THIS IS LAST WEEK OF CITY CAMPAIGN

Candidates Are on Home Stretch and Indications Are That There Will Be Several Close Races.

This is the last week for the city campaign and the candidates for aldermen and councilmen are on the home stretch. The election takes place next Thursday and the polls will open at 7 o'clock in the morning and close at 7 o'clock in the evening.

There are three aldermen, ten councilmen and a general manager for the waterworks department to be elected. There are nine contests. The primary is known as the "White Primary," and any citizen who is "free white and twenty-one" can vote. Those nominated will be elected at the general city election to be held the first Wednesday in December and doubtless without opposition.

Registration for the Primary. There is a total registration for the election of 10,801, including 393 negroes. The registration by wards is as follows:

Ward	White	Colored	Total
First ward	4,425	118	4,543
Second ward	1,494	31	1,525
Third ward	1,695	40	1,735
Fourth ward	825	146	971
Fifth ward	874	17	891
Sixth ward	1,259	14	1,273
Seventh ward	1,085	2	1,087
Eighth ward	1,056	2	1,058
Ninth ward	1,095	3	1,098
Tenth ward	652	19	671

The polling places are as follows: First Ward—Corner Madison avenue and West Hunter street. Second Ward—90 South Pryor street. Third Ward—Corner East Hunter and Fraser streets. Fourth Ward—Precinct A, corner Highland avenue and North Boulevard; precinct B, Ponce de Leon avenue, near North Boulevard.

The Candidates in the Election. The candidates are as follows: For General Manager of the Waterworks—E. Z. Smith. For Alderman First Ward—J. R. Seawright. For Councilman First Ward—Charles Alverson.

For Councilman Second Ward—J. J. L. For Councilman Third Ward—Fred Woodall, O. T. Camp and Ed L. Harling. For Councilman Fourth Ward—A. W. Fairbank and Nelson T. Pratt.

For Councilman Eighth Ward—Frank Reynolds. For Councilman Ninth Ward—J. L. Carpenter and S. E. Davidson. For Alderman Tenth Ward—G. D. Hanna and Nelson T. Pratt.

For Councilman Tenth Ward—A. T. Peacock and Carl Dolvin. Of the candidates, the following stand for re-election: Alderman Seawright and Councilmen Alverson, Fairbank, Dallas, Reynolds and Peacock.

JOHN M. PARKER IN RACE FOR LA. GOVERNORSHIP

New Orleans, September 25.—John M. Parker, of New Orleans, planter and cotton factor, intimate friend of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and leader of the progressive party in Louisiana, tonight announced his candidacy for governor. The election of state officers will take place next February.

Governor Harris Announces He Will Include Prohibition in Extra Session Call; Five Other Matters Will Be Acted On Measures to Be Submitted in Following Order: First, Appropriations; Second, Prohibition; Third, Western and Atlantic; Fourth, Cotton Warehouse Bill; Fifth, Revision of Game Laws; Sixth, Auto License Tax Law.

CHIEF EXECUTIVE SAYS SESSION SHOULD CLOSE WITHIN TWENTY DAYS

Formal Call for Extra Session Will Be Issued Monday or Tuesday, With November 1 Set as the Day for Convening—Expected Move for Revision of Rules of the House Will Precipitate Big Fight.

Governor Harris will issue his call for the extra session of the general assembly either Monday or Tuesday. His call will stipulate that the general assembly in extra session shall consider six subjects, as follows: First—Appropriations, general, special and deficiency. Second—Prohibition. Third—Western and Atlantic railroad commission for re-issuing the state's property. Fourth—State cotton warehouse bill. Fifth—Revision of the state game laws for the protection of the shrimp and prawn industry of the coast counties. Sixth—The revision of the state automobile license tax law, forestalling the possibility of the supreme court handing down a decision in cases now pending declaring the present law unconstitutional, and thereby leaving the state without an automobile license tax law.

HARRIS ISSUES STATEMENT

The governor issued a statement Saturday afternoon, stipulating the foregoing measures which will be included in his call for the general assembly to convene in extra session November 1.

With the enumeration of the matters for the consideration of the extra session, Governor Harris issued a statement explaining his position in including the matters set forth above, and in refusing to include some seventeen other matters which he was asked to include in his call.

This statement declares that the governor believes that all these matters mentioned are emergency. As to his position on prohibition, he states that he has been asked by two-thirds of the members of the house to include prohibition and the statement sets forth that these members believe this legislation to be emergency. Governor Harris further gives as his reason for including this matter, over which there has been tremendous pressure brought to bear on both sides, that it was the issue at stake that brought about the extra session, and intimates that the subversion of the will of the majority by the minority had bearing in his decision in this matter.

The governor's statement concludes with the belief that this legislation can be concluded in twenty days, unless obstructive tactics are used. That this could be done is true, but prospects appear to be for a fight which will carry the extra session for many days more than twenty if not for the entire fifty days to which the session is limited by the constitution.

FIGHT IS EXPECTED

It appears that however the minority may feel now upon their prospects for winning out upon another tactical fight against the prohibition wishes of the majority, they will not die without a struggle. It is known upon good authority that certain leading members of the minority wing feel that it would be folly for them to have fought prohibition to the extent of provoking an extra session and then to lie down before the issue when it is fevored in the extra session. It seems entirely likely, therefore, that there will be another fight on prohibition. How long this fight can hold out or how long the opposition would be disposed to make it hold out is another question.

If the appropriations bill is taken up and passed before prohibition comes up for a vote, it seems probable that the opposition will attempt to hold out against prohibition until the end of the session. At any rate the opposition will make an attempt to have the

Worsham Plans Campaign Against the Boll Weevil; "Big Drive" Begins Oct. 4

E. Lee Worsham, Georgia entomologist, and his associates are making preparations for one of the most sweeping and effective campaigns which has ever been waged against the boll weevil in any state. Meetings and measures heretofore have been merely preliminary to the "big drive," so to speak. The real campaign will be put under way October 4.

The reason is given by the United States bureau of entomology, whose conservative estimate is that the damage of the boll weevil to Dixie amounts to not less than $200,000,000.

Damage to Cotton Crop. Of this damage the bureau estimates that $100,000,000 has been done to the cotton crop itself. The other $100,000,000 of damage is to cotton seed oil mills and other by-product enterprises.

Until this fall Georgia was free from any of this burden imposed by the Mexican boll weevil. Georgia had not expected to have to face the pest for two years yet, anticipating that the bug would be exterminated.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE BARRED TO DUMBA

Washington, September 25.—Ambassador Penfield at Vienna has been instructed to make clear to the Austrian government informally that the United States must insist on the recall of Dr. Dumba, the Austrian ambassador here, and that his departure "on leave of absence" would not be satisfactory.

From messages exchanged between Ambassador Penfield and the state department it is apparent that the Austrian government misunderstood the desires of the United States. It was intimated at first to Ambassador Penfield that the Austrian government might recall Dr. Dumba on leave of absence and might desire safe conduct for him.

Dr. Dumba himself telegraphed for such safe conduct a few days later, informing the state department that he had been granted leave of absence. No action was taken on his request, but it was forwarded to Ambassador Penfield.

Wilson May Not Call Extra Senate Session

Washington, September 25.—President Wilson probably will not call a special session of the senate. Administration officials said today he had not finally made up his mind, however.

Some senators have urged that the senate be called early that it might revise its rules to facilitate debate before the regular session. Many administration leaders, however, have strongly advised against it.

MENDENHALL TELLS OF AUTO TRAGEDY

Denies Killing Mrs. Eliot and Daughter—Admits Taking Girl to Chicago. Says Girl Did Shooting.

Clearwater, Fla., September 25.—Declaring that he had nothing to do with the death of Mrs. Besse Eliot and her daughter, Susie Eliot, who were killed on the old Green Springs road near here on the night of July 27, J. Mendenhall, defendant on a charge of murder in connection with the death of the two women, dramatically described the tragedy this afternoon when he went on the stand in his own behalf.

Mendenhall admitted evidence up to the point where he arrived at the new Green Springs road. He supplied the missing link in the chain of circumstantial evidence by describing what took place between the time the car stopped until he was arrested at his home in Clearwater near midnight. Mendenhall said that Mrs. Eliot took a revolver from his pocket and declaring that she was tired of the things Mendenhall had been telling her mother, said she would end it all. Mendenhall said he grasped both her wrists, the revolver was discharged four times and Miss Eliot fell back on the seat. The pistol dropped into the road, he said. Mrs. Eliot exclaimed: "Susie, are you hurt?" and when Susie failed to answer, the defendant said Mrs. Eliot swooned.

Objected to Firing Car.

"I said to Stempie, 'We must hurry to Tampa. We must get away from here.' I saw Stempie go to the front of the car where the gas tank was located, come back with a hat full of gasoline, throw it into the tonneau and light it."

Mendenhall said he demurred to setting fire to the car, but that Stempie said it was the only thing to do as they could save the car exploded and the ladies were unable to escape. Mendenhall said he left the scene of the fire with Stempie, and left him just before getting in his brother-in-law's car, a few hundred yards from where the fatal explosion occurred.

Mendenhall explained the difference in old Green Springs road by saying that he went there for an uninterrupted conference with Mrs. Eliot and her daughter, seeking a settlement of charges which he said Miss Eliot had threatened to bring against him in violation of the May fire agreement.

The defendant, using a member of counsel for the state as a dummy, illustrated the manner he was holding Miss Eliot when the first shot was fired. He was standing directly back of her with bond hands raised. It was in this position the defendant said the four shots were fired.

Went to Chicago With Girl.

Mendenhall denied that he had promised to divorce his wife and marry the girl, with whom he is alleged to have had improper relations. He said the divorce suggestion came from the Eliot side. He said he had suggested a monetary compromise.

Girl Wanted Bottle of Beer.

Mendenhall said the girl insisted that he carry a bottle of beer in the car for her. That when her mother discovered the beer and Mendenhall told her it was her daughter's, the girl reproached him and in her anger grabbed his revolver out of his pocket. He said there was a crash of glass, several shots and the women crumpled up in the bottom of the car.

Following according to Mendenhall, the chauffeur came to the rear of the car and threw gasoline over the women's forms and set it afire, remarking that they had done this to themselves. He said he and thus escape doubtless. The defendant testified Stempie's action, but the chauffeur was resolute. That they then went to where Hammock, Mendenhall's brother-in-law, had agreed to meet him by pre-arrangement of $1,000.

43 PER CENT GAIN SHOWN IN CLEARINGS OVER WEEK IN 1914

Indicating the return to normal conditions in Atlanta and the southeast, Atlanta's bank clearings for the week just ended showed an increase of 43 per cent over the clearings for the corresponding week of last year, when clearings were more than 40 per cent off.

Last week's clearings showed a total of $14,222,192.34, as against $9,941,476.87 for the corresponding week of last year, an increase of $4,280,715.47. Saturday showed a gain of $714,103.82 over the corresponding day of last year.

Terrific Bombardments Preceded the Advance Of the Allied Infantry

Anglo-French Troops Engage the Germans in Hand-to-Hand Combats in Front of and in the Trenches—In Champagne French Take First Line of German Trenches and Are Still Advancing—British Troops Attacking at Several Points and British Warships Shelling German Positions on Belgian Coast—In the East, Russians Seem to Have Upper Hand Everywhere Except in the North.

London, September 25.—British and French troops have united in a far-reaching offensive movement against the German entrenchments on the western front. One of the most terrific bombardments of the war has preceded the advance of the infantry, who have engaged the Germans in hand-to-hand combats in front of and in the trenches.

The most important action probably has taken place in Champagne, where the French threw thousands of shells into the German trenches, shelters, blockhouses and batteries, and then began a fierce assault on the opposing lines between the Suippes and the Aisne rivers.

BALKANS TURNED INTO ARMED CAMP BUT NO BLOWS YET

Bulgaria Declares She Is Preparing to Defend Her Rights and Intends No Aggressive Action.

GREAT DEVELOPMENTS SAID TO BE IMMINENT

Relief Caused in Greece by Order to Mobilize—Greek-Bulgar War Believed to Be Inevitable—Germany Is Very Bitter Against Rumania.

London, September 25.—The situation in the Balkans is developing with considerable celerity. The Bulgarian mobilization, as well as the Greek, is proceeding and Athens announces that King Constantine and Premier Venizelos have reached a complete agreement as to the course of Greece. This is understood in the Greek capital to provide for the maintenance of Greece's treaty obligations. The treaty which Greece and Serbia signed is said to call for Greek assistance to Serbia should Serbia be attacked by Bulgaria.

So far as the Balkans are concerned, the present crisis is considered more suited to military than diplomatic action, one minister stating that great developments are imminent. The latest advices respecting the Balkan situation would seem to indicate that Bulgaria is not yet ready to abandon her neutral attitude, although she intends that that neutrality shall be, like that of Holland and Switzerland, armed. A semi-official statement from Sofia says that Bulgaria has not the slightest aggressive intention, but is firmly resolved to defend her rights and independence.

Berlin dispatches say that both the Greek and Bulgarian mobilizations are considered there as measures to bring about armed neutrality, similar to that of Holland and Switzerland. German newspapers express, resentment at the attitude of Rumania, which is regarded as far from friendly to the central powers.

GREEK-BULGAR WAR REGARDED AS CERTAIN.

Athens, September 25.—(Via London.) King Constantine and Premier Venizelos, at a conference today, reached a complete agreement in regard to both

The extent of this assault is not recorded in the French official communication, which, however, declares that the first line of German positions on that front has been occupied and that the French are still making progress. There has been particularly hard fighting also to the north of Arras, where the Anglo-French troops have gained a foothold at several points in the German lines.

BRITISH FORCES STILL ATTACKING. The German war office officially announces that the Anglo-French artillery preparation was of great intensity and that the long-expected offensive movement by the allies has begun. The Germans, however, claim to have repulsed the British on the northern wing in the vicinity of Ypres in a battle which evidently was with the bayonet. But the British are still attacking northeast and southeast of Armentieres and north of La Bassée canal. Simultaneously the British warships have opened more or less continuous bombardment of Ostend, Zeebrugge and other points on the Belgian coast and it is rumored that an enterprise is being attempted which may change the whole aspect of the war on the western front. The activity displayed by the British fleet apparently has not been left undisputed, dispatches from Holland saying that heavy firing has been

JUDGE FITE ISSUES MORE INJUNCTIONS

Murray Courthouse Case Further Complicated by Restraining Orders Against County Officials.

Chatsworth Ga., September 25.—(Special.)—News today, that Judge A. W. Fite recently reversed by the supreme court in the Murray county courthouse case has issued three additional injunctions further complicating the matter, caused much surprise and considerable excitement here, where feelings had already been aroused by the imprisonment of the three county commissioners and the county attorney on a contempt charge growing out of the case.

Tax Collector Enjoined.

One of the orders is against the tax collector of Murray county prohibiting him from collecting any part of the tax levied for courthouse purposes, other against the county treasurer to prevent that official from paying out attorney fees for services rendered by County Attorney Jesse M. Sellers in the previous litigation growing out of the courthouse controversy, and a third against the county commissioners D. R. Dunn, T. M. Hemphill and J. A. Mc Gee, wherein the contractor is made a party defendant setting forth substantially the same grounds advanced in the tax levy case now in the supreme court and not yet decided by that court.

Commissioners Still In Jail.

The county commissioners and their attorney are still in jail, as the injunctions issued by the supreme court or by Judge Fite prior to October 6 will not be able to attend to the hearing on the named injunction suits, the contempt matter however, is to be heard on October 6.

In reversing Judge Fite's injunction restraining the county commissioners from proceeding with the hearing on the courthouse case, the headnote of the supreme court's decision reads: "The jurisdiction of county affairs county commissioners are vested by law with a broad discretion and the revising power of a judge of the superior court should be exercised with caution and no interference had unless it be shown that the county authorities are abusing the discretion vested in them by law in the instant case such abuse of discretion by them was not made to appear and the court erred in enjoining the execution of the courthouse as proposed by the county commissioners."

general appropriations bill disposed of before anything else. This would leave the track clear for a fight.

The fact that the appropriations bill is set at the head of the list in the governor's call for the extra session does not necessarily mean that it will be the first to reach a vote in the general assembly.

This bill, as all other bills must be referred to a committee and be recommended back to the assembly by the committee before it can be taken up. The second and third time and be placed upon its passage. Therefore if it should happen that the prohibition bills or other matters are recommended back from a committee before the appropriations bill they would precede this measure upon the calendar.

The question of what the committees may do also brings up another possibility which would be a fight on the part of the majority wing to have prohibition measures referred to a committee other than the temperance committee.

CHANGE OF RULES.

It seems highly probable however that there will be a very strenuous fight on the floor of the house before any matters of legislation ever come up. This fight will likely be precipitated on the first day of the session and will be for a change of the rules of the house abolishing the rules under which the minority held sway at the last session and adopting the rules of the national house which put an effective end to the whip hand of Uncle Joe Cannon. The minority will hold tenaciously to the view that the house in extra session is working under the same rules as the regular session and that therefore a three-

Kraft's Last Concert Today; Sheldon to Play Next Sunday

C. A. Sheldon, Jr., new organist, and Edwin Arthur Kraft, who has resigned to take attractive new position.

Dr. Edwin Arthur Kraft, Atlanta city organist, plays his 76th and last free organ concert at the Auditorium Armory, this afternoon and leaves Monday for Cleveland, Ohio, where he will be the organist of Trinity cathedral, one of the most notable posts of its kind in America.

Charles A. Sheldon, Jr. of Atlanta, immediately succeeds Dr. Kraft as city organist by action of the Atlanta Music Festival association of which Colonel W. L. Peel is president and Mr. Sheldon will begin his free concert next week, the first Sunday in October. Mr. Sheldon is a native Georgian who has won for himself an eminent standing as a musician here and elsewhere where he has given concerts. He studied under the best masters in New York and has been the organist at Trinity church, Atlanta, for eleven years. Three years preceding that he was the organist at St. Luke's and has also been organist at the Jewish temple for about four years.

In addition to being a finished player, he has composed many pieces of organ music, the most recent one of which was dedicated to Dr. Kraft and played for the first time at a free organ concert. Mr. Sheldon has played frequently on the great organ at the Auditorium and is thoroughly familiar with the instrument. Among the occasions on which he has played was with the Metropolitan orchestra in connection with the great cathedral scene in "Faust."

Dr. Kraft came to Atlanta in January, 1914 from Trinity cathedral Cleveland and the same distinguished position.

The Georgia Normal and Industrial college, Georgia's college for women with the largest student body ever assembled in Georgia, the greatest woman's college in the south. The Oconee Brick and Tile company, the largest manufacturer of reproof building tile and drain pipe in the state. The Georgia Military college, the largest and best prep school for boys in Georgia. The largest dairy in Georgia. The State Reformatory for Wayward Boys. We will thank you to publish this invitation in your local paper for Milledgeville is anxious to entertain a large delegation from your town and county Thursday night, September 30. Hoping that you will join the tour and come to see us and with the cordial assurance of a warm welcome from our people we are, Yours very truly, EDWARD A. TIGNER, EDWARD T. MULLIGAN, CARL VINSON, Committees.

