Minchin that the poultice was composed of soot, salt and pounded garlic in almost equal proportions. Dr. Minchin readily isolated the garlic as the active ingredient and began experimenting with it. He was astonishingly successful.

It seems that the treatment has long been a favorite one in Italy. Tuberculosis is uncommon in Italy, where garlic is used universally; the leading Italian physicians in New York say it is alarmingly prevalent among the children of Italians in America, children who do not eat garlic, largely because their school fellows and other associates ridicule them for smelling of it.

Garlic is allied to the onion family. Its pungent flavor and acrid smell are due to a chemical substance called allyl sulphide. Onions, shallots and chives also owe their flavor to the same substance, but garlic has far more of it than they have. In a teaspoonful of garlic juice there are about two drops of allyl sulphide. This is what cures tuberculosis. The bacilli of this disease seem to be poisoned by allyl sulphide.

No substance is known that penetrates the human body as allyl sulphide penetrates it. You can prove this for yourself in a very simple way. Crush a few cloves of garlic and tie them like a poultice on the sole of your foot; after about twenty minutes ask some one to smell your breath. The odor of garlic will be pronounced. This means that the allyl sulphide has soaked through the skin of your feet, been taken up by the blood and lymphatics and carried by them throughout the body until the lungs are giving it off into the air.

It is known that the allyl sulphide is absorbed principally by the lymphatics that system of tubes and glands which runs like the blood vessels throughout our system, carrying the serum that supplies the blood with its fluid and bathing every tissue of the body. This lymph carries the allyl sulphide to the lungs, skin, muscles, liver, kidneys, bones—in fact, it impregnates every organ with it. So, no matter where the tubercle bacilli may be lurking it gets at them.

Our medical authority cites many cases of various forms of tuberculosis, from consumption to lupus, which he has cured with garlic. One case was that of a boy of 10, the bones of whose hand were so seriously affected that part of one finger had been amputated and there was free suppuration through three sinuses in the palm. Once every twenty-four hours a poultice of crushed cloves of garlic mixed with lard was applied to the diseased hand. Garlic acts as a blister, so at first the boy suffered a little from the burning, but he soon got relief and within a few days was free from pain. Within six weeks from the commencement of the treatment the boy's hand was entirely healed.

STUDY Habits of SEAL to CONSTRUCT Perfect SUBMARINE

THAT airships, gliding planes and aeroplanes have been suggested to man by the flight of birds is well understood by us. That the deadly submarine of our present maritime war has been suggested to us by any form of natural animal life is not so patent. Doubtless it has often been in the minds of fishermen and whalers when tempest tossed and severely driven. Certainly it would be a happy ship for them that could be so constructed which would safely dive with all on board to the quiet depths below, there to rest content and easy until the "clouds rolled by" above.

We have come to regard the soaring albatross or the condor as the prototype of the aeroplane. When we look for a natural model for the submarine we find it well made in the body of the fur seal and fully suggested by its method of progression in the sea, for it travels there only when wholly submerged.

Unlike, however, the "unter see bot," the fur seal is not fitted for swimming on the surface; it only rises there to survey, to breathe and to sleep, it never attempts to swim with head above water on any course, no matter how short. It rises, when undisturbed or not alarmed, looks about with head and neck well stretched up above the surface of the sea, fills its lungs with air (literally compressed), turns its head down, and with its powerful anterior flippers dives below the surface to the depth of five or ten feet, then ahead on that level; thus submerged, the body of the seal glides through the water as swiftly as a swallow in the air—it is a vanishing streak to our eyes.

How long it remains thus submerged when traveling no one has any definite knowledge, but the best consensus of opinion gives it a rise at intervals of every three or four minutes to breathe—that is, a pause of less than two or three seconds with barely more than its nose and eyes above the surface, for exhalation and renewed inhalation—when down goes the trim body to speed ahead again.

When our submarines were first brought out a trip of more than 800 miles from base was the utmost limit of their cruising. Today they have been so perfected by the Germans that we know that they can cruise safely more than 3,000 miles from that base. Therefore in this connection it is interesting to know that the fur seal makes a submarine journey in the North Pacific Ocean of more than 5,000 miles from its base on the Pribilof Islands in Bering Sea and then returns.

There is to be observed a close resemblance between the cigar-shaped submarine boat and the body form of the fur seal. As we view them laterally, this resemblance is complete; they are both driven ahead by feathering screws, and they are both kept on the level of their submerged course at a given distance below the surface by rudders.

Then we observe that the periscope to which the submarine craft owes all of its efficiency, is duplicated exactly by the seal's nose and eyes, and which are all that it ever lifts above the surface when started and in flight of passage.

Again we note that the fur seal as a submarine has a great advantage over the human boat—it has eyes that can look ahead and around under water—how far we do not know but it is reasonable to assume that the seal's eye can see as far under water as the eye of a camera can, and which we have the evidence of in good records.

Then, too, it also has an acute sense of hearing under sea, for we know that the whirring of a propeller's screw will drive all the seals away for miles around a steamer. We know that because some of the early pelagic sealing vessels were fitted with small auxiliary screws and these, when put into use, had to be removed.

Then, on the other hand, we find that our submarine boat has one great advantage over its sealing prototype—it can remain for many hours—yes, days—under sea. The seal cannot stay there more than four or five minutes, as far as we have any proof of.

That it can remain that long has been well known to us by the evidence curiously given to us by the seals themselves. They have a habit of turning themselves head down in the sea with their hind flippers lifted up entirely out of water completely reversing their normal attitude when rising to breathe and survey. This habit is to enable them better to scratch their sides and loins with the fore flippers than they can when not thus inverted, because the hair and fur open better in this queer position under water when rubbed by their flippers. A great many stop-watch records have been made of the time under water which a seal would keep its head when thus scratching and the limit of four to five minutes was frequently made—never any longer.

With reference to the powers of destruction, of course our fur seal boat has no torpedo tubes, but it can and does "shoot its mouth off" at fish with a deadly certainty.

In this connection it is interesting to note that seals do not catch fish by pursuit of them—not at all, they shoot down from above upon the backs or up from below to strike at the bellies of their finny prey.

Recent Inventions and Discoveries For the Man Who Stays Out Late

A PARTICULARLY useful device for people who are forced to stay out late at night is a key guide.

The little guide could be made in such a manner as to be capable of being applied to a door without any change in the construction. The device would be placed over the escutcheon so that the diverging arms could form a tapering passage through which the key would be guided to the hole by placing the point of the key between the arms and moving it upward until it entered the keyhole. It is a simple device, but should prove very useful in places where it is impractical or impossible to have a light to illuminate the keyhole.