BOND FOR CHEWNING.

Hearing of Appeal for New Trial October 12.

Esra Chewning, who was found guilty of manslaughter and sentenced to a term of fifteen years at the last term of DeKalb superior court for killing C. B. Bishop, at Scottsdale, has made bond in the amount of $7,500. Twelve citizens of the county went on the bond. Judge Smith will hear the appeal of Chewning's lawyers for a new trial on October 12.

CHAUFFEUR RESPONSIBLE FOR INJURIES IF DOOR OF AUTO IS LEFT OPEN

If an auto driver leaves the door of his car open and it strikes a pedestrian it is reckless running of an auto according to the ruling of Recorder Johnson Saturday afternoon in a case against Paul Hughes, the driver of a jitney.

Hughes left the door of his car open and at the corner of Mitchell and Pyle streets it struck and injured Clarence Mavner a youth of 16 on Davis street. You must keep the doors of your car closed, the recorder said to Hughes as he fined him $5.75.

Atlanta National Bank

Celebrates Its

Fiftieth Anniversary

To Our Friends And Patrons---

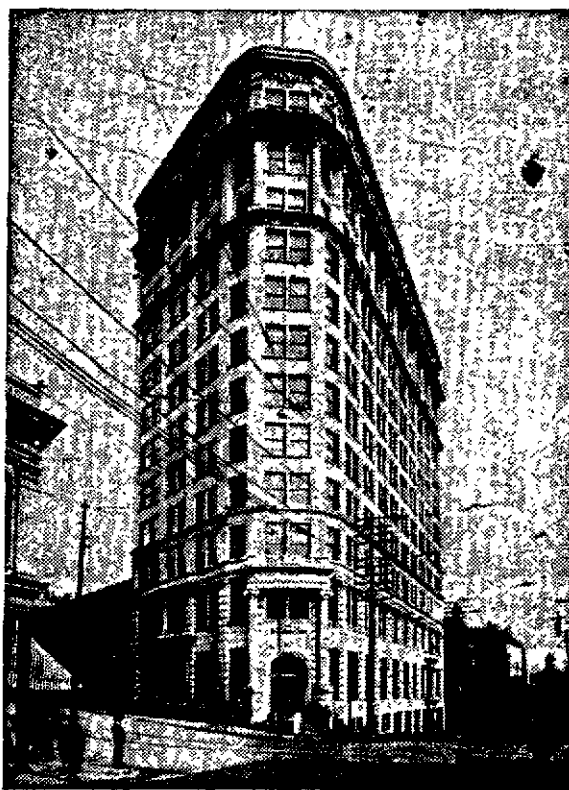

IN COMMEMORATION of our Fiftieth Anniversary, we are going to hold "Open House," so to speak, on MONDAY and TUESDAY, September 27 and 28, and we are pleased to extend a cordial and especial invitation to our friends and patrons to "drop in" socially on us during these two days.

We believe we are more than justified in the sincere pride we feel in the growth and strength of the Atlanta National Bank—and we are quite sure scores and scores of our friends share this pride with us, and will take advantage of the opportunity to drop by and at least wish us "many happy returns of the day."

Since the organization of this institution—in 1865—up to this good hour, it has been the aim and purpose of its officers and management to accord to every patron that uniform courtesy which makes transactions with a bank a real pleasure. We believe we have lived up to that purpose. We believe thousands of our patrons feel the same way about it.

So, on MONDAY and TUESDAY next, if you feel like it, come in with a smile and a hearty handshake—you will be met with a like hearty welcome. Come in—get better acquainted with our corps of more than half a hundred active workers—ask as many questions as you like about our system and method of doing business.

We will be glad to see you—and will try to make you feel at home.

Our Service and Our Departments

THE HISTORY of the Atlanta National Bank affords an object lesson in sound, conservative management. It has, in its fifty years of service as a financial institution, never failed for a day to open its doors for business, nor failed to meet its every obligation without delay or embarrassment. Even during the dark years of '73, '93, and 1907, nor during its processes of removal from time to time to larger quarters, has there ever been a day when it was not ready and eager for business.

In May, 1903, owing to demands for larger quarters, its business and effects were moved into its present handsome home, the property of the bank, at the corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets, in the very heart of the shopping and business district.

During the past half century the bank has handled many of the most important banking transactions that have ever been developed in the south. And it can truly be said that the same unvarying conservatism and painstaking care exercised in these important interests is characteristic of the handling of each separate account intrusted to the care of this institution.

At present there are sixteen distinct departments to the bank.

The Ladies' Department and the Savings Department are conveniently located in the front of the main banking room. In the Savings Department interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of 3½ per cent, compounded semi-annually.

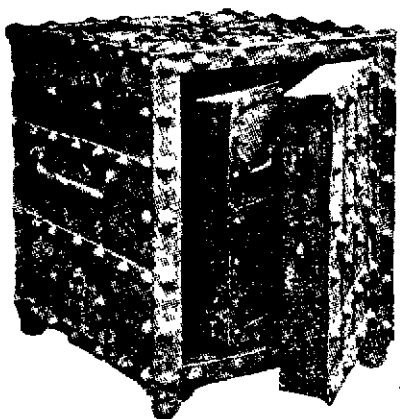

Travelers' Cheques and Letters of Credit are issued at nominal cost.

Foreign and Domestic Exchange bought and sold.

Interest is allowed on Certificates of Deposit at the rate of 3 per cent per annum from date of issue.

1865 : Our Deposit Vault

Here is reproduced a picture of the first safe used by General Alfred Austell, as a deposit vault, when the First National bank was started. It received the first deposit in the cotton states. It is now an object of unusual interest, with its two great keys, which unlocked the combination safe. This safe, with its keys, as well as the old and original ledger used by the bank, will be on exhibit in the lobby of the bank Monday and Tuesday.

SEE HOW WE HAVE GROWN

1915 : Our Modern Vault

Herewith is shown the great door to our new fire and burglar-proof safe deposit vault. In this modern vault we offer safe deposit boxes and storage space at reasonable prices. Private apartments for ladies and for patrons who desire to clip coupons or examine the contents of their boxes, are conveniently located on the same floor with the vault. We especially invite our friends and patrons to visit us Monday and Tuesday and see for themselves with what absolute security we protect your deposits and your valuables.

S. C. CLYATT FOUND AFTER FOUR YEARS

Man Thought Murdered Near Valdosta in 1911 Discovered in Real Estate Business in Birmingham.

Valdosta, Ga., September 25—(Special)—Disclosures made public here today show that Sam C. Clyatt, formerly a prominent citizen and well-known business man of this section, whose mysterious disappearance four years ago created one of the greatest sensations ever experienced here, is alive and well at Birmingham, Ala.

Mr. Clyatt was believed to have been murdered on the road between this city and Habra, and his body buried in some of the "lime sinks" or underground water courses in that neighborhood. Heavy rewards were offered for his body, and a prolonged search was made of the fields, woods and streams.

Found by Chief Dampier. Chief of Police Dampier, who has been interested in the search for the missing man during the long interval since his disappearance, traced him to various places in Oklahoma, California and other western states, but was never absolutely sure of his identity. Finally, he traced him to Birmingham, where, it is understood, he has been for some months engaged in the real estate business. People who know him well have met and talked with him there.

No explanation is made as to the cause of Mr. Clyatt's action, except on the score of business worry and financial embarrassment. It is believed that he became discouraged and, throwing everything aside, decided to leave his family with no money, and at first believed he had been murdered, though later it is said that they have been in correspondence with him.

Coat and Buggy Found. Clyatt disappeared in the fall of 1911. He left late in the afternoon to drive into the country on a business matter, carrying $200 with him. That night his horse found its way to Milledgeville, six miles north of here. A search disclosed his buggy with its wheels locked against a telephone pole on the road near the Willacochee river. His coat was lying on the ground with the sleeves and pockets turned inside out, and a short distance away his shoes were found. Clyatt was formerly in business at Unadilla and Tifton, and a profound sensation was created by his disappearance.

TWO HOTEL GUESTS COME NEAR DEATH FROM ASPHYXIATION

Jim Acree and R. L. Jones, of Maysville, are patients at Grady hospital as the result of asphyxiation in a room in the Henderson hotel, 41 1/2 Peachtree street, Saturday morning. The pulmonator was used to supply oxygen to their lungs during the day, and the attending physician reported that their condition was much improved last night.

Acree and Jones and a Mr. Smith, of Greenville, registered at the Henderson Friday night after an evening at the Bijou theater. Acree asked to be called at 6 o'clock Saturday morning and when Mrs. E. Jones, of the hotel, knocked at his door at that hour he asked her also to awaken his brother, who had slept in the next room. Upon failing to meet a response from either of the rooms, Mrs. Jones raised a window and an outflow of gas greeted her. She summoned Traffic Policeman Womack from Five Points, who found the men still alive, and sent them to Grady hospital.

Judge Puts Prisoner On His Honor to Send Fine to Police Chief

"So you came here from the country to visit your mother, and now you come to see her and now the mother you come to see has got to pay your fine," said Recorder Johnson Saturday afternoon to P. P. Cleland, of Maysville, Ga. Cleland acknowledged that such was the case.

"I left my country home, my wife and two little children with $10 in my pocket," stated the prisoner, "and I came to Atlanta to see my mother. Last night I got in bad company and drank near beer. I awoke this morning and found myself in a cell and all my money gone."

$3,000 Damages Asked For Injuries Received By Her Three Children

Mrs. Mary Gunn has entered suit in superior court against the street railway for injuries to her three children, Ewan, Jesse and Devin, who are alleged to have been hurt when an East Point trolley car collided with a wagon in which they were riding at Forsyth and Peters streets. One thousand dollars damage is asked for each child.

TAX RECEIVER WATKINS IS BURIED AT FAIRBURN

Fairburn, Ga., September 25—(Special)—Walter Watkins, aged 55, fifteen years tax receiver of Campbell county, was buried Saturday afternoon with Masonic honors in the presence of a large crowd of relatives and friends at Antioch Methodist church after impressive funeral services by Rev. John Speer, of the Methodist church, and Rev. Charles J. Short, of the Baptist church. He is survived by eight sons, Thaddeus, Tom, Jack, Bill, Clayton, Ralph and Glenn, by four daughters, Mrs. W. M. Parrance, Mrs. Lois Duke, Miss Kate and Miss Lulu Watkins, and several grandchildren. He was eight times consecutively elected tax receiver and his death leaves that office vacant.

Best Dressers Know Him

Among Atlanta's young business men perhaps none are wider known or more popular than T. R. Harmon of the firm of Veitze & Harmon well-known tailors, both in the city and throughout the state. Mr. Harmon declares that notwithstanding business conditions in the past have not been all that could be desired, yet his company has had a highly satisfactory business and that he is more than pleased with the success it has made. He declares that their stock of imported woolsens is more complete and attractive this season than any they have ever carried, and believes that the coming fall business is going to show even a greater improvement in all lines than the most optimistic hope for.

Sister Blandina Farel Dead

Mobile, Ala., September 25—(Special)—Blandina Farel, for twenty years a well-known member of the Catholic Order of Little Sisters of the Poor, died here today at the local home of the order, aged 42. She was Mrs. Margaret Farel and was a native of Newport, Md. Interment will be in Mobile.

Clyatt disappeared in the fall of 1911. He left late in the afternoon to drive into the country on a business matter, carrying $200 with him. That night his horse found its way to Milledgeville, six miles north of here. A search disclosed his buggy with its wheels locked against a telephone pole on the road near the Willacochee river. CONSPIRACY TO KILL R. H. HOLLAND IS HELD FOR STABBING BROTHER Seven Alleged Moonshiners of Gordon County Placed Under Arrest.

Charged with conspiracy to kill Marion Kirby, a government moonshine informer, seven men were arrested Thursday in Gordon county following a "man hunt" instituted by local revenue agents Carson and Willard Mulkey, two of the defendants, were brought to the Fulton county jail in default of bail after they had been bound over by United States Commissioner T. W. Kellogg at Jasper, Friday.

The other five, W. D. Mulkey, father of the Mulkey brothers, his other two sons, Tom and Will Mulkey and Bud and Gill Callahan were admitted to bond through the assistance of government officials that they might support their needy families. Marion Kirby said his father was attacked at the Mulkey home by the combined male members of the Callahan and Mulkey families about two weeks ago, according to their story. The old man fled into the underbrush, where he was followed by his son who was nearly blind, with the beating he had received. A paring shot from one of his assailants filled his back full of bullets. It is claimed that the two men were attacked because they had informed the government about illicit distilling conducted in the Long Branch district.

WOMAN BADLY HURT BY AUTO AT SCENE OF FORMER ACCIDENT

At the corner of Auburn avenue and Peachtree street, the same place where Mrs. L. Patterson, of Macon, Ga., was fatally injured by an automobile Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. M. Gable, aged 45, of 129 Spruce street, was struck and probably fatally hurt by an automobile driven by Mrs. S. G. Saturday morning at 10:45 o'clock. Mrs. Touchstone went to police headquarters with an officer, where a case was booked against her for reckless driving. Mrs. Gable was taken to

W. T. Holland May Die—Officers Disprove Fake Hold-Up Story.

Columbus, Ga., September 25—(Special)—An alleged hold-up by negroes in which W. T. Holland, a young farmer, was perhaps fatally stabbed early this morning developed, under investigation of officers, to be a fake and that Holland was stabbed by his brother, R. H. Holland, following a heated argument as they were driving home.

Early Saturday morning W. T. Holland, R. H. Holland and another brother, G. G. Holland, were driving home after spending most of the night in Columbus. About 4 miles from the city, on the investigation of the officers, the three got into an argument which resulted in R. H. Holland's stabbing his brother W. T. Holland. The men were first arrested on suspicion. The story concerning the hold-up was thin, and that started the investigation which finally found an eye-witness, T. H. Holland and his brother held in the city jail were told of the investigation and they admitted the story was a fake. R. H. Holland who is one armed claimed self defense saying that his brother struck him. Doctors were attacked because they had informed the government about illicit distilling conducted in the Long Branch district.

Grady Hospital in Ambulance, Where Her Injuries Were Dressing by Physicians

The Grady hospital in the ambulance, where her injuries were dressing by physicians. The accident attracted a large crowd. Miss Lillie Touchstone was in the car with her mother and both stated at police headquarters that the accident was entirely unavoidable and that Mrs. Gable stepped from behind another car directly in the path of their machine. The hospital authorities discovered Mrs. Gable's identity through the identification card she carried from the Clearing House for the unemployed. She had applied on Friday for sewing and as is customary with the Clearing House, a record was taken of her address, how she might be reached most promptly and other essential information. A record was taken of her address, how she might be reached most promptly and other essential information. DOYLE AND LUDERUS LEADING BATTERS

Both Players Are Hitting at a 319 Clip—Tommy Long Drops to the Ninth Place.

Fred Luderus, of the Phillies, who has been leading the batters in the National League for the past several weeks, is now sharing the topmost rank of the batting order with Larry Doyle of the Cincinnati Reds. They are running neck and neck with averages of .319. Tommy Long fell down the list considerably during the past week and is now rooting in ninth place. Players with averages better than .319 through the games of Wednesday, September 25, are:

CITY OF KULTUR ROASTED BY COBB

ship over Boston. Of course, they all did their best against us in the game. In the last series we played in Cleveland on the way east five Cleveland players came to the clubhouse afterwards and told me they were sorry they had had a tough game against our club.

"Of course, we had to put all we had into it," declared one "big" player, "I hated to beat you." The fight in the subway to the clubhouse between Cleveland and Boston players some time ago is still remembered in Cleveland. I know what the cause of that was, but I don't care to discuss it here. We would not be right if we were dead now.

Now, in justice to many Boston fans, I want to say that thousands of the "City of Kultura" are fan and criticized the actions of those who stormed the field and surrounded me after the game. These fellows followed the actions of the reporters who staged the disgraceful reception to the Tigers in Boston.

The Red Sox were treated fair and square in Detroit on their last trip there, as always. Shore pitched a wonderful game against our club in that series, and he was liberally applauded by the fans in the stands for his fine work on that occasion. He won. There was no feeling shown, no coops, no rabs, no mobbing players, etc., such as we met in Boston. I can say that the Boston reporters well laid out the Sox, and I am sure that the White Sox and Tigers are following any consolation to them, and these two teams have a great deal to do with Boston winning the pennant and showing a share in the world's series receipts with the players.

The tactics of the Boston club in 1912, both during the season and the world's series, kept the crowd from going to Detroit for the championship. The fans became disgusted at their treatment. It is a shame. I don't mind a pitcher "pegging" at me once in a while, and I will take my chances on getting "beamed," but when he tries to do it with pitch after pitch it is too much. I myself will admit it looks now as if the Tigers had blown the championship. We had all worked hard to win it, and Adams was always striving for the best hitters on the Athletics whenever he was in the box against Mack's team.

We had a good chance to win the flag when we went to Boston for that last series. If we had taken a major-league game, the Red Sox would have curled up. I really believe. If we had split even we would have given them all we had our hearts in it. I really believe this, and they proved for me. They gave us some reception. I myself

ST. LOUIS 10, BUFFALO 4.
St. Louis, September 25.—A batting festival which began with Herzberg's recruit from the International League, held St. Louis to six hits, and the visitors took three runs in the game from the locals 10 to 4. Saltee, who replaced Doak in the fourth, after four runs had been scored, New York but one hit. Umpire Byron stopped the game in the third inning to order Herzberg to leave the New York bench for loud talking.

NEWARK 4, PITTSBURG 2.
Pittsburg, September 25.—Pittsburg and Newark divided a double-header today, the visitors winning the first 4 to 2 and the locals the last 1 to 0. Effective pitching by Teubach was responsible for the home team's defeat in the first. In the second game Knetzer, for the locals, allowed only four hits.

New Atlanta Automobile Truck

Attracts Favorable Attention

The first models of trucks being turned out by Atlanta's new automobile firm, E. G. Willingham's Sons, appeared on the streets Friday and attracted favorable comment from all who have examined them. A shop force of nearly 100 men will be at work in the firm's new assembling plant, corner of Whitehall and Stewart avenues.

"Our trucks are just a little ahead of the time," said E. G. Willingham. "Our engineers and designers have spent months in working out the details of these motor trucks. They have the latest designs and all the 1916 improvements and equipments. We will not begin the delivery of orders until November 1. At that time we shall appear aggressively on the market, which we intend to confine to the southern states. We have built these trucks with the single eye on the demands of southern trucking conditions and we feel that we have been eminently successful in producing a truck which will please in every way." The Willingham trucks will be of two types—one-ton and two-ton capacity. One of their distinguishing features is that they will weigh from 500 to 1,200 pounds less than any other trucks of the same capacities now on the market. They are supplied with a valve in the head motor, which is considered the best in use, and they also have an internal gear drive.

The engineer and designer of the Willingham trucks is George Whiteside. For seven years he was with the Thomas Motor company and was associated with the truck designing department of the American Locomotive works.

The large assembling plant of E. G. Willingham's Sons is rapidly nearing completion. It will be a three-story structure and in design and detail will be one of the up-to-date plants of the south. The firm is gradually disposing of their lumber stock, as they intend to discard this line altogether.

don't mind playing before hostile, hollering crowds. It makes any man go harder, but when a fellow has to dodge pitched balls aimed at his head and pop bottles aimed at his head, too, it is too much. I don't mind a pitcher "pegging" at me once in a while, and I will take my chances on getting "beamed," but when he tries to do it with pitch after pitch it is too much. I myself will admit it looks now as if the Tigers had blown the championship. We had all worked hard to win it, and Adams was always striving for the best hitters on the Athletics whenever he was in the box against Mack's team.

"SMOKY JOE" IS STILL ON TOP

Although Out of the Game for Some Time, His Record Is Still the Best—Boston Pitchers Hold First Six Places in Standing.

"Smoky Joe" Wood, of the Red Sox, continues to lead the American League pitchers in games won and lost. Wood has won thirteen games to date, and has dropped out four. He has been out of the game for quite a while due to a lame right arm. Wood is expected to get into shape to participate in the world series with the Phillies. Boston continues to have the best pitching staff in the league. The first six places in the standing are:

ALABAMA ELEVEN POINTING TO TECH

Yellow Jackets Are One Team the Alabamians Are Set on Defeating--Sewanee the Other.

By Ann Rountree, Jr.
Tuscaloosa, Ala., September 25—(Special)—On next Saturday Coach Kelly will make his initial bow to southern football eleven when the modeled Crimson eleven meets on the campus of the offsprings of Eugene L. Catlett the old Auburn center, who this year is directing the destinies of the Howard college Baptists at Birmingham. Much is expected of Kelly and favorably, very favorably, has been the impression he has made through his systematic, thorough and earnest training program. And the opening bout will somewhat reveal the extent of improvement wrought by the Irishman from the middle west. It will not be a fair test, coming as it does so early in the season, but it will afford evidence of the latent ability amassed on this year's team.

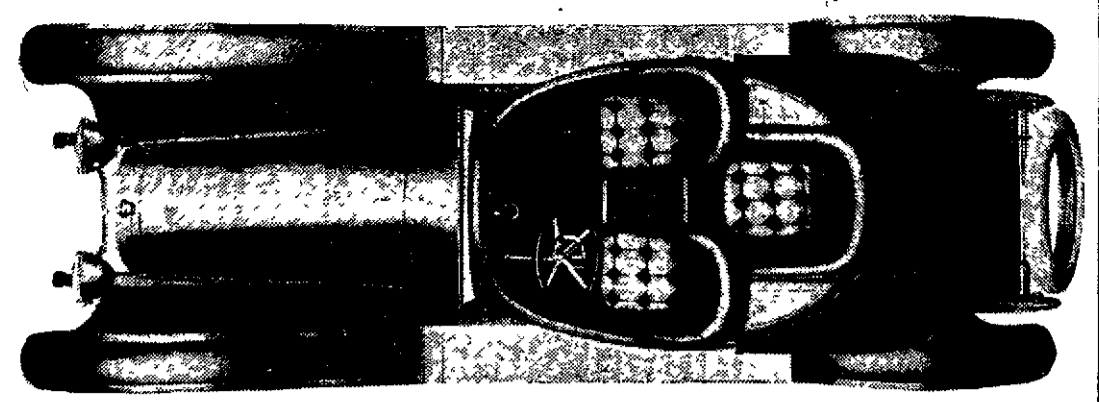

In preparation for the opening of the season Kelly has been pushing his varsity squad the past week. Five scrimmages have been held on the campus and yesterday a regulation affair was staged in order to test the stamina of those composing the ten-back. Whittlesby, tackle, another substitute of last fall, and Stevenson, a student at Tech two years ago, who matriculated last week, has strengthened the backfield, but the same time has complicated matters in this department. Before the advent of Stevenson it appeared that Taylor and Whitely, halfbacks, Brannon, fullback, and Hagan, quarterback, would comprise the varsity plugging brigade for the time being, but the unexpected strength of this new candidate cannot be overlooked and should be continued as a regular in a place which assuredly have to be cleared for him.

Including Stevenson four more players were added to the training table, these being Grisham, end, a substitute of last season, Ervin, of Mobile back, Whittlesby, tackle, another substitute of last fall, and Stevenson. The return of Tubby Barnette, varsity center for three years, and variety end for a like period, has brightened up things from a Crimson viewpoint. Barnette resumed his old place at center on the varsity squad Thursday, but Love, who has been down with malaria is having to take things easy for the time being. This means that Maynor, who was shifted from guard to fill the shoes of Barnette, will either act as understudy or will be tried again at guard in case he fails to make good. Earl Burke, who injured his ankle in scrimmage two weeks ago, is hobbling about the field and in another week will be able to get back into the line.

Grooming for Tech.
Although the Crimson will meet eight teams this fall, there are only two that are being looked forward to with any great anticipation, and these are the frolics with Georgia Tech and Sewanee, traditional rivals and conquerors of Alabama. The games with Howard, Birmingham college, Tulane and Mississippi colleges are not causing any great concern with the University of Mississippi, a new addition to the schedule, does not vie with Tech and Sewanee on this account. The Texas game at Austin is being undertaken because of the financial benefit resulting therefrom.

But it is with Sewanee and Tech strongly in mind that the Crimson squad is being groomed. Last year Alabama was successful against Tech in Birmingham for the first time in more than ten years and at Atlanta this November Kelly is anxious to repeat. And Sewanee is the other on the Crimson blacklist. Not since 1896, or thereabouts, have the Crimson waved in exultation over the Purple, although a draw was gleamed three years back, and a victory over Sewanee will alone

Here Is the "So-Sha-Belle" Roadster

HERE IS A UNIQUE NEW CAR.

What the Haynes Auto Co. call their "So-Sha-Belle" roadster is now on exhibition at 239 Peachtree street, the new headquarters of the southern department. It is of very original design, seating three people, but in a unique way. The front seat is divided, with a third seat just behind the division. All passengers are enclosed within the top when up, making a very sociable arrangement. This design seems ideal for a touring roadster, for, in addition to the large storage compartment at the rear, there is space at each side of the third seat for considerable luggage. This is the first of this model to come south, the demand having been so great as to prevent earlier delivery. It is built on the standard 55-horsepower, 6-cylinder chassis, and judging from the attention already attracted, it should be a popular model in the south. It is priced at $750.00, and is equipped with top down.

FIRESTONE CONVENTION HELD AT THE FACTORY

Wylie West and Eight Salesmen Leave Atlanta Tonight for Annual Conference.

Wylie West, of the Atlanta branch, Firestone Tire and Rubber company, accompanied by the following salesmen, who cover the southern states for the Atlanta branch, W. R. Stroupe, F. M. Sallay, E. E. Elieby, B. D. Williams, T. L. Moore, W. E. Billie, R. D. Caldwell and E. C. Buchanan, will leave tonight for the annual sales conference at the factory.

Salesmen of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company hold a big convention at Akron, Ohio, a few years ago, at the first annual meeting, about thirty men were present. This year's meeting, on September 28, 29 and 30, there will be more than 300 representatives from all over the world.

These men will attend general conferences at which they will be addressed by company executives, branch managers and salesmen. Each man will spend a generous amount of time in the factory studying most thoroughly the construction and manufacture of Firestone tires. They will see at the home plant five large additions under construction. These additions will provide over seven acres of additional floor space, and will allow an increase in the output of Firestone pneumatic tires from 1,800 to 12,000 a day. These 4,500 additional tires per day is a larger output than that permitted by the original new Firestone plant erected on its present site four years ago.

These hundreds of men with mutual interests, through the daily conferences, will gain abundant and valuable information. It is intended that each man will use this information to the advantage of the customers in his territory.

A large investment is represented by these days of study and exchange of ideas. The result will be adequate dividends in better service for tire users. Moreover, it means a more up-to-date and better informed organization. The real reason for it all is that satisfied customers constitute the cornerstone of any great business.

make the season a success. So with these two games in mind, Kelly is printing his first Alabama football program and it is to him and the regenerated eleven that the Crimson students and alumni are looking for the attainment of a long line of humiliations.

NEWBERRY SWAMPED BY GEORGIA ELEVEN

Red and Black Runs Up 76 to 0 Count Against the Carolinians.

Athens, Ga., September 25—(Special)—Georgia's first football game, a victory over Newberry college, South Carolina, 76 to 0, revealed full promise for Red and Black strength in some respects. The first touchdown was made in less than four minutes and in the first ten-minute quarter 32 points were scored. Newberry spent little time on Georgia territory and never got a first down, while Georgia was forced to punt but once. The lighter team offered little resistance, Georgia piercing the line, stroking the ends and forward passing easily. Captain Henderson did not play. Many substitutes were used by Cunningham. Powell was easily kept out, getting long gains through the line, as much as twenty yards at a time. Dezenhoff, Holzendorf and Davis did good work also.

The Lineup.
Georgia: Powell, K. H. B.; Holzendorf, R. H. B.; Dorsey, Coleman, Q. B.; Neville, Beasley, F. B.
Newberry: O'Kelley, F. B.; Garmon, Brown, L. G.; Wiggins, Thrash, L. T.; Thompson, Floyd, L. E.; Myers, H. B.; McNeill, Culbreath, R. G.; Tate, Fox, R. T.; Dezenhoff, Davis, Marshall, Hutchinson, L. "KING" ON 800-MILE RUN, MAKES A PERFECT SCORE
The local agency of the King Motor Car company has just received a telegram from San Francisco, announcing that the "King Eight," sealed in high by Mayor Sebastian and County Sealer Fuller, had made an absolutely perfect score on a run of 800 miles from Santa Barbara to San Diego, from Venice by the Sea to Mount Arrowhead. The run was under the supervision of the automobile club officials and carried a full load over mountain grade. The King officials here are much pleased over the fine showing of their car.

Princeton 13, Georgetown 0.
Princeton, N. J., September 25—Princeton's eleven took advantage of Georgetown's weakness and dominated the game today and defeated the visitors 13 to 0 in the first football game of the season. The Princeton players enabled Princeton to score the first tally while flashing runs by Ames and Moore coupled with forward passes gave the Princeton eleven the lead. The weather was warm for football.

Penn 7, West Virginia 0.
Philadelphia, September 25—A touchdown following a forward pass gave the University of Pennsylvania a victory over West Virginia university today in the first football game of the season on Franklin field 7 to 0. The only score of the contest came early in the first quarter. A forward pass from fullback Berry to Left Halfback Ross.

Harvard 39, Colby 6.
Cambridge, Mass., September 25—After the first and second Harvard eleven had beaten Colby decisively in the initial game of the season at the stadium today, the Maine players marched 58 yards through the third Crimson string for a touchdown in the fourth period. The final score was Harvard 39, Colby 6.

Yale 37, Maine 0.
New Haven, Conn., September 25—Yale easily defeated the University of Maine, 37 to 0, in the opening football game of the season here today. Under Thompson, a second string man at quarter, the Blue played consistently in the first two periods, rolling up 30 points by old-fashioned line plunging and triple and forward passes. With Bentley and Walsby at quarter in the last two periods, Yale's play became ragged.

VIRGINIA PROSPECTS ARE BRIGHTEST EVER

Ninety Candidates Out for the Team—Coach Verner Having Trouble Picking Best.

By W. R. Paie.
Charlottesville, Va., September 25—(Special)—The football season of 1915 is about to be the best ever in the history of the University of Virginia. That is, judging by early indications. Coach Verner, however, is not so sure. He is not making any boast that might go against the 1915 team. He is not making any boast that might go against the 1915 team. He is not making any boast that might go against the 1915 team.

The Schedule.
September 25—Radcliff-Macon at University.
October 2—Yale, at New Haven.
October 9—Richmond college at University.
October 16—Harvard at Cambridge.
October 23—Georgia, at Atlanta.
October 30—V. M. I. at University.
November 6—Vanderbilt at University.
November 13—South Carolina at Columbia S. C.
November 20—North Carolina, at Richmond.

Good Line Nucleus.
That leaves White, L. E. Ward, L. T. Coleman, and G. Moore, Jr. G. of last year's team, is forming a good nucleus for Verner to build on. Then at center there is Brown, of the 1913 team, and the 1914 team, and the 1915 team, and the 1916 team, and the 1917 team, and the 1918 team, and the 1919 team, and the 1920 team, and the 1921 team, Bill Never Did Care for Paris.

(From The Philadelphia Press.)
If the Kaiser really said the war would end in October he must have given up the idea of eating any Christmas dinner in Paris.

MOTORCYCLE SHOW IS GREAT SUCCESS, SAYS GUS CASTLE

Gus Castle, manager of the Harley-Davidson southern branch, returned from the Chicago motorcycle show Friday. He reports that the show was the biggest and most successful exclusive motorcycle and bicycle show ever held. The attendance of dealers was very large, and the Chicago papers contained accounts daily of the extraordinary large attendance which attracted considerable comment.

According to Mr. Castle, the coming year will evidently be a banner one in both bicycles and motorcycles. The exhibit of the Harley-Davidson Motor company attracted especial attention, as their's was one of the largest in the show.

The improvements made on the new high-power Harley-Davidsons came through quite a number of points and in detail. The new stream line tank which has been added on of almost double the capacity of the last year's tank doing away with the sharp corners as heretofore, producing a beautiful rounded tank which is very attractive to the eye.

The frames have been strengthened quite considerably extra reinforcements being placed in several of the joints.

As the United States postoffice authorities have decided that R. F. D. carriers can continue to use their motorcycles for carrying the mails, provided a side or side van is attached, special attention has been given to the construction of the Harley-Davidson in order to take care of this extra strain.

In addition to the three speed twin high-duty, 11-horse power machine, the Harley-Davidson is building a three-speed single, which has all the features of the three-speed twin, and is built with the idea of handling side car or side van.

There were quite a number of light weights shown at the show, but the general tendency of the dealer was that they preferred to stick to the old standards which have given such perfect service and satisfaction during the past several seasons. The Harley-Davidson southern branch received Saturday afternoon sample models of each one of the Harley-Davidson 1916 output, which will be on exhibition during the coming week, and with the return of good times and general confidence being restored all throughout the south, Manager Castle, of the Harley-Davidson southern branch, feels certain that 1916 will be the biggest year he has ever had.

Y. M. C. A. VOLLEY BALL

The September leagues at the Young Men's Christian association are running close. They are on the last leg of the race, and no team has shown any tendency to run away with its respective group. In fact, some that looked like stragglers at the beginning are pulling up in the top-notch class. The league bids fair to show more than one hairbreadth finish.

After the past week's games the standing is:

Men's Division.
Senior Business Men—Dean 70, Bamford 55, Johnstone 48, Lipscomb 41.
Junior Business Men—McClelland 41, Shearer 32, Robinson 16, Rhodes 16.

MASONS WILL LAY STONE OF CONYERS' NEW SCHOOL

Conyers, Ga., September 25.—(Special.)—The cornerstone of the new $40,000 public school building of Conyers will be laid by the Masons Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Grand Master N. H. Ballou, of Brunswick, will conduct the ceremony, assisted by Past Grand Masters T. H. Jeffries, Atlanta, and George M. Napier, Fatur. The local lodge has invited members of all nearby lodges to meet with them on this occasion.

The town of Dyas, once a Klondike metropolis, has dwindled down to a population of seven persons.

Many County Boards Named For the Meeting in Macon In the Interest of Festival

The Georgia Harvest Festival headquarters were busy yesterday receiving and filing letters and other communications from county commissioners in all parts of Georgia who had accepted the appointment as chairman of their respective county advisory boards of seven members. These boards named by the chairman of the county commissioners will meet in Macon next Wednesday and Thursday afternoon with the festival's local officers.

"Not one has refused to serve as chairman of his county board, but on the other hand, they are all heartily in sympathy with our work, and will co-operate in every way possible," declared President Beattom Davidson.

"We want these county directors to gather in Macon during the fall convention of the Georgia Chamber of Commerce and outline to us such features as would interest the people of their respective communities," said President Davidson. "This is not purely a local celebration. It is for Georgia and her people, and we want them to state just what they want."

Conference in Macon.
President Davidson, General Manager Clarke and other officers of the festival association will be in Macon Wednesday and Thursday to meet with the county boards and advise with them as to the best means of entertaining their home folks during the festival week, beginning November 15.

Brooks county, one of the most progressive agricultural counties of the state, was one of the first in the state to name an advisory board. Chairman E. J. Young appointed: John Stanley, R. C. McIntosh, R. L. Groover, R. E. Bower, R. E. L. Wilson and Herbert Stubbs.

Thomas county will send the following board: C. S. Parker, of Thomasville; W. L. Adams, Pavo; J. J. Parramon, Boston; Dr. J. T. Chilpepper, Winton; W. E. Stamba, Oakesknee, and H. C. Copeland, of Metcalf.

Douglas county, in another section of the state, announces the following board to cooperate with the festival workers: T. R. Whitley, chairman; Z. T. Dake, J. S. Abercrombie, W. J. Camp, W. C. Herndon, T. M. Johnston and Nesbit Harper.

Madison county, through Chairman George O. Griggs, has named the following board: S. J. Carmichael, Comer; N. J. Nelms, Dantelaville; B. F. Anthony, F. E. Howell, Rebecca; S. J. W. Livingston, H. A. Tarver, A. P. Vason, W. L. Davis, J. J. Hoffman, H. W. Johnson and H. Gortatzer.

Turner county, through Chairman W. A. Greer, has named W. D. Fountain, Gwynmore; F. E. Howell, Rebecca; W. L. Metcalf, Ashburn; D. H. Davis, Ashburn, and W. T. Williams, Gwynmore.

Cobb county has chosen the following board: J. N. Gantt, chairman; W. D. Freese, J. E. Howell, and N. E. Gantt, M. D. Hodges, W. A. Florence and W. W. Hancock.

Ware county will have the following representation: C. R. Manes, chairman; J. C. Evans and R. S. Mathews, Warrenton; W. E. Howell and N. E. McGinty, Norwood; Denham Cason, Jewells, and W. W. Stephens, Mayfield.

Committees Are Named.
Ware county will have the following representation: C. R. Manes, chairman; J. C. Evans and R. S. Mathews, Warrenton; W. E. Howell and N. E. McGinty, Norwood; Denham Cason, Jewells, and W. W. Stephens, Mayfield.

At one of the balls will be a fashion show, with the elite of Atlanta on dress parade, attired in the latest from the fashion centers of the country, displaying the latest in men's and women's wear.

The automobile committee is at work veloped that the city has an arrangement whereby an attorney, Walter C. Hendrix, has paid a commission for the collection of marshals' debts, and that his commission is 15 per cent in one class of debts and 25 per cent in another. It further developed that Mr. Hendrix pays an assistant 5 per cent on the 15 per cent debts and 7 1/2 per cent on the 25 per cent debts; that the assistant does all the work and that the difference in commission goes to Mr. Hendrix.

When these were stated to be the facts, the immediately raised the point that since the assistant does the work and acts as a smaller commission than Mr. Hendrix, the arrangement calls for why should the city employ the assistant direct, making him an addition to the city marshals' force, and save the net commission realized by Mr. Hendrix.