Aeroplane Scouts for Seal Hunters

A NOVEL use of the aeroplane is under consideration by owners of Newfoundland sealing vessels as a result of the failure of the seal hunts this year. It is proposed that two-experienced aviators be engaged to visit the East Coast and the Gulf of St. Lawrence, just before the opening of next season, to discover the herds.

THE sounds made by the katydid are produced by the friction of the taborettes (little drums) in the triangular overlapping portion of each wing cover against each other and are strengthened by the escape of air from the sacs of the body. The katydid has been called the "testy little dogmatist."

They were laid to guard every approach of what was intended to be the last asylum of Haitian independence.

Your Child Must Be Self-Reliant to Achieve Success Pampered Children Usually Greatest Sufferers When Forced to Face World.

By DOROTHY DOLAN.

I HAVE seen mothers who worried themselves and, worse still, their children, into an untimely grave. The worst of it was that most of their worry was without foundation, built on the imaginary things that never happened. It is extremely foolish to worry about your boy after he is 12 men and women of your children pamper them by worrying every time you find them comfortably seated on the high branches of a tree or climbing a scaffolding. Furthermore, you cannot always keep them babies, and you must allow them a little freedom in order that they may use it rightly, and not abuse it when they grow older. Try and realize how your children suffer by the teasing they get from other children. "Tied to your mother's apron string," is an epithet that no child likes to hear applied to himself.

If there is one thing more than another that worries a conscientious mother it is the question of bathing baby. Don't put hot water into the bath first. This is especially necessary to remember if there are small children toddling about the nursery. Many children have been scalded to death by falling into a bath half full of hot water while the nurse had gone to fetch a can of cold water.

In the second place, don't use much soap in washing an infant. No matter how excellent and superfatted the soap may be, there is always some alkali in it, and this is too drying to the delicate skin of a baby. A lot of soap removes too much of the natural oil of the skin and this is a great loss to the nutrition of the child.

Be sure and do not use powder on the baby's skin, or but very little of it. Grease is ever so much better. Just a slight smear of grease or vaseline will keep him from chafing. If you let me give you a tip evolved from my first struggles in putting baby, wriggling and slipping, with soap, into his bath, taking him out and drying and dressing him. It is or 6 years old. Be self-reliant yourself, and train him in this same spirit. If you have a little girl instead of a little boy you may have to caution her against running recklessly in front of auto-cars and wandering on street corners instead of coming straight home, and you must teach your children these first principles of self-reliance what is the use of wearing their nervous out and your own with possibilities.

If you are of this class of over-cautious mothers console yourself in the thought that children who receive the best care are the ones that usually suffer most. In fact, the only way to make a child really careful is to let him trust his own good judgment. Remember, you cannot always keep them as you babies, and you must allow them freedom so they will grow strong and develop. Suppose your little boy gets a few hard tumbles and the little girl bumps her head so it is swollen, or cuts her lip. An occasional tumble will do your children more good than harm, because it will cultivate in them the knowledge that life is not all pleasure. If you wish to make dolls instead of knack of doing things in the right way. She will anticipate any mistake you will make and this will save you from bungling over the job as you would otherwise do.

Encourage Your Child Not to Fear Animals.

The bathing of a baby should never be bungled over. That is why it is well to get into deft ways of doing this important work. Remember that a young baby is sensitive to cold and is easily chilled. If you should be careful to have everything close at hand before beginning baby's bath.

TALKS With The WOMAN WHO WORKS

IF YOU had ever been in India or Arabia and seen some splendid thoroughbred steeds, whose very bodies thrill and quiver with life and action, you would certainly love and even worship an animal whose nostrils breathe and whose light, perfectly shaped feet pulsate with energy and action. They need only be given the hint to start and they run so madly and quickly that once merely started they seem to be half across the plain. These animals are energized to the highest point, and because of this are recognized as thoroughbreds. If animals can reach this point of development with their supposedly small allotment of brain powers, certainly humans should have the same, if not a far better chance to develop and to energize their capacities. Unless your body quivers with life and action and your brain thrills with ideas and impulses you are going to have little pleasure out of life and even a smaller amount of joy from your work.

possibilities with which you can make everything you do worth while. Do not smile at the thought of your creation, or your day's work being splendidly worth while. It is all this and more if you are really living and ready to run. Like those splendid Arabian horses, it makes little difference from where you start or what is your goal. You can get the same splendid results from selling goods over a counter, copying important business letters of one kind or other, writing stories or drawing illustrations. The nature of your work is of small import; you can get the same splendid results, providing your heart throbs with joy and your brain is quickened with hopes and desires. If you are goaded on with the impulse to rush forward, somewhere to your goal, you will be impatient to start. You will be eager to get to your desk to start your work, and you will be irritated at the thought of leaving it at night. The feeling will be the same whether you have been writing business letters or creating stories. With this impulse you will be little worried by the thought that you are snowed under with work or that you have more than you can handle comfortably. You will not stand round and wait until you are instructed to do this thing or that thing. So many ideas and impulses will come to you that you will for the moment wonder which of the many you will take up first. Though you may often have to take orders, once the thought is given to you it is yours. Though it came from another it is soon stamped with your individuality; it is yours. If you enter into your work with this desire you will be contented with your work and with yourself. Though every venture cannot be equally perfect and satisfactory, you will not do many things that you can pick out as an actual failure. For, like those splendid horses running across the desert or entering into a great race, all are winners, though all may not win a stake or prize. This is what most employers are looking for and have so much trouble to find. They have little trouble in finding draft horses and nags, but the thoroughbreds are few. If you want to know why one girl is getting $15 a week and another $50 in the same line of work, it is just because one has initiative and the other lacks it. The one woman is full of energy, full of enthusiasm, ever ready to undertake new ventures. If this is philosophy, remember that prize winners are rare, whether they are horses or humans.

Polly Plans a Novel Shower to Lighten First Regrets of School Days' Return.

By DAME CURTSEY.

VERY soon now the long vacation will be over, "as Labor day ends our fun," as the small daughter said when her mother cruelly reminded her of the approach of school days. And if it had not been for the selfsame small daughter you would not have had these suggestions for what I am sure will be a novel "shower." As usual, it was "Polly" who thought and planned it all, and I am merely telling you what she told me will take place in the home a week from tomorrow where the small daughter lives.

To make the day after Labor day more bearable to this child, who is fond of knowledge, but not fond of school, the members of her family and a few intimate friends, who know and love the wee maid have planned a school "shower."

Here are some of the gifts to be presented in all sorts of unusual ways. A very pretty little alarm clock is to be slipped into her room after she goes to sleep on Labor day night, set at 6:30. This is shower number one and is to be accompanied by a funny note, saying how the clock wishes to be a helper and must be wound up every night in order to start her right each morning. Then at the breakfast table she will find a new utility box containing all sorts of necessities.