It understood perfectly that marshals' debts, after they have been secured by the city marshal, pass out of his hands into the hands of the city clerk. It also perfectly understood that the city marshal heretofore has not been called on to collect these debts. Therefore I was not, as Mr. Fuller says, in the statement, "shooting off my mouth about a matter I knew nothing about." For was I criticizing the marshals' office because it has not been collecting marshals' debts?

It seemed to me the city could have the debts collected whether they under the present arrangement with Mr. Hendrix. That was all. In the course of the discussion, I might have used the term "marshals' debts," but certainly in view of the marshals' prompting my assistant, could not have applied to the city marshals. I trust this statement will be as I said at the outset, place both of us right before the public.

Since the Announcement of the Packard TWIN-SIX there has been a tremendous advance in the cost of most of our raw materials, especially leather, aluminum, high grades of steel, etc. We cannot continue present prices except at a loss.

It is, of course, out of the question to compromise Packard quality—which has been maintained steadfastly for sixteen years. Consequently we have adopted the only alternative and advanced the prices by the amount of the increase in the cost of materials.

These new prices for Packard Twin-Six cars cannot and will not be reduced during the current season. They are as follows:

	The 1-35	The 1-25

Bryan Newkirk Made Advertising Manager Montgomery Journal

Bryan W. Newkirk, one of the most popular and successful advertising men of the city, has resigned from The Constitution staff to take charge of the advertising department of The Montgomery Journal. He left last week to assume his new duties.

Mr. Newkirk's phenomenal rise in the newspaper game is itself ample proof of his Atlanta colleagues that he was secured an advertising manager of the Montgomery paper.

Beginning in the "classified" department of The Constitution he soon became recognized as one of the ablest solicitors in the city, and an expert in every phase of advertising. While regretting to see him leave Atlanta, his friends here congratulate him upon his promotion.

How Far has Your Car run on HYATT QUIET BEARINGS?

$1000.00 IN GOLD FOR HYATT SERVICE RECORDS

HYATT Quiet Bearings were installed in the first automobiles made in America. They were in the first Olds, the first Ford, the first King, the first Hynes, and many others.

The automobile that is being preserved in the Smithsonian Institution at Washington, as the official example of the very first successful motor car, is equipped with Hyatt Bearings.

From the time of the first car until the present, Hyatt Bearings have been recognized as an essential part of all types of automobiles. Today they are working quietly and unobtrusively in the vast majority of all cars manufactured in America.

Take your car, with its Hyatt Bearings for example. You probably have driven it many thousands of miles, day and night, under every imaginable condition of road and weather. Yet, for all you know, there are no bearings in it anywhere. You never have seen them or heard them and they never have given any trouble.

In the laboratories of our great factory at Newark, New Jersey, the largest exclusive roller bearing plant in the world, we have run Hyatt Bearings thousands of miles under every conceivable test. Through these tests, they never have failed to give consistent, care-free service.

To supplement this engineering data, we wish to know how many miles your automobile has traveled in actual service upon its Hyatt Bearings.

We are ready to pay for this information. We have set aside one thousand dollars to be distributed in awards to owners of cars showing the greatest mileage on Hyatt Bearings.

First	$500.00
Second	200.00
Third	100.00
Fourth	50.00
Fifth	30.00
Sixth	20.00
Ten Ten ($10 each)	100.00
Total	$1000.00

To enter your car in this contest, it is necessary to use an official entry form which may be secured from the Hyatt Roller Bearing Co. With this form we will send a folder giving complete information about the contest.

This contest will close November 1, 1915, and all entry blanks must bear postmark not later than that date.

Automobile men well known throughout the industry, and having no connection whatever with the Hyatt Roller Bearing Co., will act as judges of this contest. Their names will be announced later. No one associated in any way with the Hyatt Roller Bearing Co. is eligible in the competition.

The car you are driving may have traveled more miles on its Hyatt Bearings than any other automobile. Its record at least may bring you one of the liberal cash awards.

Write today for the official form and enter this contest.

LUBOVSKA, Who Translates Into Danes the Ancient Hieroglyphic Language of the Egyptians Newest Wonderful Russian Dancer Is a Reincarnation From the Days of Ptolemy, When She Was an Egyptian Priestess.

As An Exponent of the "Mourning Dance" Photos © by Underwood and Underwood.

A THOUSAND iron throats sung raucous midnight to New York. A thousand times repeated, the message vibrated, lingered, blended in a tangled ribbon of sound; it fluttered along Broadway, threading in and out of gilded doors that swung toward gilded mirrors; it penetrated the Gayest Restaurant and the lights dropped, so revelers sat round tables in pools of shadow. The orchestra stopped on a crashing chord and began to play a humming monotone; a flutter went round the room. Lubovska was going to dance. She glided across the stage, her white robe billowing. Almost disappointing to those who hadn't seen her before; a little too slender, with dark, plain face and lips that never smiled. Yet she was very graceful; she seemed part of the droning music.

Time rolled back like a curtain. The stars hung low like luminous butterflies. A wind came out of the south, bearing a hint of far-flung spaces. Was sandalwood spicing the air? And the muffled beating—that was the pulsing of the Night Song. Night and a white stone parapet against the sky and a weird strain weaving through the beating of tambourines. And a dancer, like a spirit of expression, posturing on her white feet, telling of the miracle of Night's descent with her hands, her head, her wonderful lithe form. Egypt worshiped the Night.

It was over. She was only the little Russian dancer—the spirit—too slender, with dark, plain face and lips that never smiled. But by her art they had lived in Egypt through the measure of a droning song.

in a crowd; when you're alone; sometimes it seems brought about by the presence of certain persons; again it's apparently the result of certain events. A tone of voice, a gesture—and you're puzzling over a half-memory. When did it happen before? Where? Did you dream that it happened?

The "memory" is explained variously. It's all but obliterated impression re-established by similarities of circumstance, struggling for expression; prenatal impression; a rift in the haze of the present which allows glimpses of previous existence. That last explanation is the one a little Russian girl made to herself when she first learned to dance and soon after she heard of such things as fatalism and reincarnation.

The dances of her own country came to her about as naturally as walking; pleasure and grief, mysticism, religious emotion—she expressed them all in rhythm and movement. Then she began to weave stories into her dancing, working out legends of her race.

About this time Lubovska, being sixteen years old, decided to marry. Domesticity lasted seven months; then her husband died. Being the widowed daughter of a Russian household isn't the most attractive life in the world. Besides the little dancer's art began to call again. So she started out to see the world. She worked her way through Russia to China and sailed rather aimlessly for South America. She found herself in the land of the Incas where the past hangs heavy. Her imagination was fired again; the elusive feeling of having been there before was awakened. She explored the country from corner to corner and her sense of bewilderment ceased to be fasinating and became troublesome. Finally she decided that she'd arrive at no solution of her problem in this place where the problem was most insistent. So she sailed for Mexico.

And in Mexico her dancing immediately found favor. Native dancers tried to pick up her Russian steps. She attempted a slow dance made up of a series of postures that she copied from figures cut on vases and pottery of the south. The effect was sensational. Porfirio Diaz invited her to his court at Chapultepec, and insisted that she remain there while she went on studying the prehistoric Indians.

It was quite by accident that she happened upon a story of ancient Egypt. Someone had presented the court with illustrations and literature on late expeditions; there were pictures of statues dug from the ancient tombs, and descriptions of the temples and amphorae telling the history of the country.

And immediately the "feeling" that had become a problem returned more than ever puzzling. She gathered all she could find on Egypt and shut herself up to work it all out. Then there was a three-day period of thought; she saw no one—not even the servant who came to the door begging her to take a little food. She refused everything excepting water. During the three days and the first two nights she sat without moving, staring straight ahead, just thinking. The third night she fell asleep. And during the sleep the answer to all her questions came to her in a dream, she said.

She tells of the dream. "It was all hazy at first," she says. "I seemed to be walking in a sort of moonlight that was like liquid silver. Then, when I could see, I knew it was only the air clear and wonderful as crystal. All around me there were spaces, yellow red, rolling like the waves of the sea. And against the sky line were palm trees growing taller than any I had ever seen.

"I seemed to be walking slowly along a beaten roadway. Sometimes the wind caught up sand, fine and white as powder, and hurled it at me. And I knew I was walking along the boundary of Sahara.

"There was a palace of white marble at the end of my journey and silk covered couches and slaves and all the luxury of past ages. Princes were there, too, under the waving fans. And I danced for them—but as I'd never danced before. I was a priestess and my dance was the expression of joy, for one of them had returned from the war, victorious.

"When I awakened I knew it hadn't been an ordinary dream. It was memory stirring—stirring to expression through a sleep of thousands of years. I remembered other things, too. You see, I lived in the shadow of the Pyramids in the days of Menes, the first historical king of Egypt. I recall, clearly as I remember the events of yesterday, the events of my life there. I was the dancer in his court—the one who expressed the "Mourning Dance" when death visited the household and the "Dance of Joy" when victory or celebration was upon the land. Every gesture meant something then; the manner of holding the hands, the movements of the feet—everything was a definite expression.

"I'm trying to do those dances over again now for the benefit of a materialistic age. Not sensation, but education, is my aim. I feel as though I'm doing something for the glory of my home—Egypt, you know—when I do those dances now."

SCIENCE AND NEAR-SCIENCE UP-TO-DATE

Variable Bodies Are Misnamed and Their Rays Lost to Earth When Other Luminaries Pass, if Latest Theory Announced Proves True

Theory Announced Proves True

IS THE secret of variable stars—the greatest unsolved problem of astronomy—to be revealed by an amateur astronomer of 19 years?

In a little second story observatory in Hyde Park Frederick C. Leonard, a student at the University of Chicago, is seeking the solution of this century-old puzzle. If he is as successful in this as he has been with other projects during his career as a seeker after knowledge for the sake of knowledge it is as good as solved.

The explanation of most variable stars, as offered by Leonard, is that they are caused by the passage of a smaller and less luminous body between the telescope and the star being observed. The brilliance of the more distant star is dimmed during the period of its partial eclipse, returning to its normal state after the passage of the smaller body. Because of this changing condition it is classed as a varying star.

"This is not the only theory of variable stars, but it appears to be the most plausible solution of the problem presented by many of them," said Leonard when asked about this phase of his work. "It is probable that some stars of varying brilliance are of the sort that are cooling, or dying out, and their actions are similar to those of a dying ember. On occasions they flare up with fresh fire, then slowly become dimmer.

"Close observation of certain of the variable stars reveals the fact that their changes come about at certain fixed periods. They are dimmed at regular intervals and resume their former brightness in an equally definite manner. These stars evidently are affected by the passage of a smaller and less brilliant body before them.

"The 'dying out' stars are less regular in their variations and, as a consequence, their changes could not be brought about by the passage of another body before them. It seems much more probable that the changes are those of a cooling star."

Although Leonard is but 19 years old he is far from inexperienced in astronomy. Ever since the age of 7 he has been a student of the heavenly bodies. Beginning with the bits of astronomy that could be picked from a Webster's dictionary, he has pursued his subject through all the roads and byways of knowledge, as a student at the University of Chicago, as a founder of the Society for Practical Astronomy, as a member of the British Astronomical Association and as a member of several other scientific bodies.

Leonard was but 14 years old when he founded the Society for Practical Astronomy. The organization today boasts 108 members and publishes its own official organ, The Monthly Register of the Society for Practical Astronomy, of which he is editor, finds its way into some of the most remote corners of the globe.

The observatory in which the young astronomer now works is of his own designing and is perched on the roof of his home. It is a structure of wood and canvas, and is equipped with a four-inch equatorial telescope and accessories that permit of photographic, micrometric and spectroscopic investigation.

As a scientist Leonard possesses all the prejudices of a scientist against a "mercenary use of his knowledge." His quest for knowledge is solely for the purpose of increasing the sum of human wisdom. Astronomy, he admits, is the most impractical of the sciences, but at the same time the most interesting.

"It is unlikely that any astronomical discovery ever will have any important bearing upon the arts or the practical things of life," said he. "A man who enters the field of astronomy with the idea of earning a livelihood with it is doomed to disappointment. Its study is purely a search for knowledge for the sake of knowledge."

Water Weed Proves Valuable

WATER hyacinth, which incumbers the lower Mekong and other waters of Cochinchina and Cambodia to such a degree that it has become a positive menace to navigation, may become prominent in the commercial world. Experiments have proved it to be a rival of rattan, while it can also be put to other uses.

The fiber produced at an experimental plant has been used in the manufacture of rope, twine, matting, paddy sacks, boxes and chairs, sofas, cradles and other articles of furniture. It has been mixed with silk to form a somewhat stiff but durable cloth. As soon as the plant is gathered it is stripped of leaves and passed through a fiber crusher until the fiber is completely separated from the pulp. The fiber is then gradually dried in the shade. When carefully treated it is strong, flexible and elastic.

Rope, textiles and furniture made of it, when treated with carbolic acid, become impervious to the ravages of the weather or of white ants and insects, so damaging to furniture in that locality. The chairs and sofas made of this fiber are incomparably more elastic and comfortable than those made of bamboo.

May Blot Out Whirlpool Rapids to Secure 2,000,000 Horse Power

PLANS have recently been submitted to a New York state commission which it is claimed will make the Niagara River the greatest power producing river in the world. The plan also promises to place Niagara Falls on the map as a lake port.

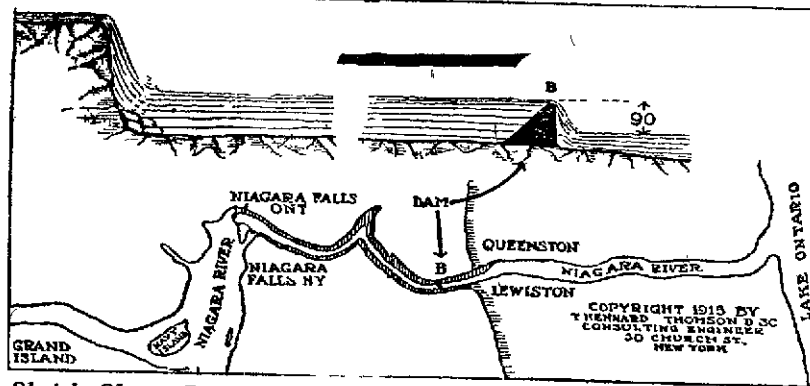

It is claimed that by the new scheme 2,000,000 electrical horse power will be obtained by damming the lower Niagara, a plan which, it is thought, will not mar the scenic grandeur of the famous falls.

The power development will be located not above the falls, where all the trouble has been centered, but a good six miles below. Devil's Hole Rapids would have to be eliminated, but that is the sole loss which Niagara would suffer, and the power plants above the falls would not be in any way affected.

The plan includes the erection of a colossal dam across the gorge, three quarters of a mile south of Queenstown. The river is very narrow here and natural conditions offer the best possible opportunity for a dam of great strength. The dam would be at least ninety feet in height, a little less than one third of the height of the steep banks of the gorge.

Such a dam would impound the waters of the river straight back to within about a mile of the falls. This would submerge the present Whirlpool Rapids, the Whirlpool and the entire lower rapids beneath a long, narrow lake. The lower end of this lake, pouring over the proposed dam, would create a smaller Niagara. The drop of the river from the falls to Lewiston, seven miles below, is about 100 feet, providing at least for the development of 2,000,000 horse power.

The scheme also includes a ship canal to connect Lake Ontario with Lake Erie, a project which has been dreamed of for many years. It is claimed that it would be feasible to place a lift lock at the foot of the proposed ninety-foot dam in the gorge, which would carry lake vessels up to the higher level from Lake Ontario. This would permit them to steam direct to the City of Niagara Falls.

Then at the foot of the falls themselves would be two enormous lift locks, one on the American and one on the Canadian side of the entrance. The American lock would lift vessels up to the high bank. There they would find passage in a short ship canal to the upper reaches of the river and thence on to Buffalo and the great lakes.

On the Canadian side the lock would lift the vessels to the top of the first bluff. There a second lock would carry them to the higher level and thence by canal to the Welland Canal.

The scheme would cost about $100,000,000.

Traveling Bag Life Preserver Latest Invention

A NEWLY invented life preserver is so all outward appearances a traveling bag which, like other valises, carries shirts, razors, etc., but which, like no other valise, can, in case of emergency, be expanded into a life-like union suit of waterproof trousers and coat, conveying their owner through the most perilous seas.

The bag, the inventor avers, can be made to suit the purchaser as to shape, size and material. A brown waterproof cloth covers the bag, and the suit for the arms and body is of the same material, folds compactly into the bottom of the case, leaving ample room for anything one wishes to carry. The body of the case is equipped with a window and two air valves which may be locked from the inside.

The side flappers or armholes may or may not be used, for they do not add or detract from the buoyancy. The arms may, however, be used as a propeller. The bag when in the water need not be closed, for it will not sink.

The position of the occupant is one of perfect comfort, for he may stand upright, lean on the arms or rest on the back or sides without danger of tipping. Food enough to last a number of days can be taken into the compartment. In short, it is an emergency hotel.

In case of accident to the outer covering there is an emergency air bag which may be blown up from the inside. In the bag one may remain in the water for from four to five days without danger of sinking or death by exposure. But in these days of the perfected wireless it is seldom more than a few hours before rescuers are on the scene after the sinking of a vessel.

Odd Facts From Foreign Lands

BUENOS AIRES does more shipping business than any other city of the western hemisphere with the exception of New York, and it now ranks eighth among the great ports of the world.

A SALMON which had been recently caught, marked and returned to the water at Kintredwell, north of Broro, Sutherlandshire, was caught again fifteen days afterward on the Aberdeenshire coast. The minimum distance covered by the fish was 140 miles, and it had lost one pound and a half in weight.

Paste Straw to Make Wood

INFORMATION has been made public in Lyons, France, concerning an artificial wood which, it is stated, will be of great value as a substitute for natural wood. The new product has been found after several years of study and practical experiments, the most recent of which have given eminently satisfactory results.

The process consists in transforming straw into solid material having the resistance of oak. The straw, after being cut into small pieces, is reduced to paste by boiling, to which certain chemicals are added.

When the paste has been reduced to a homogeneous mass it is put into presses, and planks, beams, laths and molding of all sizes are readily made. The new material can be sawed like natural wood. As a fuel it emits a bright flame and little smoke. It is further stated to be adaptable to the manufacture of match stems.

New Limbs of Powdered Bone

A NEW method of treating fractures has just been announced by Dr. H. J. Kauffer of England. He dries and grinds to powder a piece of fresh bone, and this powder he mixes to the consistency of a paste with petrolatum, and properly sterilizes the mixture. After the ends of the fractured bone have been brought into proper relations and the location ascertained by digital examination and X-ray, a syringe having a long needle is filled with the warmed bone mixture and the needle is inserted to the seat of the fracture, and as deeply as possible between the fractured ends.

The contents of the needle are then injected as the needle is slowly withdrawn to the surface of the bone when the injection must stop. This procedure may be repeated several times at different angles, thus filling the entire space between the fractured ends with the petrolatum and bone cells, which act as a focus for the formation of new bone.