Luncheon for a Bride-Elect.

A girl who will be an early fall bride was the guest of honor at luncheon at which this unique centerpiece was used and greatly admired. Over the table suspended by streamers of pink tulle there was a good-sized wedding bell of white and green flowers. Pink tulle wound with feathery parasols, and from these garlands white hearts fluttered.

The place cards were cut in shape of slippers and the bride-elect's chair was ornamented by a huge bow of pink tulle. Pink satin bags clasped with white wedding rings were filled with puffed rice, and were the souvenirs at each place.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Class Colors.

We, as a class, are very hard to please and would like some information. Will you kindly suggest some combined colors, not including maroon and gold or blue and gold, and also some novel ways of amusements for a reception? L. E. D.

Had you thought of purple and heliotropes and purple? It is a lovely combination; or pale green and pink? For amusements have you ever had a "character" party where each guest is asked to wear an article indicating a famous person? You will find that guessing who is who is most amusing. A prize may be awarded to the one guessing the most.

Reply to "Resident."

Consult a florist about the tree or write any of the big nurserymen regarding it. Neither your other question nor the one regarding the tree come under my department, which pertains to "entertaining and the proper thing to do."

DEAR DAME CURTSEY—I always read your column with the greatest interest.

I am in the country for the summer. I have invited the literary club of which I am a member to spend the day with me on the farm instead of entertaining them in the city. I shall meet them with wagons. The program is arranged for the year.

Would it be wise to stroll in the woods before or after the program?

Since vegetables are plentiful, would it be nice to serve vegetables and barbecued meats for dinner?

How could I serve in the open so the ladies could serve themselves?

Any suggestion will be gladly received. Very cordially yours, AURORA.

It depends upon what hour the guests arrive what you should do first. I think the program gotten off first, then the meal and afterward the walk through the woods would be about the right way to plan. By all means have the barest of plenty of vegetables off the farm. Provide wooden plates, paper napkins and let each one help themselves. Pass trays of coffee with sugar and cream. For dessert have fresh apple pie and watermelon. Your guests will be delighted with this merriment, I am sure, as every one likes a novelty, which this surely will be. I am glad you like the department.

VIVIAN'S Heart to Heart Chat

IN THE last few weeks I have received a number of letters asking me to account for tastes where the question of the heart is concerned. One girl says, "I have known a young man for almost a year. In this length of time he has told me repeatedly that he would never marry a short girl with red hair. Strangely enough, he became engaged last week to a short girl with fire-red hair. Have you any explanation to offer?"

Another girl writes, "One of my men friends married the other day, and since we were neighbors for many years he told me many of his hopes and aspirations. Among other things, he assured me that, being an intellectual man, he wanted his wife to have the same qualities. Since he has always admired bright girls, I thought he was sincere in what he said. His wife is a good housekeeper, but she is anything but clever. Do you think he was sincere in saying what he did?"

In answer to these and to other inquiries I would say that these men and others like them are sincere in their opinions, but they were inconsistent. This is largely because emotions no less than opinions have to be reckoned with in passing judgment on love questions. An illustrious example well known to most of us is Goethe and his many romances. He loved many beautiful women and some who were very clever, among the latter a Frau von Stein.

In spite of his intimate acquaintance with a dozen or more of these clever and unusually fascinating women Christine Vulpine was his choice. His friends spoke in utmost contempt because he selected this ordinary woman after he had courted so many who were unusual. They were one in the opinion that she was plain-looking and coarse in her manner. This feeling increased when she became coquettish. In spite of the fact that she was ostracized at Weimar, Goethe sincerely mourned her when she died, which shows that this love affair meant more than momentary infatuation.

His friend Helme made the same erratic kind of choice when he married Mathilde Mirat, a Parisian grisette. His friends said she was light-headed and commonplace. In spite of these opinions, biased or otherwise, he was as happy throughout his married life as he was the day he married.

There have been cases where two people have loved each other from the first day they met until the very end, but for some unknown reason they never got beyond this state of lovers. Perhaps the most brilliant example of lovers and lovers only is that of Heloise and Abelard. Because he was a priest he felt he had no right to marry, so Heloise first went into a convent and he followed soon by entering a cloister.

Even more unexplainable was the case of Rousseau and Theresa le Vasseur. Here was one of the most brilliant men of his day, who had met many and many a beautiful and clever woman, falling head over heels in love with a kitchen maid. She held him in spite of the fact that she was never able to read his books, and understood nothing about his ideals and philosophy.

The most unusual of these numerous love affairs and marriages is that of the composer Tschalkovsky. This Russian composer was both a pessimist and an exceedingly shy man. As he had said time and again to his friends he lived in antipathy to marriage for thirty-seven years. To his surprise he received a letter one day from a poor and unknown girl. She made a declaration of love to him in passionate terms. At first he told her he could give her nothing but sympathy and gratitude. But she persisted and finally she persuaded him to marry her.

This unreasonable love affair ended unhappily. They were married less than a month when Tschalkovsky said that he needed a change of climate and he left home. His poor wife never heard from him nor saw him again.

Dear Vivian: I have kept company with a young man for a year. He always treated me as a sister. He went away about a year ago and during that time he has been employed elsewhere. He says that he has little spare time and that is his chief reason for not writing often. Do you think this young man still cares for me? Thanking you for your advice, am, yours truly, H. A.

If A—I hardly think the reason your young man gives for not writing is sufficient. Where there is a will there is a way, especially where the heart is concerned. Still, I should wait and be patient for a time at least and give him the benefit of a doubt.

THE UNDERWORLD.

The Lure of Easy Money Leads Many a Grafter to Prison, but He Is Not Cupidity's Only Victim—Mr. Peters, One of the Shrewdest and Most Daring Crooks to Defy the Police of America in Recent Years, Tells Today How the Avaricious Bargain Hunter Is Spoiled and How the Lemon Game Transfers Big Money From the Come-On's Pockets to Those of the Steerer.

By J. A. PETERS.

HERE is a saying, often heard in the underworld, to the effect that there is a sucker born every minute. How true this may be I cannot vouch for, as I never was much good at mathematics, but my friend and former cellmate, "Max the Jew," told me with a 25 per cent rakeoff for the salesman.

Max went on to tell of learning the stock and tag marks till I grew tired and said with disgust, "Aw, that is nothing but petty larceny."

"Petty larceny hey?" snorted Max with some heat, "I got $60 for my bit yesterday; is that cheap graft?" And so, while his grafting pride was smarting under the lash of that "petty larceny" Max plunged yesterday that two born a minute is nearer the mark.

"It must be at least two a minute," said Max, "or how could business keep up so?" "You don't mean business?" I corrected, "you mean graft."

"Graft" retorted Max, "I ain't a grafter any more. That's a sucker's game, I am a business man, strict business in a store—no more taking jail chances for mine."

I had just met Max on S— street, for the first time in several years, and as he had looked more prosperous than I had ever seen him before—well groomed and tailored—I stopped and renewed our acquaintance, out of the curiosity his wealthy appearance aroused in me. When I knew Max formerly he had been a stall for pickpockets.

A Lucky Crook.

His remark concerning taking no more chances led me to draw him out about his present occupation, and as we walked along he told me the following story. "You see, Peters, one time I used to sell 'slum' (fake jewelry) and I got to know a lot of the manufacturers of the phony stuff. By luck, when I came out of 'stir' (prison) this last time I ran across a guy named Moranski that in the old days, was in that line. I told him I was just out of hock and broke, and I asked him to grubstake me to some slum to peddle.

"It was sure my lucky day, Peters. Moranski gave me a card and told me to come to that address early next morning. I dolled up ready to go to work selling goods behind a counter.

"The next morning I was there with bells on and got a job as a clerk in a swell fitted up little jewelry store on the main stem. Talk about suckers falling for phony slum—a locket worth a dime brings anywhere from 25 cents to $1.50 into the meat of his story, which I will tell here in my own way.

Last week John Henry (argot for sucker) a celery grower from Kalamazoo, came to Chicago to transact a bit of business. Early Tuesday afternoon, his errand finished, having nothing particular to do until train time, John strolled along S— street enjoying the balmy air of the vacation city. Passing a small jewelry store with an ornate front and rich interior, his attention was drawn by a bargain in watches displayed in the window. After some hesitation he entered the store.

Our friend Max came forward and took him in tow, and before long sold him a solid gold watch, "worth every cent of $100," full jeweled movement, eighteen carat case, for $50 cash, together with a convincing piece of paper called an everlasting guarantee (but which, in reality, is a certificate of membership to the Sucker's Club of Illinois, unlimited.)

The watch is worth $4, but under the spell of Max's "oil" and the eighteen carat stamp on the solid silver case thinly gold plated John "falls like a log." It happened that John knew a jewelry salesman stopping at the hotel and to him, an hour later, our celery grower showed his purchase and found out he had been tricked. With watch in one hand, guarantee in the other, and rage in his heart, John hurried back to the little store.

There Mr. Smooth Moranski, a stoutish gentleman of imperturbable calm, assured J. Henry that he must be mistaken in the address, "My dear sir, show me the person who sold you that watch—!" never was in our stock I am sure."

For the very good reason that Max was not there J. H. could not point him out or anyone that looked like him.

"These two gentlemen and myself constitute our full force of employees," said the suave Moranski. "This should be brought to the attention of the police," he added as he ushered the bewildered man from Kalamazoo to the door.

J. Henry relates his troubles to the cop on the corner and is directed to the nearest station.

From the police station a plain-clothes man is detailed to go to the store with John, with the loud-voiced command "and bring that thief in with you when you come back."

An hour later he is back the second time in the station-house listening to the detective tell the sergeant or captain that "It is a puzzling case, boss; the store manager says he has no clerk of that description and no watches like this one in stock. He showed us his books and satisfactorily accounts for his two clerks—maybe Mr. Henry has the wrong shop in spite of the fact he says he remembers the place and the firm name over the door. There is no address or firm name on this guarantee."

"Well Mr. Henry," said the commanding police officer, "we will detail our best men on this case and get the crook who robbed you."

And Nothing to Show.

John Henry has not got much satisfaction, unless the knowledge that he was rolled for his money can be called satisfying—he has not even the phony watch for a souvenir because the plain-clothes man kept that for evidence in hunting down the thief. But the most interesting part of the affair is—where did Max go?

Almost at John Henry's heels he left the store. He did not go far—only a few blocks away is another small jewelry store—another of a chain of a half dozen scattered about the city, all owned by the same men. And there are several of these chains of small jewelry shops operated on the strength of the sucker being born every minute.

How to Bankrupt the Underworld

THE slicker, formerly called a bunco-steerer, is often a criminal who has discovered that he has intelligence enough to outwit society and the law without using desperate methods.

Perhaps he has served a prison term because of cupidity. Upon his release from "stir" he determines to play a game of easy money which will have few dangers and, if he can "outsmart" his victims, plans an "easy money" scheme which depends for success upon his own failing—cupidity—a weakness his victim shares. The strangest part of the game of "easy money" is that the victim has been taught from childhood that "you can't get something for nothing." If this truth was accepted by all men the business of the bunco-man would soon be bankrupt.

"Say Max, what is your brother Sam doing these days?" I asked.

"Ten years," was the laconic reply.

"Is that so? What for?"

"He was nailed for a 'lemon' game two years ago and got a ten spot in Sing Sing. Sam was the slickest lemon steerer that ever held a cue in his hand," boasted Max.

For the benefit of those who have never been "steered against the 'lemon' and for some of the many who have lost hundreds and thousands of dollars to the workers in this line of graft, which originated in Chicago about fifteen years ago, I will explain what the lemon is.

The fifteen balls in the game of pool are numbered and colored to distinguish each from the other and the No. 1 ball is always a bright yellow. Thus, from its color likeness, it is called the lemon ball.

Tom, the steerer, an expert pool player, flashily dressed, leaves his two confederates at the Fashion billiard hall and goes out to corral a sucker. Across the street is the well-known Theater Grand.

One after another he approaches likely looking men, asks for a match and says "Stranger, where is the Theater Grand? I am lost in this burg—only got in from Philly last night. What—you don't say? And me right in front of it. That slicks me for an ice cream soda. Will you have a drink or cigar on me—I don't drink myself because I have to have steady nerves in my business."

Hesitate and You're Lost.

If the come-on will stand and listen he is lost. With rapid spiel Tom explains how he came to Chicago to play a world's champion pool artist a match and shows his card (fake name) inscribed "Champion Pool Player, management of Augustus Blank.

Halting in front of the Fashion, Tom says, "Here's a billiard hall; come in, I'll show you how to clean up a pool table. I'll pay the bill."

Inside, he says, "Here, take a cue. I don't want to attract attention by playing alone."

With prodigious ease he makes marvelous shots—pockets all the balls in championship style, while John Chicago Henry admires. Harry, the "butter-in," now saunters over to them and butts in with a polite "Do you care to make the game three-handed, gentlemen?"

"Why, yes," says Tom, winking at John Henry, "but," he adds, "we are betting $10 on the one ball. Whoever pockets the yellow ball wins $10 from each player."

"That suits me," assents genial Harry, turning to the rack to select a cue.

Quick Work and Big Pay.