Edison's Newest Device

THOMAS A. EDISON has invented a machine that has been named the "telescribe." It combines the dictograph with a telephone-recording device. There is a small electric motor operated from the regular lighting circuit and driving at constant speed a revolving barrel that carries a phonograph cylinder and a micro-recorder that fits over the cylinder and is connected by wire with a telephone extension box.

To make a record of a telephone conversation it is necessary only to remove the receiver of the regular desk telephone from its hook and place it in the socket of the telescribe, take up a small receiver that is part of the telescribe and give a call to the exchange.

Ideas Wanted For Submarines

SOME of the best thought of the naval engineering profession is now engaged in trying to unify the motive power of the submarine—that is to do away with the oil engine and the battery-driven electric motor and to substitute for it perhaps an ordinary boiler with oil fuel for running on the surface and the so-called secondary soda boiler for running submerged.

Many changes are afoot in submarine design, notably a more minute subdivision of the hull to withstand the maximum water pressure likely to be encountered, a change in the cross-sectional shape to get better results in the way of stability and ease of handling and more room for storing fuel and air for the perfecting of the signaling apparatus for use under water, an increased power of offensive some way of providing the boats with light armor and with light disappearing guns, and with two and three propellers.

Wage War to Win Camphor

THE camphor tree grows only in the most mountainous parts of Formosa, inhabited by head hunting savages, whom none of the successive invaders of the island have been able to subdue. These savages are quite alive to the value of the trees, and fiercely opposed to all attempts to get possession of the forests.

Since the Japanese took the island after their successful campaign against China in the 90s they have been carrying on a carefully conceived plan of gradual penetration. They make paths six feet in width through the virgin forests, every 120 yards stands a guardhouse, and every fourth or fifth guardhouse is a small fort entrenched and defended by wire entanglements.

Telephonic intercommunication machine guns, and all the resources of western military science are employed. In spite of these elaborate precautions, the loss among the camphor gatherers amounts to hundreds of lives annually.

Artificial Flower, Glorified and Improved, Returns as Latest Fad

The Revived Artificial Flower Is Here Shown in the Many Forms Which Are Such Clever Imitations of Nature's Product That Only a Close Examination Will Detect Them.

DAME NATURE'S work shop has a rival. The gorgeous colorings of the rose and the gladiolus, the rich autumn yellows of the chrysanthemums, and the browns and greens of the falling leaves have all been stolen and perpetuated in less perishable form by the nimble fingers of the nature fakers who have revived the craze for artificial flowers.

So expert have these nature plagiarists become that the home and the office, the church and the dinner table are likely to bloom this winter with all the luxuriant foliage of the hot house or the June garden, even when the mercury is trifling around the zero mark. Years ago the craze for paper flowers was an institution which met the fate of similar fads. Recently it has been revived, but so improved and glorified that the dinner guest cannot possibly tell when he is sitting down to a prettily decorated table whether the crimson ramblers acting as a centerpiece are those that nature made or a flawless imitation. The resurrected artificial flower is a brilliant and dashing thing. It may fill the interior of a graceful wicker vase, the hollow of an ornate window box of marble or birch bark, or twine over the trellis of a cleverly arranged flower pot. Sometimes it blooms in milady's fur neck band and again disguised as an old-fashioned bouquet it nestles in her muff. More and more the debutante and the society belle are selecting the artificial bouquet for the dance or the wedding, as its freshness is not injured by the heat of crowded rooms. You can buy any kind of rose from the dealer in artificial flowers. All of the favorites in red, pink, white and yellow are used in the decorative schemes which are seen everywhere. There is the rose in baskets, on a trellis, in a pot or a tub. For large church or social affairs the artificial vines answer a number of purposes. Some have fruit clusters and others berries and others are simply colorful leaves. Beech branches, colored artificially in green, red or brown, are used mostly for large spaces and in strands or garlands.

Nothing is more effective in the decoration of a garden, porch or sun parlor than the boxes of marble or bark filled with them. The possibilities of the wicker basket are unlimited and it comes in all shapes and sizes as a receptacle for the real as well as the artificial blooms. Some are low, long and shallow, others tall and tapering and many are simply the round bowls with high arched handles.

Most of the materials used in the artificial flowers are paper and a special linen which is often treated with wax to give it a sort of natural bloom. There is much of nature's art, however, which still defies the clever fingers of the maker of artificial flowers. Many ferns and grasses, air plants and palms are treated chemically to keep their natural beauty alive and they are frequently colored as well.

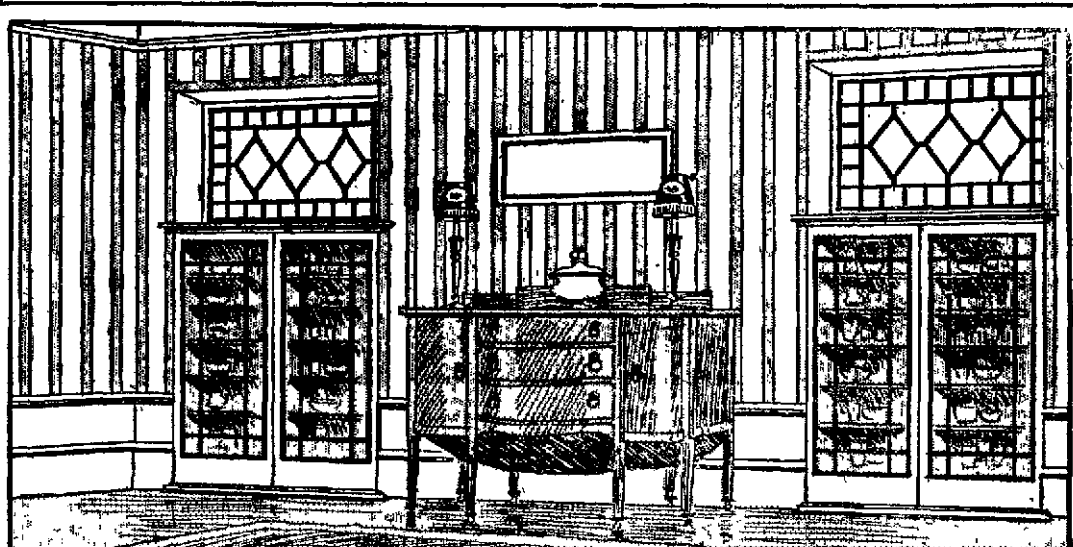

Now Is the Season of the Harvest Moon When Comes Corn Roast's Call

By DAME CURTSEY.
OUR amusements are greatly governed by the season of the year, and right now the popular thing is a "corn roast." Of course they are not new, but there is something decidedly alluring in a moonlight night, a big bonfire, just the right crowd, and plenty of nice, sweet roasting ears, not forgetting sweet potatoes, bacon, coffee and the delicious sandwiches the girls know how to make.

Even the effete East is having corn roasts with the smartest of the smart set as host and hostess. Motor cars are often discarded and hayracks with four horses call for the guests. If a colored man who knows "just how" is available, he may be called upon to superintend the broiling of the bacon, roasting the potatoes and corn, and making the coffee; if not, the men of the party will be found quite capable. Banjos, guitars and the cushions from the wagon add to the enjoyment after the repast, then the affair usually winds up with an informal dance at the home of the hostess. These are delightfully informal affairs. Here is a list of sandwiches that the girls tell me are especially nice for such occasions. I cannot give the rules, but I am sure you all will know how to go about making them, just from the names. They should be wrapped separately in waxed paper:

- Stuffed olive and egg sandwich.
 - Olive and English walnut sandwich.
 - Pimento cheese sandwich. The pimento cheese comes in jars already prepared for use.
 - Sardine sandwich, made with mayonnaise dressing.
 - Mincied ham and chicken sandwich.
 - Take a goodly supply of paper napkins and drinking cups.
 - An Aster Luncheon.
- Asters in their prime are a most decorative flower for table use. An aster luncheon given last year was so pretty that I am sure a description will be very welcome to our readers.
- As aster means a "star" the centerpiece was a star-shaped form made of tin; it was filled with delicate pink and lavender asters. Ribbons of pinkish lavender radiated to each place, where they were attached to star-shaped cards cut from lavender card-board and the names were written in white ink. There was a corsage bouquet at each place with a long violet headed pin. Pinkish lavender is a charming day-time color, but it does not light up well, so as the day was hot no artificial light was used, not even candles. There was no attempt made to carry out the color scheme in the food, except candied violets were sprinkled over the top of the pineapple ice, which was served in tall glasses with pink lace paper doilies underneath; the plates were decorated in violets and the effect was lovely.
- For diversion the hostess provided easy chairs, hammocks and cushions, a box of delicious candy, a bowl oficed tea made strong, with lemon and necessary light on this side of the room. Many housekeepers are selecting square tables and some choose the oval, though I think a round table seats more people to better advantage than any other, especially if a small chair is used rather than one with a very wide seat, or with a high back. Much thought must be exercised to suit our belongings to the space we have for them.

There is one style of sideboard that measures just four feet two inches in length and has a panel of natural cane in the back that matches the seats and backs of the chairs. There is a velvet-lined drawer for the flat silver and a roomy cupboard at each end. Do not make the mistake of overloading a sideboard or serving table with a miscellaneous assortment of silver; put out very few pieces. A pair of candle sticks, a handsome coffee or tea service on a tray, or a bowl or basket for fruit is quite sufficient.

In preparing a plain lettuce or other green salad it is well to put the oil on first and then carefully toss the leaves about until all are covered in every part with a thin coating of the oil. Then add other ingredients and toss again.

By MME. MAISON.
IN A dining-room that has ceilings eight, eight and a half or even nine feet, a striped paper is very attractive, running to the chair rail of ivory enameled wood and up to the ceiling, which should be of plain ivory white. Yellow and white, rose and white, gray and white are all excellent, or stripes of two tones in any of the shades mentioned. Plain or figured draperies may be used, preferably the former with a touch of black, which is now used with pleasing effect when rarely handled.

As many dining-rooms, especially in apartments, are rather small, great care must be taken to purchase furniture that will look as if it belonged in the spaces occupied. With this in mind, the dealers of late have been showing some very good reproductions built on small lines, which are just what we have been wanting for a long time. A charming arrangement is to have a sideboard of the desired style with a mirror over it framed either in dull gilt or silver and on either side built in cabinets for the best china and glassware. Over these closets casement windows will give the

Though most salads have plenty of lettuce leaves and olive oil, a good chef is careful not to accentuate these ingredients until the salad is deprived of its flavor. In using oil, have a good quality and use enough to cut the taste of the vinegar and the other sharp condiments. The vinegar should also be fresh and not too sharp. The amount of salt, pepper and mustard that are used depends largely on the nature of the salad and individual taste. It is well to mix the condiments together, stirring them well, and then pour them over the salad and mix the dressing with the salad by means of a large mixing spoon. When you are dining alone it is the easiest thing to serve the salad in a large bowl. For company it should always be served on individual plates. As a side dish you can serve toasted crackers, bread and butter sandwiches, Boston brown bread, mazarintum or herb sandwiches.

How my heart aches for girls without homes and real mothers. I am so glad you have friends who are kind and want you with them and I am sure they fully understand how impossible it is for you to entertain. Would it be possible to arrange a picnic for them? You could prepare the luncheon at your sister's and all meet at some central place. This would be good fun.

Reply to D. D.
You sent me a stamped envelope with no address on it and your letter signed simply "D. D.," so you see how simply impossible it was for me to reply personally. I cannot tell you name or price of "Etiquette," in this column, as it is not permissible to give such information. Having sent back your ring and terminated the engagement I would advise you to consider the matter closed. If the man does not choose to speak let it pass.

Time for a Luncheon.
Will you kindly state what hour is best for a formal luncheon and how does it differ from a breakfast?
HELEN.

One o'clock or half after is the usual hour for a luncheon and is served at the former and not at the latter, fruit being the first course.

The Wet Weather Romance of the "Girl who was on the Square"

It Wasn't Mr. Reese Who Gave Mrs. Reese the Happy Title Printed on the Other Side of This Page—Oh, No! It Was the Man Who Wrote of Fond Memories and the Weather! Now There's a Divorce Suit and a Cross-Suit, With Mrs. Reese the First Aggressor.

Mrs. Effie Reese, Who Says Her Husband Had Too Much of an Eye for the Beauties of a Chorus. Mr. Reese Retaliates by Declaring His Wife's Eyes Were Not Blind to the Handsome Features of a Certain Artist.

Uncle Sam Says "This Weather" Was Wet!

THE "On the Square" letter from "Milton H. Trigg" to "My Dear Effie," written on the stationery of the Te-a-Kun-Kah Canoe Club of Rockford, Ill., is dated August 21, 1913.

One sentence of the missive reads: "This weather brings back some of our little times last year and makes me long to get back to 'Chi.'"

Naturally the question: "What kind of weather was 'this weather' that it should recall romance long since past?"

Uncle Sam answers that question by turning to the records of the Chicago weather office for the above date. He says the same weather prevailed over the greater part of Illinois.

Here is an extract from the record:

"Maximum temperature, 87; minimum, 73; mean for day, 80; precipitation, 11 inch; partly cloudy all day; lightning observed from the station at 7 p. m., followed by thunder."

Wet weather, of course.

IT WAS long after midnight. Charles Wilbur Reese, his feet snugly encased in a pair of slippers, leaned back in a comfortable old arm chair and puffed away on his French briar. Charles Wilbur Reese was wont to woo the fragrant weed when confronted with a vexing problem. And one stared him in the face now.

Where was Effie Reese?

The perplexed husband, falling for the first time to find an answer in the oracle of smoke rings, laid aside his pipe and picked up a book. He would read until his wife put in an appearance, and then—well, he didn't know exactly what he would do then. Ask for an explanation, of course, and— But the type danced before his eyes. He could not put the strange circumstance from his mind.

Where COULD his wife be?

"Movie" Mystery.

A short while later he heard footsteps. Tossing the book on a table Reese went to the front window and peered into the dark street. There in front of the apartment stood Mrs. Reese and a young woman friend—yes, and a man! Of that Reese was sure.

A key in the lock—enter Mrs. Reese. "Effie!" "Yes, Wilbur." "Effie, where have you been so late?" "Why, to a moving picture show." "What theater?"

Mrs. Reese tried to think of the name, but couldn't—for a moment. "Why, it was—let me see—yes, it was the—" and she designated the place. "You are so cross, Wilbur, that it confuses me."

"Is that theater open all night?" asked Reese.

Rain Brings Trouble.

"No, but you see I have on my new hat and champagne-colored shoes," replied the wife. "It was raining and I didn't want to get them wet—so I waited in the 'L' station."

"That man—who was he?"

Emphatic denial on the part of Mrs. Reese that she had been in the company of any man.

"Good night, Effie." "Good night, Wilbur."

That, in brief, was the opening chapter in the divorce court story, "Troubles of the Reese Domelle; or, The Girl Who Was Always on the Square." The why of the subtitle you will learn in subsequent chapters.

To go on with the story: Reese, a Chicago theatrical man, says he was not quite satisfied with his wife's explanation on the night (or early morning) above mentioned, and so hired a private detective to "periscope" her movements.

"Soon afterward," declares Reese, "the detective came to the theater and told me to put on my hat and coat. 'Mrs. Reese,' he said, 'is in the company of a handsome-looking man.' I was dumfounded—couldn't believe it. You see, I had been hoping against hope that my suspicions were groundless. But I went, and sure enough—well, I caught them spooning."

It was Mrs. Reese's next move in the domestic game of checkers. She filed suit for divorce, charging unfaithfulness, non-support and cruelty against her husband. Then Reese moved again. He filed a cross-bill, in which he alleged that two others had shared with him in the affections of his wife.

It is the court's next move, but in the meantime let us consider a bit of the evidence which promises to make the trial one of lively interest to the parties involved.

Is He a Pirate Bold?

In the vault of Michael Koch, attorney for Reese, are some letters which Reese says he found in his wife's dresser drawer soon after she had filed suit for divorce. Memories of "happy days" and "good old times together," of little trips in the enjoyable company of the girl "who was always on the square," are recalled in these missives. Some are signed "M. H. T." and others "Milton H. Trigg."

The reputed author of the letters is a designer and builder of mausoleums, and one time commodore of the Te-a-Kun Kah Canoe Club of Rockford, Ill. He is a bachelor and central figure in Rockford social circles and is well known in Chicago. Trigg and C. O. Longabaugh, a Chicago artist, are the men mentioned in the cross-bill. The latter is the alleged "handsome-looking" fellow found in the company of Mrs. Reese.

To return to the letters. One dated at Chicago on Nov. 23, 1912, seeks to explain why the writer did not meet "Effie" as per agreement.

My Dear Effie: Received your letter of Nov. 20, and was very much surprised to learn that you were at drug store Wednesday night. When I returned from Rockford Mr. Longabaugh told me that he had made a date with you for me at 8:30 p. m. So on Wednesday night I went out there and waited from 8:25 to 8:50, but you didn't show up, so I thought perhaps you were not coming, inasmuch as I didn't call you up to confirm date.

One passage of this letter refers to Longabaugh in the familiar term of "Lonny."

"It is a quadrangular affair instead of the conventional 'triangle of hearts,'" said Attorney Koch in exhibiting the letter. "Strangely enough, both men who find themselves entangled in the domestic affairs of the Reeses were aids to each other in their alleged clandestine associations with Mrs. Reese."

The writer of the above missive refers to "Effie's" letter of Nov. 20. In the dresser drawer where Reese says he found the Trigg letters he also ran across some which he declares are in the handwriting of his wife—copies, he believes, of those mailed to Trigg. One dated Nov. 20, 1912, reads as follows:

My Dear Mr. Trigg. Just a line to inform you of the way I feel in regards to your treatment of me.

Now, I don't know, but it seems to me I would not treat my friends as you seem to have occasion to do. (The letter seems unconnected here.) Therefore the request that you call me on on Saturday at my mother's home. You also requested me not to forget to keep Saturday open for you, and I consented. When Saturday arrived you had a gentleman friend of yours call up and inform me that you had received a telegram in the morning and had to hurry right home to your parents.

He further stated that you desired to see me some evening through the week. So, using him as a go-between, I made an appointment for Wednesday at 9 p. m. sharp. Now I went down there at 9 sharp on said evening and you were not there, and I waited till 9:05 and then started toward home again.

Now, my time is valuable, just as well as yours, and I have already wasted two evenings in one week thinking I was going to have the pleasure of your company for the evening, but it is very evident to me now that it is a very one-sided affair.

Had I not previously been made gratefully happy by your frank cordiality toward me I should unquestionably accept your present manners as indicative of your wishes to me. But as it is, I don't understand you, and I am sure you don't understand me. If I have offended you in any way, it has been unknowingly, and it would be a privilege to be allowed to explain or apologize.

With this in view would you give me the pleasure of an answer at once, or if it is a matter of perfect indifference (the next few lines are missing) to make an excuse in consideration of my feelings. As ever, yours truly, Effie G. R.

"On the Square," Says Builder.

The "on the square" letter from "Milton H. Trigg," written on Te-a-Kun-Kah Canoe Club stationery, is dated Aug. 21, 1913. It reads in part:

My Dear Effie: Just a few lines to see whether you've forgotten me as yet. Have been going to write you for a long time, but just put it off and off.