Tom makes the lemon ball with ease—J. H. pays him the $10 and quits. Harry displays an amazing fat roll of yellow bills while settling with Tom. In short order J. H. sees Tom win three games and Harry pay him $40 in all.

The steerer bewails to his victim the fact that he has only a few dollars with him, saying, "If you can dig up a few hundreds to show this mark we can take him for his whole bankroll on one game. It's like stealing the money. He can't play to keep himself warm."

With such apparently easy money in sight John's cupidity is aroused; half of Harry's roll looks good to him. "Say, can you hold him while I go and get some dough out of the bank?" he asks Tom.

"Sure, if you hurry. Get all you can to make a big flash with."

J. H. hurries away, shadowed by Phil, a third lemon worker, who never loses sight of the mark and returns at his heels to the Fashion. John has been to the bank, drawn $1,000, and the shadow reports to the crooks. On his return J. H. finds Tom still playing with Harry and learns he has won every game and is $80 winner.

After a whispered consultation between Tom and John Henry, Tom proposes to Harry to "make the game worth while. My friend here will cover any amount you would like to bet."

With practiced art the two fellow conspirators play their parts. Harry, with the reckless abandon of a fearless gambler, throws his roll on the pool table and says, "Cover that if you can."

Coolly and confidently Tom counts to see how much is there and finds $1,100. Bill the shadower is now sitting looking on and is made stake holder, as being a stranger to the bettors. The game is played and Harry wins by an apparently clumsy fluke, or else Tom loses by a seemingly natural accident. Five times out of ten the victim will dig up more money "to get even," and be trimmed over again.

Teach Your Child to LOVE - FLOWERS

To Enrich the Mind of the Young, to Prepare Them for a Life of Usefulness to Their Fellows, Nothing Is More Fruitful Than Showing Them the Beauties of Nature and Music.

By DOROTHY DOLAN.

The true mother rules a kingdom of which she is justly proud. She is happy because she is without discontent. Still, she owes a debt to your children. Having brought them into the world she must create for them a pure, free life of physical health, cheerful industry, intellectual growth and moral dignity and sanity.

Next to the sins of parents, children suffer most from the sins of wrong education. From the day a child is born the mother teaches her to love and to appreciate parents, environments and life.

So to the mothers I say that before you expect your child to work you must expect her to play and to play for the end of play itself. The end of play is the harmonious development of your child's trinity, her physical, mental and moral self. If you try to develop her mind by mere imitation you will make her a prig, and if you habitually preach and lecture her, you will make her a "goody-goody," but by letting her learn to know and to love the things about her you are sure to make her a happy, sweet natured and thoughtful young woman. Because some physicians have said that babies should do nothing but eat and sleep and cry, many parents are quite willing to have their children reared in this fashion.

Child's Best Fun.

You should not allow your child's mind to lie dormant until she is 2 years old or even 1. Play-rooms and toys are necessary for your child on stormy days. The best recreation is to be had out of doors enjoying nature's gifts and pastimes. For it brings a love of flowers, of animals and music.

If your child wants to have her dolls when she is playing in doors let her have them, but be sure that she is enjoying the beauty of color and fragrance that comes from the garden when she is playing out of doors.

The winds, the rain and the sunshine will thrill with meaning, for she will know that the flowers need the sunshine and the rain no less than do little children. If you come upon some drooping leaves and wilted flowers explain to her that they are withering because they do not get their share of water and sunshine. From that time you may count on the fact that your child will develop a womanly sympathy and will see that the flowers get all the water and sunshine they need for their health and happiness. Give your child six months of this education and she will love her garden and the flowers as much as she does her dolls.

I knew a child who prized rose bushes her mother had given her for a birthday present. The rose bushes had many sweet, lovely children dressed in the daintiest of pink bonnets and frocks to match. They were as good and happy as they could be until their mistress forgot to water them when it was hot and dry out of doors. First the little girls on the one rose bush drooped their heads and went to sleep, then the little girls on the second drooped their heads and went to sleep, and finally those on the third bush did the same.

When the little girl saw what had happened she cried and felt unhappy, because she had lost her sweetest and dearest playmates through her own fault. The one thought that consoled her was her mother's promise of three new bushes in the spring. The little girl made a solemn vow to give them better care.

Surround your child with flowers and she will soon love them and create many fanciful stories about them.

Animals and fowls are a great educative factor in your child's life. A cat or even a dog if properly handled makes an excellent playmate for a child. A cat is playful and has her antics, and however suspicious she

DO YOU KNOW THESE THINGS ABOUT YOUR CHILD?

YOUR child's mind is a rich field ready to grow beautiful flowers of thought or weeds of selfishness, stubbornness and deceit.

SHOW the little boy or girl the kindly care the mother and father robin give their young and your child will instinctively and rightly feel the first stirring of the great creating and nurturing spirit which should play such a great part in its life.

IF YOU want your children to learn fidelity and loyalty let them have dogs and cats for playmates.

YOUR child will never take a great position among its fellows in life if in childhood it is not given responsibility. Let the child care for the flowers. The child will come to consider the blossoms as so many sweet, lovely children, who will wilt and die if not given water and sunshine each day.

A CHILD'S mind and spirit will be sweeter and more sympathetic for a knowledge of music. It is as natural for a child to sing as it is for the child to talk. Given the knowledge of music's rhythm the child will easily slip into dancing, one of the best arts for giving grace and poise of carriage.

Novel Entertainments to Make Fleeting Summer Hours Happy

By DAME CURTSEY.

THE most amusing entertainment given at a seaside place was at the little clubhouse built out over the water.

The invitations read: "All aboard for the 'Manor' dock. Come in 'emigrant costume; August eighth at eight o'clock. Refreshments 50 cents."

The cards were limited to a coterie who were well acquainted and as the party of the ways was near every one entered most heartily into the scheme. The couple who attracted a great deal of attention was a man and his wife who appeared as Dutch peasants wearing wooden shoes ("Paddy" from "Cork" and "Sweet Kitty," his colleen, were hailed with delight. Prizes were awarded to a family of Russian Jews, who were most realistic, carrying great rolls and bags, with a birdcage and a large doll for a baby.

The grand march was formed and all passed before the inspector, who gave a clean bill of health. Refreshments consisted of sandwiches, iced coffee, doughnuts and pie served just as such things are found in a country station; a counter and benches had been arranged with tall dishes of fruit; plates of sandwiches, alternating with "fried" cakes and pie.

girls taking a guest and herself to cook for our fruit course was oranges. The party was held in my room at the hotel (I am keeping house now) one morning when my husband went hunting at 4 a. m.

After breakfast we pinned a pretty yellow rising sun onto a horizon (blind-folded, of course), and that sun had an awful time of it.

Forgot to say that we cooked on my open grate heater and my electric disk.