Did you get my letters a while ago, girlie? If so, you didn't answer—maybe you are sore at me, but I hope not. I was at drug store both nights, but you didn't show up.

This weather brings back some of our little times last year and makes me long to get back to "Chi" again. I sure did enjoy your company—more so than any girl I ever associated with in there. I ALWAYS FOUND YOU TO BE ON THE SQUARE.

Expect to go back and open an office again pretty soon and will run in Aug. 25 for a few days. Will you meet me somewhere, Effie, Monday night? Or, better still, reserve a couple of the best seats at some good show for Monday night. Let me know where to meet you and name of show, and I'll get the tickets Monday a. m., when I get in. Or, if you'd rather, we'll go across the lake or out to one of the amusement parks—in fact, anywhere you wish.

I certainly would like to see you again, and will assure you a good time this winter if you see fit. Must close and get busy. With hopes of hearing from you by return mail, sincerely, Milton H. Trigg.

"This weather" also brought back memories to "Effie," according to a letter which Reese says is in the handwriting of his wife and which he believes is a copy. It is dated July 18, 1914, and reads in part:

My Dear Milton: Just a line to see whether you have forgotten me as yet. Have been going to write for a long time.

This weather brings back some of our good times and makes me long to see you again. I sure did enjoy your company and have wished to see you time and again, but I was afraid to write you.

Do you remember saying the last time I met you that should I ever wish to write to do so, even if it happened to be ten years hence? Well, I have done so, but I am afraid of the reception I may receive after this length of time. Well, here's hoping to receive a reply. Sincerely, Effie.

That Horrid Weather Again.

A letter from "M. H. T." is dated at Rockford, Aug. 14, 1914. Again recalling "old times, especially during this weather," it reads in part:

My Dear Girl: Received your letter some few days ago. It came like a bolt from a clear sky. Really, I thought that domestic tranquillity was your lot by this time, but I, like you, cannot help but recall our happy little times, especially during this weather.

I intended to write long before, and really was surprised to open your letter this a. m. and see that it had been neglected this long—since July 29. Presume you have been enjoying life since last I saw you—at any rate, I hope so.

Expect to be in Milwaukee from Monday a. m. until Thursday p. m., Aug. 17-20, and will run down to Chicago and meet you any of those days or nights just to bring back old times. Write me, girlie, and set time and place and I'll be there promptly; or if you could arrange to come to Milwaukee I'll meet you—either way suits me to a "T."

I surely hope that you can meet me. I think we'd have some time—in fact, I know it. Well, dear, think it over and write me. I may not get time to reply before our date, but bank on it—I'll be there to meet you at the time set. Hastily, M. H. T.

Mrs. Reese vigorously denies that she received the "Girl on the Square" letters which her husband claims to have found—letters which hint audaciously of good times departed and which breathe scented hopes of similar cuttings-up in future. Likewise does she deny authorship of the supposed "cooped" letters which Reese says are in her handwriting.

"Wilbur needn't think people will be so foolish as to believe that trash," declares pretty Mrs. Reese. "It is he who has broken the marriage vow. As a theatrical man he had a fine opportunity to eye the beauty of the dancing girls in the front row of a chorus. Why, he even used to boast to me of his affairs with women of the stage. He would come home and say: 'I'm some heart-breaker. I am! A classy sort of fellow—and don't you forget it! I travel with swell dolls!'"

Wilbur stands pat on the letters. [Copyright, 1915, by J. Keeley.]

Destroying Germs

CHEMISTS employed by hospitals have found that disease germs die quickly on certain building materials. It has been found by the tests made that the strongest or most resistant germs perish within a day when placed on the surface of linoleum. This is due to the large quantity of linseed oil used with the cork in making linoleum. Tests have also shown that it is the use of linseed oil as a binding medium which gives to many wall paints their claim of being effective for hospital use. It is claimed that as the oil leaves the paints they lose their powers of sterilization.

DIFFICULTIES OF ORGANIZATION.

It was easier for Washington to play his own part of quiet authority and matter-of-course precedence than to fill the new offices of federal administration with men who could lend a like flavor to the conduct of affairs.

Ambitious men looked askance upon the new government preferred the service of their states, if they wished to be of any use.

Fortunately there were not many offices to be filled and for these efficient men were found.

The congress created but three administrative departments at the outset: the department of state, the department of treasury and the department of war though it provided also for the appointment of an attorney general.

Washington chose Thomas Jefferson to be secretary of state, Alexander Hamilton to be secretary of the treasury, General Henry Knox to be secretary of war and Edmund Randolph to be attorney general.

Mr. John Jay made chief justice of the supreme court of the United States.

This strong desire was to join parties in common support of the general government—join them at the outset, when their formation was but foreshadowed not yet hardened to a definite purpose.

Hamilton chose Thomas Jefferson to be secretary of state, Alexander Hamilton to be secretary of the treasury, General Henry Knox to be secretary of war and Edmund Randolph to be attorney general.

punishments and the exaction of bail. The ninth provided that "the enumeration in the constitution of certain rights should not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people."

The tenth declared that "powers not delegated to the United States by the constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, were reserved to the states respectively or to the people."

So much congress did to keep faith with the country and to clear the constitution of even the suspicion of a character unfavorable to liberty.

Its other measures were intended, not to justify or excuse the new government, but to give it efficiency.

It was by common consent the chief business of the session to set the machinery of the country actually to rights and to regulate commerce to give the new union unquestionable standing in the markets and the banks of the world.

Congress put itself in these matters under the guidance of Hamilton.

The advice given by the young secretary was characteristic alike of his capacity and of the purposes which he entertained with regard to the government. And he declared his views with characteristic candor and directness.

"To justify and preserve the confidence of the most enlightened friends of good government to promote the increasing respectability of the American name to answer the calls of justice to restore landed property to its due value to furnish new resources both to agriculture and commerce, to cement more closely the union of the states to add to their security and to answer the calls of justice to establish public order on the basis of an upright and liberal policy these," he said "are the great and invaluable ends to be secured by a proper and adequate provision at the present period for the support of the public credit."

In a series of carefully considered reports in which he showed himself, as always, a consummate master of constructive argument and of that sort of exposition which itself convinces—reports on the public credit, on the excise on the establishment of a national bank, on manufactures—he proposed that a tariff act be passed which should incidentally protect and encourage domestic manufacturers that the foreign debt of the confederation should be assumed and paid in full that the domestic debt of the confederation also, though it had long ago fallen below par, should be passed to the hands of the federal government an enormous discount, should nevertheless be paid at its face value that even the debts which the several states had incurred during the revolution should be assumed and paid by the federal treasury.

He proposed that a national bank should be established to serve as the fiscal agent of the government.

Even Madison who in most things led the house as he had in the constitutional convention hesitated and drew back.

Jefferson protested with rising heat, in the cabinet and out of it, granted because he held that the bank and purposes and divided upon lines which grew more and more fixed and clear.

It was undoubtedly Hamilton's purpose to draw more of wealth and property to the support of the government by means of his financial measures to give them definite reasons for wishing it to succeed and for determining to stand by it until it had secured a great backing for the government a great backing of interest and that of itself condemned what he did in the eyes of some.

It seemed to make what he proposed legislation for a class for a class which did not always prefer the interests of general government to its own.

More than that some of the measure which congress had adopted notably that which established a national bank involved a doctrine of powers implied as well as of powers explicitly granted, by the constitution.

The new government had looked formidable enough with the powers explicitly granted and he should say "here the elaboration of its powers would end if still others were to be drawn forth by implication."

The constitution nowhere explicitly gave congress the right to create a corporation like the new bank of the United States.

Hamilton argued that that right was included under the clause which gave it power to make all laws which should be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the powers specifically granted because he held that the bank was a necessary financial agent in the handling of federal funds.

But whether would the country be led if men of Hamilton's school of politics were permitted to interpret the word "necessary."

Those who had opposed the constitution because under it the authority of the common government could command the financial policy of the states and those who had opposed it because it subordinated the states in every chief matter of politics and merely gave them fractions instead of integers in the political life of the country, had of course been ready from the first to stand against Mr. Hamilton and his policy of concentration.

When his whole plan was disclosed many federalists also drew back, with Mr. Madison fearing whether they should be led by the doctrine of implied powers which the young secretary thus so boldly pressed at the very outset.

Many a sign of sharp reaction gave the federalist leaders plain warning of what they might expect should they persist.

A NEW PARTY LEADER. MR. JEFFERSON became the real leader of the new party of opposition, even before he left the cabinet, at first covertly, at last openly, giving it the name democratic republican, which savored of the Rights of Man and took men's thoughts over sea to the sharp struggle for liberty then abating in France, giving it also organization and the spirit of a party. Like the master of men he was—philosopher and politician in equal compound.

But Washington accepted the leadership of Hamilton as congress did and for a time nothing could withstand the purposes of those who meant to make the new government strong, national and permanent.

When two years had gone by (1791) a new house was chosen and in part a new senate but the federalists still kept their ascendancy in most of the offices of the country actually to rights and to regulate commerce to give the new union unquestionable standing in the markets and the banks of the world.

Congress put itself in these matters under the guidance of Hamilton.

The advice given by the young secretary was characteristic alike of his capacity and of the purposes which he entertained with regard to the government. And he declared his views with characteristic candor and directness.

"To justify and preserve the confidence of the most enlightened friends of good government to promote the increasing respectability of the American name to answer the calls of justice to restore landed property to its due value to furnish new resources both to agriculture and commerce, to cement more closely the union of the states to add to their security and to answer the calls of justice to establish public order on the basis of an upright and liberal policy these," he said "are the great and invaluable ends to be secured by a proper and adequate provision at the present period for the support of the public credit."

In a series of carefully considered reports in which he showed himself, as always, a consummate master of constructive argument and of that sort of exposition which itself convinces—reports on the public credit, on the excise on the establishment of a national bank, on manufactures—he proposed that a tariff act be passed which should incidentally protect and encourage domestic manufacturers that the foreign debt of the confederation should be assumed and paid in full that the domestic debt of the confederation also, though it had long ago fallen below par, should be passed to the hands of the federal government an enormous discount, should nevertheless be paid at its face value that even the debts which the several states had incurred during the revolution should be assumed and paid by the federal treasury.

He proposed that a national bank should be established to serve as the fiscal agent of the government.

Even Madison who in most things led the house as he had in the constitutional convention hesitated and drew back.

Jefferson protested with rising heat, in the cabinet and out of it, granted because he held that the bank and purposes and divided upon lines which grew more and more fixed and clear.

It was undoubtedly Hamilton's purpose to draw more of wealth and property to the support of the government by means of his financial measures to give them definite reasons for wishing it to succeed and for determining to stand by it until it had secured a great backing for the government a great backing of interest and that of itself condemned what he did in the eyes of some.

It seemed to make what he proposed legislation for a class for a class which did not always prefer the interests of general government to its own.

More than that some of the measure which congress had adopted notably that which established a national bank involved a doctrine of powers implied as well as of powers explicitly granted, by the constitution.

The new government had looked formidable enough with the powers explicitly granted and he should say "here the elaboration of its powers would end if still others were to be drawn forth by implication."

The constitution nowhere explicitly gave congress the right to create a corporation like the new bank of the United States.

Hamilton argued that that right was included under the clause which gave it power to make all laws which should be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the powers specifically granted because he held that the bank was a necessary financial agent in the handling of federal funds.

But whether would the country be led if men of Hamilton's school of politics were permitted to interpret the word "necessary."

Those who had opposed the constitution because under it the authority of the common government could command the financial policy of the states and those who had opposed it because it subordinated the states in every chief matter of politics and merely gave them fractions instead of integers in the political life of the country, had of course been ready from the first to stand against Mr. Hamilton and his policy of concentration.

When his whole plan was disclosed many federalists also drew back, with Mr. Madison fearing whether they should be led by the doctrine of implied powers which the young secretary thus so boldly pressed at the very outset.

Many a sign of sharp reaction gave the federalist leaders plain warning of what they might expect should they persist.

A NEW PARTY LEADER. MR. JEFFERSON became the real leader of the new party of opposition, even before he left the cabinet, at first covertly, at last openly, giving it the name democratic republication of a distinct party of protest, if not of opposition though the more slowly changing senate showed still a preponderance of federalists.

But General Washington still seemed to all the safest leader in affairs the only possible guide and member in those first days when all things were yet to be brought to a stable order and a wise way of government.

A FORCEFUL MINORITY. IT was a notable thing how a minority prevailed in all active policy and managed to keep affairs in its own hands—the same minority whose sagacity and vigor and concert in action had secured the formulation and adoption of the constitution.

The war for independence had been a democratic upheaval and its processes had seriously discredited all government which was not directly of the people.

It had made local committees of correspondence the real organs of opinion.

Town meetings and the people's representatives in the provincial assemblies had originated policy while it lasted with an almost sovereign freedom of choice and had kept their sovereignty and service to the people.

Almost everywhere except in Virginia, a majority of the leading families and of the professional classes of the colonies had thrown their influence against the separation and independence which the popular leaders demanded, against the trial of an out-and-out people's government without king or parliament or ruling class to control and offset the excesses of democracy and when the end of the struggle came those whom the country had been accustomed to see lead in its commonwealths abandoned in extraordinary numbers forever preferring Canada and the Indies and the old country over sea, where government still kept the form and dignity and aristocratic favor to which they were attached.

Men enough of the classes hitherto honored and privileged remained to hand on the old traditions of initiative and service and authority which wealth and training and social influence had formerly secured, but the end of their predominance was plainly at hand.

Aristocratic privilege and the natural precedence of birth and breeding were sadly discredited.

The mass of common men had put their own leaders forward, and acted for themselves in town meetings and in voluntary organizations of their own with regard to matters of the greatest scope and consequence.

The lower had plainly been leveled and equality had become the cardinal principle of politics local autonomy and direct elections the standards and models of political organization.

The central government which the constitution contemplated had been devised and to which Washington and Hamilton had given power and authority had plainly been set up as if by reaction to offset the head autonomy and equality of democracy of the people's commonwealths.

Many of the cherished ideals of a democratic revolution seemed lost and given up by its successful establishment and the federalists, with their frank preference for the old vigor and authority their undiminished contempt for pure democracy, were not likely very long to maintain themselves in the people's favor.

Mr. Jefferson found men eager to put a check upon them and restrict the new government to a more modest scale of power.

The minority were only temporarily in the saddle. They were permitted to rule only because of their vigor and efficiency, and the need to employ them in order to give definite shape to the government which they had or shaped.

THE RIGHT TO VOTE. IT was a rural nation which had drawn together into this novel union—a nation without aristocratic example now that the connection with England was cut off, with nothing but its own simple needs native preferences and manifest convenience to consider now that it was no longer part of an extended and various empire.

It had been obliged because convinced by the unanswerable arguments of tumults and of ugly reprisals of state upon state, to set up at its center a real government again to take the place of the government over sea from which it had broken away, a government with an authority of its own which was likely to be even more efficacious in holding themselves together in a co-operative union than the authority of the king and parliament.

But though opinion had reluctantly consented to that, it by no means followed that it would consent to see the new government given a scope and vigor such as Mr. Hamilton with his notoriously high notions of prerogative, wished to confer upon it.

The people could not, it is true of a sudden shake off their long habit of following those who had always seemed their natural leaders.

SYNOPSIS.

Kitty Gray, newspaper woman, finds in a curio shop half of a broken coin, the mutilated inscription on which accuses her closely and leads her, at the order of her managing editor, to go to the principality of Gretzhoffen in piece out the story suggested by the inscription. She is followed, and on arrival in Gretzhoffen her adventures while chasing the secret of the broken coin begin.

CHAPTER XLIX.

By Process of Elimination.

The weapon of the renegade leader Blake was aimed steadily enough. But the fraction of time in which Roleau changed the position he had taken saved the life of one man and cost that of another. It was the fellow thief, Blake's comrade, fresh from the rendezvous, who fell under the bullet intended for Roleau himself.

Blake sprang forward, groping under cover of the smoke, to find the body of his enemy, stooped, paused, sprang back—it was not Roleau, but his own man whom he had slain!

Roleau by this time, with no more than a quick flash of self-congratulation at his unexpected safety; had sprung away. Blake called out to his followers and started after Roleau. He did not meet him at the outer opening, but ran into the arms of the band of gendarmes who had followed Roleau hither.

Seeing the renegade, pistol in hand, and knowing that he had fired the shot just heard, the sergeant seized upon Blake and disarmed him. The apache leader fought with all the bitter desperation of his kind when cornered, crying aloud for help. His cries brought others of the band, who joined in the melee, so that the issue for a time was in doubt as between the lawful and the lawless—these last two factions who were locked in struggle by reason of the fortunes of the missing coin.

At this juncture Roleau flung himself into the conflict. His giant strength proved such aid that finally the sergeant and his men had subdued not only Blake the leader, but others of his band. As for Roleau, he stood grinning at the turn of events and making no further attempt at escape. Neither did the officer make any movement to apprehend him again.

"Come with me, then, my friend," said the officer. "You have fought well for us. We shall see what we shall see."

Wherefore, Roleau, no longer under espionage, went back with the gendarmes toward the headquarters of the prefecture.

Much of this was noted by Kitty Gray herself, who arrived upon the scene in time to witness this not unhappy end of her own quest. Count Frederick in turn found his own errand done. These two likewise turned toward the Hotel de Ville.

"Monsieur le prefect," announced the sergeant, when at last they had reached the presence of that official, "this man"—pointing to Blake—"fired on this other man and tried to kill him. That is what I do not understand."

"Is this the truth, fellow?" demanded the prefect of Blake.

"Prove it!" said Blake, grinning.

The sound of the entrance of others at the office now attracted their attention.

"Your excellency," announced the sergeant, "these others, the young American—Count Frederick—"

The prefect turned his gaze upon the new arrivals, himself none too well pleased. He found them but complicating factors here in his own business of finding a victim for the law.

"Well, well," resumed he, "what is all this about? We have now two men, both of whom know everything that needs to be known of yonder murder. One asks us now to prove it. The other—indicating Roleau—"before now has said there was no murder because there was no murdered man found. What do you say now to this, sir?"—he accosted Roleau.

"I say now, your excellency, that yonder thief and leader of thieves, who tried to kill me, knows all there is to be known of the murder. He can tell, if he likes, or if he does not like. He wanted there what we wanted—we will call it a jewel that he sought in her gracious excellency's rooms. He guessed that it might have value with persons high in power in this country. That is why he followed us; that is why murder was done there. They all sought something, and we know what it was."

"You are the accused," said the prefect, turning swiftly to Blake, his own decision made. "What have you to say? Why do you not speak? Confess that you know the secret of yonder murder—the motive for which we ourselves now know. I know you, Blake. Your hand is broken now. How do you wish to spend the rest of your life—would you purchase a few more moments at the price of a confession of the truth? Perhaps that may be, when you have tasted the dungeon—away from that drug you crave—for a few hours."

"I will confess," suddenly exclaimed the king of the apaches, his face gray with terror. "I will tell you everything—only give me—"

"Then you killed the man in yonder room?" Blake tried to speak, but only nodded. Then at length, hoarsely, "It is as he said. What can I gain by delay or denial? Give me—that! Give me—that! I confess it all."

"What was your motive, then, Blake?"

"You heard it. He told you. I wanted what they had—the coin—the Gretzhoffen coin."

"As to the coin, your honor," broke in the deep voice of Count Frederick at this time, "I submit there is no need of examination of anyone in regard to that. These questions belong to the prerogatives of the king himself. My man and hers"—he bowed now to where Kitty stood—"has proved himself a stout soul. He has told the truth clearly. For his courage I can well forgive him any defection he may have shown as to my own service. Set him free, your honor."

The prefect looked at him, willing to punish any who cast slight upon his power, but knowing himself helpless. Count Frederick smiled icily in turn. "Shall we three bid you good day, your honor?"

The prefect bowed politely as he might.

Count Frederick only smiled, and turned toward the door. He stepped back, gravely, allowing Kitty Gray to pass. After her followed the faithful Roleau. Frederick smiled again, and looked after the two not unhappily, although he saw where the greater allegiance of his former servant now lay.

"At last, Roleau!" exclaimed Kitty, eagerly, when finally they two were alone at their hotel.

"We are free, all of us—you, and I, and—"

"And his excellency, le Comte Frederick."

"Well, yes, himself as well, then. Nor am I sorry that is true. I fancy perhaps I may have been unjust to him. He has done much, after all, for me, his enemy."

"What, you, his enemy?" grinned Roleau. "Not in the least. Au contraire, mademoiselle!"

"Tais-toi!" exclaimed Kitty, her color rising once more. "Silence! I am but happy that no harm has come to him. And fortune surely has come to us. We have at least half the coin in our possession. The other—"

"Is in the hands of Cortislaw, the king of Gretzhoffen. He is a king with an army back of him. We are alone. We know it is only by good fortune that we all are left alive."

"All three, your excellency?" smiled Roleau.

"Yes, all three! Listen, Roleau. It will need all three of us to save our half the coin—I begin to feel that—I grow weak, Roleau. I cannot accomplish all this alone."

"You wish a strong arm, excellency," said Roleau. "You are not the first who has wished a strong arm and a strong heart to lean upon. Is it not true?"

CHAPTER L.

To Arms.

Dispersed under the wrath of their savage sovereign, the courtiers of Grahoffen were cudgeling their wits to find some solution to the problem of finding the coin. Where was it? How could it be gained? Upon Count Sachio more than upon any nobleman of the court this question rested griev-

"Yes, Sachio," he heard the answer. "Now if we had our other half here, we could join the two."

"I do not need it," exclaimed Sachio, exultantly. "I have it in my hand. I know the reading of both. It tells of the secret recess under the floor of the torture chamber."

Count Frederick heard Sachio laugh deeply—heard his voice once more, self-satisfied.

"Never again," said Sachio, "will I abuse good wine! It fuddled a king for our use and benefit today."

"You are going—where?"

"Yes. To the last hiding place of what we seek."

CHAPTER LI.

In the Torture Chamber.

Count Frederick heard them approach the door, and darted around the nearest corner. He knew which way Sachio would go, and gave him time to establish a lead.

Sachio went straight enough for a time, guided only by his sense of direction, but at length he halted, confused in the passageways which ramified and spread this way and that. It was at that moment that Frederick, himself surprised, came upon him suddenly. The two stood for half an instant, facing each other.

"My dear Frederick," exclaimed Sachio, looking his man fair in the face with that courage which had more than once stood him in such good stead. "How fortunate! I was just on my way on an errand of the king."

"I know something of the ways below here," said Frederick. "I have been here often. Perhaps between us we may discover what you seek. In

A moment later he heard the heavy clang of the door behind him.

He was alone. He had proved the victim of the plan which he had formed. He was locked in the torture chamber of Gretzhoffen, that place of horror which he had reserved for his enemy. He had failed. He had lost all—all! He had been the cause, perhaps, of the ruin of his country!

CHAPTER LII.

Le Roi S'Amuse.

It was not often in his muddled life that Michael had so full warrant to give rein to his impulses. He had not noted the absence of Sachio or Ladislaw. After a time, his attendants, hesitating, told him that a woman was waiting to be admitted. Her name was one which came to his brain now above all others.

"Admit her at once, yes—why do you delay?" She came before him now, pale, downcast, almost trembling. Heavy enough had been the burden of anxiety she long had carried. She had come to the king, but she sought not this weak king's comforting. No, she had come hither in search of the man on whom even the king must rely.

"Ah, mademoiselle," he began, half maudlin, "you have come to us at last. Why were you so absurdly long? We have grieved for you, and who would grieve the king?"

"Your majesty," said Kitty Gray, and half shuddered as she gave the title, gazing as she did upon the bloated face of this man who claimed to be a king. "Your majesty, you are more than kind to remember so unimportant a person."

"Unimportant! Do not say that word. Unimportant—when all we have thought of was your

ly. "Never again will I doubt! I prayed for you, prayed that you should understand before I died. But it was meant for you to come for me, that I might know—know as much as they who are here, who have been my fellows and my friends. Mademoiselle—I had said good-by to everything excepting one. There was that left which no man should die without knowing—that experience which only makes life worth having. I have dreaded all things, but now I hope I must—I shall hope!"

He stooped toward her now, and for the moment each was careless of the strange surroundings in which they stood. For a half moment the heart of Kitty Gray was on the point of surrender.

"Monsieur le comte, for that we have no time now, said she, gently. "It was but chance which brought me here."

"Chance? Yes, if fate, if the hand of heaven mean chance, I shall call it chance, not otherwise. I say that it was the plan of fate long ago that you should come to me, now and here."

"We have come close to the secret," said Kitty Gray slowly. "But we have come closer to perils."

"True, more than you know."

"What do you mean?"

"Sachio was here—it was he and his man who thrust me in here, where I had planned to place him. They know it all—that we do now, mademoiselle. Sachio himself has gone to carry his news to his king. We are undone, mademoiselle! There will be war."

"If war, then why do we wait here?" she demanded of him. "War is what we have sought to avoid for this kingdom by our own knowledge of the coin. If it be too late—why, then, we must fight. Ah, how I wish I were a man, that I might fight as well!"

"You have fought well for all of us, mademoiselle," said Frederick. "We have repulsed our enemies. Would you repulse—your friend?"

She made no answer, but was away before him in the dark passageway.

CHAPTER LIII.

The Battle.

Sachio and Ladislaw, as may be guessed, allowed no grass to grow under their feet as they hastened toward their own kingdom, leaving behind them the befuddled monarch who had no idea that he had entertained such vipers.

They never reached the confines of Grahoffen kingdom; instead they met the army of Cortislaw already afield and well across the neutral lands.

"Look!" cried Sachio. "Cortislaw is afoot! By the Lord! Yonder comes a real king!"

It was even so. Soon they were among the advance guards, the skirmishers of the main force, which were advancing. In time they were brought to the bodyguard of the king himself, for Cortislaw marched with his men, after the fashion of monarchs of old. He had put all his fortunes to the test that day.

"What! Sachio," he said, as he grimly regarded that nobleman. "You have failed again?"

"No, your majesty. I have not failed. I bring you success, at last."

He opened the palm which he raised before the eyes of his king. In it lay the broken half of the Gretzhoffen coin.

"The coin!—by our lady! It is ours! Bring it to me closer. Give it to me! Let me see!"

"The secret is ours!" said he. "The torture chamber—the treasure!"

"It lies in the northeast corner of the palace, deep under the walls," said Sachio. "Come, let us march steadily, toward the unsuspecting city of Gretzhoffen, governed by an added king too far gone in his cups to suspect danger of any sort—a king never strong, and now weaker than his wont at a time when all the forces of a real king were needed."

They met no resistance at the walls of Gretzhoffen itself. The armies of King Michael were not in evidence. The coming of an enemy apparently had not been suspected.

The people of Gretzhoffen ran this way and that, leaderless. "Where are our forces?" they demanded. "Where is the army? Where is the king? Where is Count Frederick?"

To these demands came no present answer. The forces of the enemy advanced along the avenues.

"Yonder it lies, your majesty," said Count Sachio, pointing to a turret which showed at the farther corner of the castle which they approached. "Deep beneath the walls yonder, in the northeast corner, my eyes saw the torture chamber of Gretzhoffen."

"Did you find the treasure?" demanded Cortislaw.

"No, your majesty, that was exploration fit for your majesty's hands alone. I did not search for it. Rather, I hastened to bring your majesty here in your own person."

"We soon shall know," said Cortislaw, and signaled the advance.

The sound of hoofs and trampling feet filled the streets of Gretzhoffen. The army of Grahoffen, in close formation, marched forward under the summons of the bugles. Quickly passing down the main avenue which led to the palace, they spread out by columns right and left, covering the full front of that edifice, which lay before them hidden in its screen of shrubbery.

"Look, your majesty," said Sachio, and pointed. Through a little break in the screaming wall of green he saw the plume of a horseman, who sat motionless as though waiting.

"One of their guards!" exclaimed Cortislaw. "Go take him. Stop for nothing. Press on into the palace itself."

The front ranks broke forward, each eager to be the first to take captive the foeman thus discovered.

Not one man, but many hundreds, met their coming—the forces of Gretzhoffen in ambush. In the first front the picked men of the guard had been stationed under the screening shrubbery by the actual commander in chief of the Gretzhoffen forces that day—none less than Count Frederick himself.

In such brief time as had been allowed him, he had made his arrangements and posted his forces in what he conceived to be the only feasible strategy. Now the jaws were sprung.

The bugles of Gretzhoffen, high and clear, sounded the counter-charge. The advancing forces of Grahoffen were met full in the face by a level sleet of missiles. From their covering the forces of Gretzhoffen sprang out, section after section. Face to face, line against line, the two detachments met in the shock of arms.

ously. He enlisted therefore as his confederate a man belonging to the secret police in Grahoffen, Ladislaw, a cunning chap with courage.

"Ladislaw," said he, "we must go to Gretzhoffen at once. The coin is there. Either that young woman has it or Count Frederick, or the king. The latter is most likely of the three."

It came out much as Sachio had reasoned. In the confusion now prevailing in Gretzhoffen the two passed unchallenged even to the palace door.

As for the king, he was by this time well forward in his wife. He received Sachio and his friend readily enough. Little it mattered to him who came, for all were welcome. He reproved for his hesitation the chamberlain who announced Sachio.

"Let him come to us," said he. "Let them all come. They are welcome. Sachio—yes, many a bottle we two have split together."

Not one, but more than one bottle, forsooth, did they two split between them now, and meantime Ladislaw, secret agent, unnoticed, was here and there, in this room and others, unmolested, as a friend of the king, and busy with purposes of his own.

In the chambers of the king all was given over to wine and boastfulness. Throughout the palace hilarity reigned. The general feeling was that the forces of the kingdom had been successful.

There was one who did not accept thus lightly the issue of the day. Count Frederick of Gretzhoffen, most serious of mind by this time, had turned his steps toward the palace, pondering many things meantime. It was now his own deliberate purpose to demand some decision of his monarch as to the eminent enterprise with which all Gretzhoffen was soon to be concerned. He had given orders, as an officer of the army high in power, to mobilize all the forces of the kingdom.

And even as these plans quietly went forward here, King Cortislaw of Grahoffen was pacing his floor, consumed with wrath of a sort not easily placated. "Listen, gentlemen," said he to his officers who gathered about him after Sachio had departed. "Why do we wait. We will win all, or we will lose all today. March then! Cortislaw calls every man under arms to join the colors now!"

Thus, as Count Frederick made his way to the palace, the military forces of both countries were making ready for a struggle which might soon ensue. He passed almost without plan, toward that portion of the palace where he knew he would find King Michael. But at a moment when he was alone and passing near a door which made off from the hall, he heard voices—one voice which suddenly he had conviction was familiar to him—the deep voice of Sachio of Grahoffen! He held his breath that he might catch every word that came from the room within.

"Listen! Ladislaw," he heard Sachio say. "What, did you tell me that you had it? Give it to me, in my hand! It cannot be true."

"None the less, it is true," said another voice, that of the man called Ladislaw. Apparently he held out something which both regarded.

"Ladislaw, you have won fortune for us both. There is no price can be put upon this half of the coin. It is ours, at last."

Count Frederick smiled to himself—smiled for an instant only.

view of what so recently has passed, it would be easier for you to be our enemy than our friend—is it not true, dear Sachio?"

Sachio made no reply. They walked forward, descending, advancing into the darker portions of the subterranean passages.

"By the way, my dear Sachio," said Frederick, at length—he had Sachio just slightly by the arm, and walked abreast of him, so there might be no sudden treachery—"there is a room yonder where we have long hidden our medieval armor of this palace. Would you like to see it? It is just beyond."

"It is dark," said Sachio, laughing lightly, and hesitating. "What is there, in there?"

"It might be the very torture chamber of old Gretzhoffen, my dear Sachio! It might be the treasure chamber of the king himself—the old king! It might be here that were concealed the treasures of Gretzhoffen—is it not true? You know of them?"

"I have never heard of them, my dear Frederick," replied Sachio.

"Not so, my friend. You have half the coin. It is but counterfeit. The true half—that half which you sought in my quarters so feloniously—is in possession of another."

"You mean that wench—that American—"

It was that instant that the heavy hand of Count Frederick smote him full in the face. "You shall not mention her!" he growled; and the next instant he had Sachio by the shoulders and was thrusting him with all his power toward the open door. It had all along been his intention to imprison Sachio here in the torture chamber.

The next moment Count Frederick felt at his back the impact of another man. The three struggled furiously.

"Quick! Shoot him!" panted Sachio. "Kill him! I cannot last!"

"I am not armed," cried Ladislaw. "Let me search."

Frederick felt the hands of his new enemy feeling at his pockets, searching for some weapon, and rejoiced that he also at the moment was unarmed. At least the conflict would be more even now.

But they were more than a match for him. Count Frederick felt an arm throttle him, felt his eyes almost start from his head, felt his breath leaving him. Slowly slipping, inch by inch, he felt himself impelled toward the open door. Strive as best he could, he found himself unable to resist the joint attack of those two desperate men.

3—He Heard the Deep Voice of Sachio.

self. What has kept you away?—though I am sure you came as soon as you could."

"Yes, your majesty, as soon as I could."

"And because you have heard of what we have done today, of how we have routed the army of yonder King Cortislaw—it was cleverly done, mademoiselle, though I do say it."

"And what of him who was with you, your majesty?"

"Whom do you mean? Count Sachio?"

"Count Sachio? Was he here, your majesty? I meant another."

"Ah, always you mean that other. Always he seeks to come between his king and his king's desire," said he, complacently.

"And what is it that your majesty desires?"

"Why, my majesty desires a many things, my dear," he replied, in vinous liberty. "My majesty desired, a while ago, an extra bottle of Beloc, and my majesty sent a man, Count Sachio, yonder to bring it. My majesty desires—"

"Sachio here!"

"Yes, here. You have said that twice. He was here, twice or once—I know not how many times. But now you are here, mademoiselle, and that is enough. My majesty desires—"

He advanced toward her. The leer upon his puffed face gave her swift disgust as well as terror. With no purpose whatever, as she stumbled forward she fled from the room, fled she knew not where.

Without much plan, Kitty turned toward the interior of the palace, and down the long hall which before that time she had explored. Something told her that Frederick, if he were here in the palace now, had passed that way.

The torture chamber—that dread spot! Must she go there to look for him? She sped on rapidly along these passageways which she had learned before. Through the last deep sunken tunnel which led to the door of the torture chamber itself she passed alone, trembling with fear, and yet resolved.

The door was locked. She turned to see the key upon the wall. As she turned there came to her a faint sound. Someone was knocking at the door. The blood stopped at her heart. She felt her face go cold. Had the dead indeed come to life? Was it indeed true that some hand from beyond the grave alone could point out the hiding place of this treasure? What could it mean?

But the knocking at the door grew bolder. She heard a voice—a faint voice through the steel facing of the inner cavern. Trembling, she fitted the key, gave one great push to open the door, which yielded the more quickly to a power exerted within. She saw the faint gleam of a light added to those of her own candle; saw the face of the man she had sought!

"You?" she cried. "It is you?"

She heard him answer calmly, slowly, without agitation, as though all the time he had been convinced she would come.

"It is ended," said Count Frederick at last, slow-

Cotton and the South—How the Invention of the Cotton Gin Shaped Its Destiny

Had the South Never Raised a Bale of Cotton It Would Be Vastly Richer and More Populous Than It Is, in the Opinion of an Authority.

By RICHARD H. EDMONDS, Editor Manufacturers' Record, Baltimore.

WHEN a New England man living in the South invented the cotton gin he probably did more to shape the destiny of the South than any other man who ever lived. Prior to the invention of the cotton gin the South was giving its attention largely to industrial activities. Up to 1810 it led New England in manufacturing. Its foremost men in the early days prior to and after the Revolution were in very many cases men of technical training. Washington was a civil engineer, and his father a miner and shipper of iron ore. Jefferson owned iron works, and in those early days the iron industry was an important factor in the life of a large portion of the South.

In his "History of Iron in All Ages" James M. Swank, in referring to the establishment of many furnaces and bloomeries throughout the then settled portions of the South, said—

"The people who built these furnaces and bloomeries were not only bold and enterprising, but appear to have been born with a genius for making iron. Wherever they went they seem to have searched for iron ore, and, having found it, their small charcoal furnaces and bloomeries soon followed. No States in the Union have shown in their early history more intelligent appreciation of the value of an iron industry than North Carolina and Tennessee, and none have been more prompt to establish it. . . . It is a curious fact that daring men who pushed their way into the wilds of Western Carolina and Eastern Tennessee in the last century, and who set up their small furnaces and bloomeries when forts yet took the place of hamlets, founded an iron industry which still retains many of the primitive features that at first characterized it."

As early as 1716 Governor Spotswood, of Virginia, established several iron making enterprises. In 1727 the General Assembly of that State passed "an act for encouraging adventurers in iron works." Colonel William Byrd, writing in 1732 of the many iron enterprises that had been started in Virginia, refers in one case to the iron development near Fredericksburg, and adds—

"Mr. Washington raises the ore and carts it thither for twenty shillings the ton of iron that it yields. . . . Besides Mr. Washington and Mr. England, there are several other persons in England concerned in these works. Matters are very well managed there, and no expense is spared to make them profitable."

In another place Swank, referring to increased activity of iron interests in Virginia, says—

"About 1790 the iron history of Virginia took a fresh start, as did many other manufactures of the State. . . . No State in the Union gave more attention to domestic manufactures after the close of the Revolution than did Virginia. Richmond, Lynchburg, Staunton, Winchester and some other places became noted for the extent and variety of their manufactures."

In South Carolina iron works were built in 1773, and at the beginning of the Revolution the State offered liberal premiums to those who would establish iron works, and a number of furnaces and rolling mills and nail mills were established. During the Revolutionary War William Hill, father of General D. H. Hill, of the Confederate army, operated a large and blast furnace in that State. These works were burned by Lord Cornwallis in his advance from upper South Carolina to North Carolina, and some small iron guns made in these works to aid in the Revolution were captured by Cornwallis and destroyed. Later on both North and South Carolina gave very considerable attention to iron making, as to other lines of industry.