We plan to entertain a class of boys at a dawn party out in a little grove some morning and will make little brick stoves to cook on. We are all looking forward to it.

A good way to break the ice at a party is to pass clothespins around (one to each guest) and then every one asks each other questions which are to be answered by plain "yes" or "no." If any other answer is given the clothespin of the one answering goes to the one asking the question. The one with the most clothespins at the end of the game wins the prize.

Fun at a Swap Party.

We had a lot of fun at a "swap party" recently. The five guests were asked to bring a swap package and each one wrapped their package so that no one could tell what it was.

Even the feel of it was deceitful. They "swapped" till a bell rang and then each one opened his or her package and found out how deceived they had been by the feel of their package. Then we passed envelopes containing the letters in "swap party" and asked them to make something out of them (we found out beforehand that nothing but "swap party" could be made out of those letters).

Then folders were passed with pencils attached and each one was to see how many words he could make out of the letters in "swap party"—just as we used to do with "George Washington" in school.

I hope you can use some of these ideas even though they are explained rather badly. MRS. A. H.

Reply to W. E. L.

I am glad to answer yours or any one's questions to the best of my ability. When with your brother you may say to the young man, "We would be glad to have you call at the house, and I am sure that mother will be glad to meet you." I am old-fashioned and think it is polite to offer one's hand when introduced, but there are some instances when just the bow is sufficient. Do not, unless you know all about the man, ask him to call the first time you meet him. There will be time enough afterward for such social courtesies. As long as you have a mother I think she must decide about your going out alone at night in the car. Usually the one who goes asks the others to write.

Questions and Answers.

For a Lawn Party.

I read your advice to girls every week and enjoy the department very much. I usually find something to help me. Now I am going to have a very dear friend visit me this summer and I want to give a lawn party for her. I do not know just what amusements I could have to interest them. Will ice cream and cake be sufficient for refreshments? I will appreciate your suggestions. ELEANOR Glad you like the department. Croquet, tennis and archery are all popular for lawn party entertainment. Have a bowl of frappe conveniently placed, then have the ice cream and cake passed later. You can have small tables and chairs with some rugs on the grass to make it look pretty.

Reader's Clever Idea.

Dear Dame Curtsey: Your column has been so valuable to me that I am sending a few ideas that I have tried out for the benefit of others who may like to use some of them.

The invitations were simple little notes with a rising sun in the upper left hand corner. My class of girls gave it to another class of girls. The invitations read, 6 a. m., and every girl was there on time, even though it was winter time and rather dark. We fried eggs, toasted bread and made cocoa for our guests, each one of my

"Shakespeare Is Dead," Says the Man Who Has Been Probably the Bard of Avon's Most Ardent Supporter. Even the Movies, to Whose Lucrative Fold Mantell Has Fled, Couldn't Put Life Into Hamlet

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS.

[Copyright, 1915, by J. Keeley.]

WHAT would William Shakespeare do if he were here and had to stand by while the "movies" ruthlessly but surely gathered in all the greatest exponents of his art? Would he join the movie-mad crowd and write scenarios, or would he bury his learned head in shame? Would he cry aloud at the desecration of his work, or would he accept the situation philosophically and re-create the mad Hamlet and give to the world a new Ophelia? Who can say?

It's a long call back to the sixteenth century, when the famous bard dwelt peacefully in Stratford-on-Avon. It's many and many a year since he gave to the world his masterly literature. Times have changed. The bare old stage, whereon his followers were wont to recite his verse and say, "This is a forest," in the absence of a proper stage setting, is no more.

The tender bit from "As You Like It" was spouted on a stage that was but a mimicry. Then came the luxury of tropical forest scenes, where Rosalind could say her lines surrounded by paper trees. And now the Shakespearean actors, grown so real to us through all the years, are ready to say farewell and give way to the shadow stage, the newest thing in the world of make-believe. One by one these exponents of the sounding period of Shakespeare whisper au revoir and follow the beckoning hand of the "movies."

Now that the foremost of them all, Robert Mantell, has turned his back on the master and sworn allegiance to a new love in fancy we can see the bard of Avon shaking his head and crying sadly, "Et tu, Robert?"

Mr. and Mrs. Mantell and Son Robert at the Famous Pasture Gate at Bracewood.

Even Regulars Desert.

It does seem with the desertion of the Mantells, Robert and Genevieve, that a mean trick has been played upon our ancient friend Shakespeare. William must have pinned his faith to Mantell, especially after the giddy ones were wavering unsteadily and trying not to see the dollar sign writ on the word screen.

There was Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson and Sarah Bernhardt, two of the greatest, and Southern, whom rumor says has seen the handwriting on the wall and followed along the path of least resistance. There are those who say that Julia Marlowe's resignation is only a move screenward.

Is Shakespeare dead? It would seem, with the invasion of his loyal apostles into the film world, that William the Great is dead. Perhaps not exactly dead, but in a deep cataleptic sleep.

What has happened to the heavy Shakespearean tragedies? "King Lear" and "Richard the Third," that once brought crowded houses in their train, are folded carefully away and resting peacefully, while in the ascendant and monarch of all he surveys the new king, the motion picture, reigns.

The world moves in cycles, and perhaps some day Fortin, Ophelia and the rest of the Shakespearean characters will be awakened and take their places again in the hearts of their former fond portrayers.

Just now Shakespeare is passe. The leather-covered volumes once cherished by his adoring pupils are thrown carelessly into the bookcase and instead of absorbing pages of verse the one-time actor studies how to make up for the camera.

Robert Mantell ought to be ashamed to desert his old friend, say the few faithful who are trying to fan the dying Shakespeare embers into a bright blaze.

Out in Atlantic Highlands, in New Jersey, in the pretty little estate of Bracewood, sits Robert Bruce Mantell, the greatest living tragedian. Seated on his wide veranda, with his beautiful wife and chubby son, he forgets that such a person as William Shakespeare ever existed.

say a few words on his desertion of his lifelong friend.

"Shakespeare is dead or he is in a long, deep sleep. I have decided to keep abreast of the times and have accepted the flattering offer of a film company to appear upon the screen under its management in a series of modern photoplays. Today there is no general public for the tragedian, or, for that matter, for the actor of any other type. There is, of course, always a special public, but the rank and file of playgoers now go to see pictures instead of the theaters. I have no quarrel with the public, which has treated me royally in the past. It is simply a question of the times in which we live. When the gallery vanished it was a flaming sign. I read the doom of the legitimate stage. It is the survival of the fittest, and I want to be with the fittest."

China Benefited by War, Says Financial Authority

Land of the Orientals, Now Forced to Finance Self, Solves Own Problems and Develops Latent Power—Grows Strong in Process of Change.

THE war is proving to be a benefit to China. For many years the Chinese have been taught by the western nations to believe that China could not get along without their financing and their general guidance. But since the war has taken the attention of the European nations, China is discovering that she can get along all right without outside help, and this is bringing to her qualities of self-reliance and independence which are bound to have a highly beneficial effect on her national life and destiny.

So says Srinivas B. Wagle, an East Indian, for five years financial editor of the North China Daily News of Shanghai. He is an authority on Chinese financial affairs, and is the author of two books, "Finance in China" and "Chinese Currency and Banking," while a third volume, "Taxation in China," is now in press.

"China will not be pestered by outside powers for a while, and will have a chance to work out some of her problems for herself, gaining in strength as she does so. In the monetary field, for instance, China has been forced to the belief that she couldn't get along at all unless outside financial aid were extended to her. But since the war there are no more Chinese loans, no more Chinese financing in the old way.

"And what has happened? China has found money for herself. The people of China—and this shows how much confidence they have in the strength of the administration which is being given the country by President Yuan Shi-kai—are producing money of their own from hidden hoards.

"This money is chiefly in silver, although some gold has come out. With this money China is financing herself. The money which has thus come out in this time of national need would not be much for the United States, but it is enough for China. The nation now understands that she can manage to get along without foreign loans if she is only let alone by foreign powers.

"Take exports and imports. The war is greatly reducing exports, while the import trade is quite demoralized. China had been taught to believe that she had to have these imports to get along. But now that the imports are not coming as they did she is still managing to get along all right, and with positive benefit. China used to buy goods for which she could not pay, with the result that the national debt kept piling up, and it was a problem even to pay the interest on the debt.

"China has nothing tangible to show for an indebtedness so incurred. But now that the war has stopped the import trade China is better off. The dislocation of trade has been a benefit to the nation. In at least two directions China is increasing her manufactures as a result of the war—in flour and cotton yarn. She had manufactured these commodities before the war to a limited extent, but she has been increasing her output during the last year.

"The result of China's learning the lesson that she can walk without foreign help is that a national spirit is being infused into the administration and into the people—an infusion that was impossible before because of the retarding influence of foreigners, who are now too busy killing each other to smother China's national spirit any longer. Now that China has to get on alone, she is getting on alone. And thus it is that the war is resulting in a great thing for China—the awakening of the nation.

"As for President Yuan Shi-kai, he is giving China the strongest government she has had since 1845, when the country began to be the victim of western exploitation, and Nanking and Amoy were opened to trade.

"Yuan Shi-kai proved his strength in decisive fashion during the dangerous negotiations with Japan recently.

"Now, the Chinese people, as a whole, did not want to grant even the concessions which Japan demanded. They wanted war. And here the president proved his power. For he knew that a war with Japan would mean the overthrow of China. He knew that the best interests of China lay in parleying with Japan and trying to abate her demands as much as possible without war.

"Are the concessions thus wrung from China by Japan sufficiently extensive to have the ultimate result of turning China into something akin to a Japanese colony?" was asked.

"There are very excellent reasons," replied Mr. Wagle, "why China will not become a Japanese dependency. Japan wants no trouble with either Europe or America, and she realizes that if she went to extreme lengths in imposing her sovereignty on China that there might be a coalition of European powers against her.

"The idea that Japan wants the Philippines is erroneous—at least it is erroneous to suppose she wants them at the price of war with the United States. What Japan wants is a large area of good but sparsely settled land, where she can send colonists. Manchuria, for instance, suits Japan, and she is sending colonists there in considerable numbers."

"Turning to the war, Mr. Wagle said that he thought the conflict would have the result of paving the way to a better understanding between the white race and the colored.

"There are fashions in thought, and I believe the war will make entirely old-fashioned the thought that a man with a white skin must necessarily be superior to a man with a brown skin."

POLITICS---"THIS LARGE AND INTELLIGENT AUDIENCE"

EXPLORED COUNTRY OF HEAD HUNTERS

Remarkable Discoveries by Colonial Expeditions in Dutch New Guinea—Natives Are Very Primitive.

The Hague, Netherlands—(Correspondence of the Associated Press)—Reports of Dutch colonial expeditions which have recently completed the preliminary exploration of Dutch New Guinea being to light many stories of remarkable feats of endurance and discovery. For about seven years officers of the Dutch colonial army with European and native soldiers and coolies have been making a complete map of the colony and this work is now finished. Dutch New Guinea is about fourteen times as large as The Netherlands and was settled by a few Dutchmen as long ago as 1828, but was only officially recognized as a colony late last century. It comprises the greater part of the island of Papua in the South seas.

In the course of the map work which was attended by great difficulties and some loss of life, all the members of the expeditionary force underwent severe privations and suffered considerable sickness. Their lives were in danger from hostile natives as they passed up unknown rivers and cut their way through almost impenetrable virgin bush or clambered high mountains covered with eternal snow and never before ascended by man.

Natives Very Primitive. The country was found to be fairly thickly populated in some parts and the natives in the interior were among the most primitive in the world. Many of them had never before come into contact with white men and fled at their approach, so that the explorers in some instances could not obtain data as to their customs, language, measurements or mode of living. Nearly all were found to be in their absolute natural state and without clothing. The grown men's noses were pierced with bamboo canes and it appeared that this was done with great ceremony after a certain age had been attained. After feasting and dancing the first hole is pierced with a finely pointed sago thorn and the aperture is gradually enlarged in five operations until the requisite size has been reached for the insertion of the cane, which afterwards is never removed. The women of some tribes had a slight covering consisting of a short skirt of woven leaves.

Hosts of Dried Leaves. The natives appear to cling mostly to the banks of the many rivers, where they live in carefully constructed habitations built in the trees or on poles 20 or 30 feet high. In the far interior, however, many settlements were found composed of substantial buildings supported by thick tree trunks and covered with roofs of the large dried leaves of tropical plants. In fact several of the dwellings were divided into various apartments—a large one in the center for the men and boys and separate ones for each woman.

In the coastal lands the natives construct their huts, or rather arbors, in a long line like a street, each habitation supported by the next one. Many of the coast people had previously become acquainted with white men who had come to hunt birds of paradise, and they also knew that money was valuable.

The knowledge of metals among the natives is very limited and their cutting tools are stone axes and flint chisels. With these some of the tribesmen managed to carve ornaments on their proges or canoes, their ears and little figures for the adornment of their habitations.

Some kind of superstitious belief is prevalent in the interior, for each habitation in the settlement has its own god usually in the shape of a white turtle shell, on which is stuck a fish head.

Hunting and fishing are the main occupation of the natives, but in the interior many of the habits are surrounded by patches for the cultivation of root crops and sugarcane, which, with fish and sago, form the main food of the people, who are very fond of lobsters and mussels, which are plentiful.

Snakes and Alligators. Everywhere the country is infested with snakes and the rivers swarm with alligators, but animals are not numerous and comprise chiefly dogs, tame and wild hogs and kangaroos and other marsupials as well as many rats.

The conformation of the country varies from low-lying marsh lands pregnant with fever to high, healthy plateaus and mountains, such as the Wilhelmia peak, which was climbed by two Dutch officers and found to measure about 16,275 feet, nearly as high as Mount Blanc.

Several of the rivers flow very swiftly and are full of rapids and falls, so that the members of the detachments into which the exploring forces was divided had often to drag or carry their motorboat and native pirogues over land for long distances. The collections made by the explorers are very valuable in connection with the ethnography, sociology, botany and geology of the island colony and it is generally expected that the exploitation of the natural resources of the island will speedily follow the report of the military pioneers of civilization who have now ended their work.

A Future Business Man.

(From The Kansas City Star) One day a man who was interested in social work went into the tenement district, and wishing to see a certain man but having only a general idea as to where he lives, approached a small boy for information. "My boy," he remarked in a kind and gentle tone to the youngster, "can you show me where Mr. Schmidtwitz lives?" "Yes, sir," was the quick reply of the boy, scenting a nickel tip. "Come right with me, sir."

The boy entered an adjacent doorway and started to go up the difficult stair. Up four flights he went, the visitor breathlessly following, and finally paused at an open door. "This is the door, sir," said the boy, wistfully looking for the coin. "Mr. Schmidtwitz lives there." "Looks as if we had stacked up against hard luck," remarked the visitor, peering into the room. "Mr. Schmidtwitz doesn't appear to be here."

"No, sir," was the startling rejoinder of the boy. "That was him sittin' down on the front doorstep when we come in."

Dared to Advise the Kaiser.

A narrative in The Temps, of Paris, written by a neutral subject who has just returned from Germany suggests the disgrace of Marshal von Hindenburg.

The writer explains that in the best informed circles in Germany it is believed that "Von Hindenburg was disgraced through declaring to the Kaiser that the war appeared to him to have reached the point where Germany could not obtain any further advantages. He advised the Kaiser to find some means of stopping this endless slaughter.

"The Kaiser told him to hold his tongue and dismissed him from his presence and immediately appointed General von Mackensen to take his place."

Sketches from Life . . . By Temple

Willie Goes to Sleep On the War Question.

GERMAN SOCIALISTS GET CONSIDERATION

As Result of War They Are Treated More Leniently by Kaiser's Courts.

Zurich, Switzerland—(Correspondence of the Associated Press)—German socialists are pointing to the trial of Heinrich Hunke, one of their leaders, as an illustration of the growing consideration which the authorities have for the socialist party. Hunke was arrested on charge of "attempting to incite soldiers of the army to be disobedient and mutinous, and to induce civilians to disobey the laws of the land."

Although he was convicted and sentenced to nine months imprisonment, the socialists point out that the accused leader fared far better than even he himself had expected. Hunke is president of the German Engineers and Firemen's federation, and one of the most powerful trade union men in the country. The fact that the authorities did not bring Hunke before a court martial is hailed as a victory for the socialists, while his escape with a sentence of only nine months from a court which had the power of sending him to penal servitude for life is also regarded with satisfaction by Hunke's followers.

The trial took place in Bremen and was heard in camera, but a general impression of the case can be obtained from the judgment which was pronounced in open court by the senior judge.

The charge of attempting to induce soldiers to be disobedient and mutinous cannot be distinguished in its entirety, the accused charged with the violation of this offense in so far as his propaganda happened to reach soldiers and sailors of the army and navy. His real offense lies in having distributed and causing to be distributed copies of a pamphlet entitled "Our Principal Enemy is at Home, among the workmen of the West-Shipbuilding Company, who are engaged in manufacturing vessels of war for the imperial navy."

It only has been proved that the accused was directly connected with the distribution of about one hundred copies of this pamphlet, and although it is probable that he was responsible for the circulation of many more, we in this court can only deal with the number actually circulated. This circumstance operates in favor of the accused in not being out-punished to him.

The pamphlet contains passages which constitute an incitement to disobedience of the laws as well as to other passages which are calculated to disturb the public peace by stirring up different classes of the population against one another. The accused has committed a crime against his fatherland in not being out-punished to him.

The court has made it plain that the circulation of this pamphlet, to persuade the workmen of Germany to create a strike between those whom the working class in Germany have led to create a movement in favor of the government, is a crime against the public peace and through meetings and public demonstrations.

IT'S NO JOKE TO CLASH WITH THE TURKISH LAW

Especially in These Days When Country Is Controlled by Military.

Constantinople—(Correspondence of the Associated Press)—It is well these days in Turkey to heed the law, especially military law. Europeans who have lived in Turkey long either fear or respect Turkish law and court procedure. Most of them feared it in the past and fear it today because the abolition of the capitulations has made foreigners amenable to the Turkish law and courts and neither of them are things to be trifled with.

As an example of what Turkish military law is the following should suffice. The trial of the 19th instant contains this account of the commandant of Constantinople. The condemned "Police" named Selim, censor in the postoffice of Galata, to three years imprisonment and removal from office, for having "described bank notes from letters given him to censor."

Mehmed Izzet, tailor at Kara Giumruk, for two months imprisonment, for having "described bank notes from letters given him to censor." Panayot, son of Karabet, a restaurant keeper at Bagdad, for having placed a letter into a package for delivery to Hassan son of Karabet, to six months imprisonment, and Spirou, of Yalova, hair-dresser at Prinkipo, to six months imprisonment, for having "described bank notes from letters given him to censor."

Yani Aspari, baker at Kapali Forchou, to six months imprisonment for having mixed bran into his bread. Kapiolu and Marago, of the village of Tehanik in Silivri, to six months imprisonment for having made "difficulties for the police." For the same reason were condemned to three months imprisonment Adnan and his wife Zafiriche and one Arite.

Hassan son of Karabet, a restaurant keeper at Bagdad, for having placed a letter into a package for delivery by mail service, despite the inhibition of the police. Onnik, a fireman at Kaikoku, to two months imprisonment, for having "described bank notes from letters given him to censor." Onnik was fined 50 Turkish basias.

While some of the sentences seem unduly severe, Turk and non-Turk suffer alike.

An illegal act in the sense of the existing provisions of military law now in force throughout the country. It is quite clear that Hunke circulated the pamphlet with full knowledge of its contents and of its probable effect on its readers so that he committed his offense deliberately and with set purpose. All these circumstances have led the court to the conclusion that a term of imprisonment for nine months is the least penalty which we can inflict on the accused.