Trend of Industrial Thought Changed by Gin Invention.

The trend of Southern thought to industrial activities, as indicated in these facts, typical of many that could be given, was changed largely by the invention of the cotton gin. In those days the price of cotton was so high and the profit in its production so great that the energy and capital of the South were soon concentrated upon cotton growing. In the early days of the cotton industry prices ranged from fourteen or fifteen cents to forty cents a pound, yielding unusual profits. Under such conditions the South for several decades almost forgot its industrial activities and centered its thought and life upon cotton. In order to grow more cotton, to meet the world's demand, it sought to increase the number of slaves and open up more land. This condition brought about a marked movement of population from the upper Southern States toward Alabama and Mississippi, in order to enlarge the cotton area and get the benefit of their virgin soils, increasing the demand for still more slaves with which to cultivate still more cotton land.

Thus the cotton gin fastened cotton upon the South, and cotton, with its slurring profits in the early days, was largely responsible for fastening slavery, with all its train of evils, more firmly upon this section.

The creation of the cotton growing industry during the first sixty years of the last century is probably the greatest business achievement made by any section of any country during that time. It represented a much larger investment of capital than the entire manufacturing business of New England. It had reached a point in international affairs where it largely dominated the politics of this country and to a considerable extent the politics of this country and of Great Britain. The people of the South had learned to think cotton and measure all of their business activities by the cotton boll and bale.

New England's manufacturing interests in those days were based almost wholly upon domestic trade; the South's cotton business was international in its importance and scope, and it brought the business men of the South in intimate touch with all the financial and manufacturing interests of Europe.

Cotton Enchains Entire Southland.

As cotton chained slavery to the South, so cotton has chained the South to the slavery of thinking and acting in terms of cotton.

In the early forties, when overproduction brought about a rapid decline in the price of cotton, the average New York middling price for 1844-45 being 5.63c, there was a very quick turn of the South back to industrial activities. Stimulated by the new spirit created by the development of railroads, and turning from cotton by reason of low prices, the South, handicapped as it was by slavery, promptly turned its thought to industrial pursuits. In the decade 1850 to 1860 the South made remarkable progress in the revival of its manufacturing interests, but, of course, during the fifty years in which the South had concentrated its thought upon cotton New England had concentrated its activities upon manufactures. It had in this way created such extensive manufacturing interests that the South was far in the rear in industrial pursuits. The South did, however, during the decade of 1850 to 1860 throw tremendous energy into the discussion of industrial work and into the actual development of manufacturing and railroad interests. But the war came, and when in 1865 the long, gray line, which was then only a shell, faded away the South was utterly and apparently hopelessly bankrupt. Its labor system had been completely changed and those who as slaves had been directed by master minds in their farm work now suddenly found themselves left to their own initiative. They had never learned to think for themselves. They had always depended upon their owners to think for them. They had been directed what to do and how to do it. They knew that when they left the field they had nothing else to think about, for a home, food and clothes were provided for them.

Industrial Chaos After War.

If to-day a great machine shop employing a thousand men working under the control of a few foremen and superintendents were suddenly broken up and every man was told to go out and start a little machine shop for himself the local confusion would not be as great relatively as that which confronted the agriculture of the whole South by reason of the change from slave to free labor and the conditions under which the changes were made. The negro had neither the experience nor the ability to operate for himself which would be found at least among some of the thousand mechanics suddenly turned loose and told to start a thousand small machine shops. Nevertheless, there was an abundance of land available, and cotton factors and money lenders were ready to aid the negroes as well as others for a profit, and a very big one at that, in renting a few acres on which to raise cotton, "crubstakking" them until the cotton was picked. The land owners of the South also were compelled, by reason of their poverty following the war, likewise to put themselves in the hands of the money lenders, who helped them to make a crop by advancing money and taking a mortgage on the crop in advance of the ploughing of the land in which it was to be planted.

Prior to the war the Central South had been very largely self-sustaining in the production of foodstuffs. The plantation was a well rounded institution. It raised its corn and hogs and to a considerable extent made its cotton a surplus crop. Some of the slaves were taught carpentering, some blacksmithing and some were given other trades, so that most of the work needed on a plantation could be done without calling on outside help.

Indeed the well-rounded plantation of earlier days was the forerunner of the big industrial enterprise of to-day which seeks to control all of its raw materials; such, for instance, as in iron and steel, where the large concerns own their iron ore, their limestone, their coking coal and, in some cases, the railroads which assemble these raw materials out of which to turn the finished product.

The complete breaking up of the whole industrial system of the day, the abandonment of every big shop, the immediate forcing back of every workman into mining his own ore, making his own bit of pig iron or establishing his own machine shop would scarcely be a greater revolution than that which faced the agricultural South in 1865.

Cotton Money Advanced Plentifully.

Under the conditions then prevailing money lenders advanced against cotton only. They would not advance a dollar against grain or livestock. There were two reasons for this. Cotton was always salable anywhere, and the money lender had in cotton a gilt edge security which he could cash in with less trouble than anything else produced on the farm. He was not in a position generally to handle the sale of foodstuffs, but the world was hungry for all the cotton he could tempt the cotton grower to produce by his advances upon it. Moreover, a very large percentage of the money lenders were cotton factors or commission merchants, who had a double reason for following this policy. If they could keep the planter, large or small, from growing his own foodstuffs, they would have the profit of selling to him all that he required for the maintenance of his family and the feeding of his live stock. They thus "grub staked" the planter by selling to him at an exorbitant figure all foodstuffs for man and beast, his agricultural implements and the mules with which he worked the land. They had a mortgage on the cotton before it was planted, and, holding this over the grower, he was compelled to buy from them at their prices and on their terms.

It was estimated that for many years after the war the average cost to the small cotton grower who had to buy on credit in this way was more than seventy-five per cent higher than he could have obtained the same things for if he had been able to buy for cash. And even now the difference is great enough to keep the indifferent farmer forever poor.

That the South ever survived such a system and finally pulled itself together and worked out of it is an amazing tribute to the inherent agricultural potentialities of this section.

It is true that the small tenant farmers, of whom there are about one million, are still handicapped by such conditions. Their crops are very largely made on advances from the land owner, the local banker or the local merchant. For more than fifty years they have followed this system, until it has seemed almost impossible to break the tenant farmers away from the system of raising all cotton and buying all of their foodstuffs.

Small Farmer Still Handicapped.

The traveller through the South away from the railway lines can see thousands of small tenant houses, some occupied by whites and some by blacks, without a vestige of garden; not a vegetable in sight, not a chicken or a pig on the place. The cotton crop as raised by these people requires less thought, less brain work and less bodily work than any other important crop produced. And so this element of the South, which has been the heaviest burden that it has had to carry—except the demagogic politician, of which there is a perennial crop—keeps on raising cotton and buying its food supplies. The more intelligent planters, as differentiated from this system of the poorer tenants, who to a large extent are of the blockade of its whole coast, the condition of Germany at the end would not be nearly so disastrously bad as was that of the South.

We should also remember that by reason of the demoralization after the war about 8,000,000 whites emigrated between 1865 and 1900 from the Central South to the North, the West, the Pacific coast and Texas, thus draining that section of hundreds of thousands of its most intelligent and progressive young men from the farms and the villages.

When these facts are taken into account the South is entitled to boundless praise for what it has wrought.

Had the South never raised a bale of cotton it would, I am satisfied, be vastly richer and more populous than it is.

Without cotton the South would not have had the same inducement to extend slavery, and slavery enchain the white man's potentialities far more than it enchain the slave.

Without cotton and the extension of slavery developed by cotton the South would have concentrated its energies upon industrial activities, and this section would long ago have become one of the foremost regions of the world in manufacturing development.

Well Rounded Agricultural Growth.

Without cotton the South would have carried out a well rounded agricultural growth which would have made it a great grain and livestock region, in this respect rivaling, if not surpassing, the West. That the South is admirably adapted for livestock raising, that hogs and cattle can be produced in this section at a lower cost and to greater profit

It has a variety of soil that, according to its kind, will produce almost any variety of crops, from the semi-tropical of Florida and the Gulf coast to those that require the cold climate of the high mountain regions.

And yet a country so marvelously endowed with advantages for diversified agriculture and for diversified and extensive manufacturing in every line of human activity has made cotton its fetish, and in the worship of cotton has failed to gain that almost limitless prosperity which nature seems to have foreordained for it when it dowered it more richly with natural resources than any other country on earth.

Possibilities of Cotton All but Boundless.

Notwithstanding this view of the situation, however, cotton is a wonderful crop, whose potentialities when wisely controlled are almost boundless. The South produces about two-thirds of the world's cotton. In this practical monopoly it has an advantage over all other countries in furnishing the raw material for the second greatest manufacturing interest, surpassed in output by steel and iron alone. This very monopoly, however, has been a hindrance to the South. Had this section had to fight harder to maintain its cotton industry in competition with other countries, greater care in cultivation and in the handling of cotton would have been required. The very lavishness of the advantages given by nature for cotton growing has resulted in developing improvidence in the growing and the handling of the crop.

It is but natural that as the business and political life of much of the South has for a century centred around cotton this section should be extremely sensitive to anything that relates to its great staple. Cotton has, therefore, been the stumbling block of the politicians of the South. Whenever they have desired to stimulate interest in their own waning fortunes or to catch the applause of the crowd they have appealed to the fetish worship of cotton by the South. As the politicians for half a century before the war used slavery, and for half a century after the war the bugaboo of the free negro, to solidify the political thought of the South, so they have for generations used cotton as something that immediately catches the ear of the South and appeals to its enthusiasm when cotton is boosted and to its prejudices when cotton is in their judgment mistreated or its value minimized.

Cotton Sometimes a Curse.

As wonderful as cotton is, far reaching in all the ramifications of the world's trade and when rightly used one of the best material blessings it has ever given to any country, it often proves a curse by absorbing so much of the thought of this section. Even liberality to religious or educational work largely depends upon the price of cotton, and yet even the most valuable cotton crop ever produced by the South, which yielded, including the seed, more than $1,100,000,000, was considerably less than one-third of the total value of the South's agricultural products for the year.

If half of the energy given by press and by politicians to the discussion of the wrongs alleged to cotton were expended in stimulating the South to the diversification of its agriculture, instead of stirring the South to the worship of cotton, infinitely greater good would be accomplished.

The South could turn from cotton growing to diversified agriculture with far less loss to itself than the loss to the business interests of the world outside of the South. The South is not one-tenth so dependent for its prosperity upon cotton as the great textile manufacturing centres of the world are dependent upon the South for their existence.

It has been demonstrated in every section of the South, from Virginia to far away Texas, that there is scarcely any portion of this region which could not turn to diversified agriculture to greater profit than raising cotton, even if cotton continued to sell at a high price. No greater mistake can be made by the South or about the South than to imagine that the soil of this section is better adapted for cotton than for other profitable crops.

Moreover, diversified farming would bring increasing fertility to Southern soil. Grains and grasses would mean hogs and cattle, and these would mean enriched soil and diversity of thought as well as diversity of farming.

Broader Civilization Possible.

A broader and higher civilization would be the result of a campaign persistently fought out for inducing the landowners of the South, the bankers and the merchants and the manufacturers to use their utmost energy to lessening the interest in cotton growing and to increasing the interest of the tenant farmer as well as of the larger farmer in diversity in agriculture.

The highest ultimate prosperity to the South will come not from high prices of cotton, though high prices always bring temporary prosperity, but from the gradual lessening of the South's dependence on cotton and an increase of the South's attention to the raising of larger diversified crops and of livestock, for which this section is so splendidly equipped by nature.

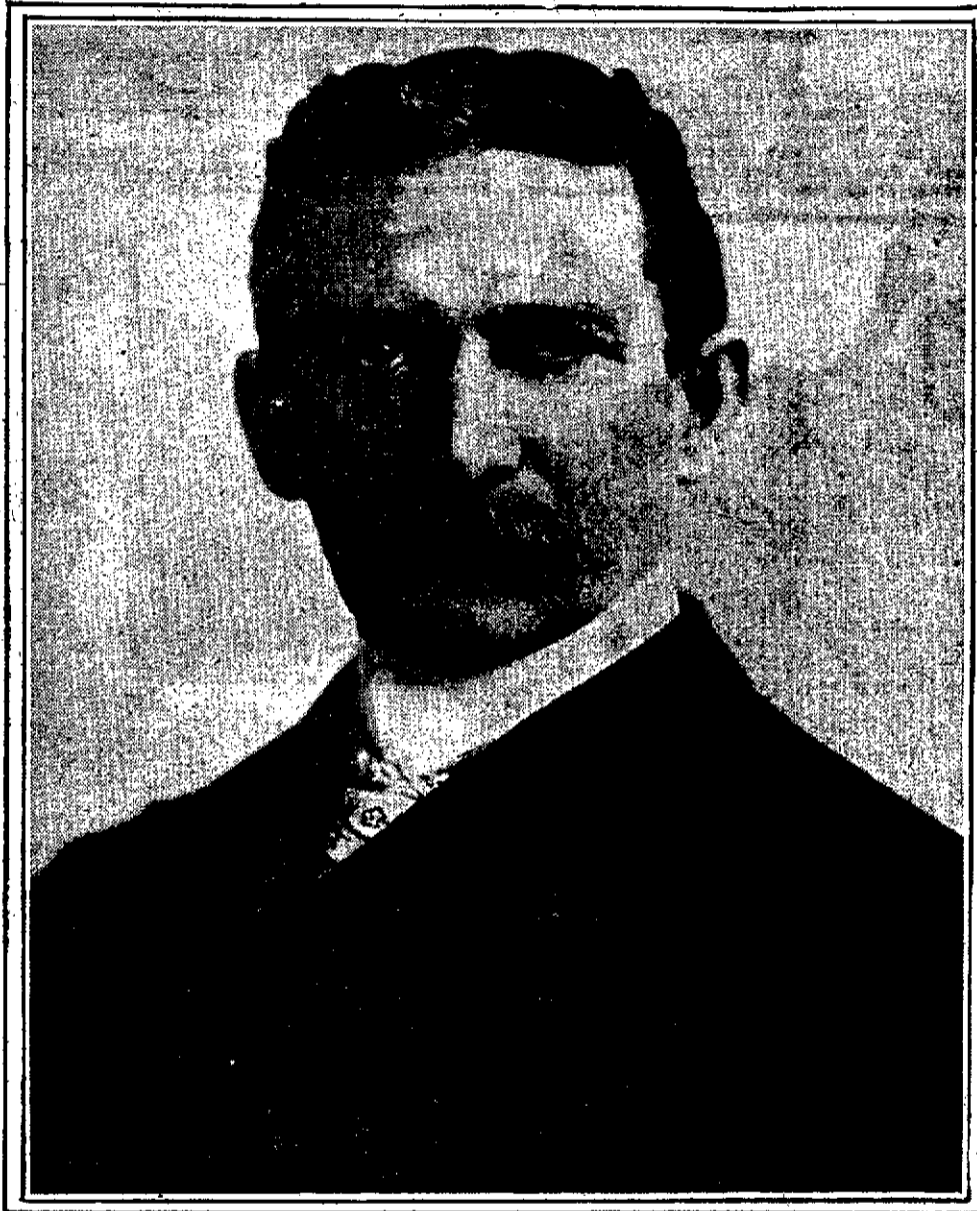

Virginia.

There was a time when the farmers of Southwest Virginia, "the fairest land on earth," dug up blue grass, and even burned the roots, because of the dread of grass. In that same section, on that once despised blue grass, they now fatten the finest cattle that go to the markets of this or any other country.

Florida.

There was a time when it was thought that Florida could raise only oranges and grapefruit and vegetables, but I have visited a farm of five thousand acres in the centre of Florida where Western men are growing grain and raising cattle to a larger profit than they were ever able to make in the best grain and cattle regions of the West.

May the day be hastened when cotton shall be dethroned as king in thought as in trade and in commerce, and when it shall be made a servant, blessing the South as a servant where it cursed it as king. Then this section will look back and rejoice that through much tribulation it has reached the Promised Land of diversified agriculture, for with diversified agriculture in its broadest sense will come the widest diversity of economic thought and educational advancement and abounding wealth.

Richard H. Edmonds, Editor Manufacturers' Record, Baltimore, Md.

more illiterate element, are among the best farmers in the land. They raise to a very considerable extent, as the old South did, their food supplies, and they are increasing their production of live stock as well as of grains and grasses. They know the farming business as well as the most intelligent Western farmer.

The more intelligent planters are the ones who are redeeming the agricultural interests of the South from the curse of "all cotton." They are the ones who are diversifying its agricultural interests, who are giving increased attention to grains and grasses and cattle raising and food growing. They are the ones who are building better homes, who are leaders in many activities looking to material and educational betterment of their country.

Example Set by Intelligent Planters.

Sooner or later their example will be followed by many of the poorer tenant farmers. The change is already in evidence, though it has necessarily been slow. When, however, we consider the awful wreck and ruin following four years of war, the utter destruction of all the wealth of the South, the revolution in its labor system and the necessity of resuming farming burdened with these conditions and with the exorbitant rates for money and for goods purchased or raised, the world ought not to be surprised at what to some seems slow progress in the diversification of agriculture.

If Germany should maintain the present war for four years, and if the Allies should overrun that country from end to end, as the Union armies did the South, and if the British navy should completely blockade all Germany from the outside world, as the South was shut off by the than in the West, is now almost universally admitted, and the national government is looking forward to the time when the South will become the great beef producing section of the country.

Without cotton all of these things would have been achieved long before the war.

And had this been done, to an agricultural prosperity equal to that of the West, made possible by grains and grasses and cattle, the South would have made this the manufacturing empire of the world.

It is, I believe, universally accepted that there is no other region on earth known to man possessing the remarkable combination of advantages to be found in the South for the widest variety of manufactures.

In the South there are 88,000 square miles of coal, or twice as much coal area as all Europe possesses, and more than four times as much as all of Europe outside of Russia. Three-fourths of the coking coal area of the United States, upon which depends the metallurgical development of the entire country, is in the South.

Possibilities of the Great South.

This region, so richly endowed with coal, has likewise the advantage of having vast stores of iron ore in close proximity to its coal.

It is the chief source of supply of lumber for the United States.

It has water power of almost limitless potentialities.

It is the centre of the world's greatest activities in natural gas and oil production.

It produces about three-fourths of the sulphur of the world.

It has more than one-half of the entire coast line of the United States.

CONFESSIONS OF A CROOK THE PSYCHOLOGY OF CRIME AND REFORM:

The Daring Daylight Holdup of Mr. Poppa of Poppa & Gray, New York, a Success for the Moment and a Cog in the Wheel That Led to the Ultimate Failure of the Writer—Joe Taylor, a Bandit With a Brain, Has a Mission—Disillusionment for Those Who Think They Can Transgress the Laws of Man and Society—And He Has a Word for the Reformers

LAST week Taylor, styled by the New York judiciary as one of the most daring criminals ever brought to justice, told how in conjunction with other denizens of the underworld he planned a daylight robbery of the manager of Poppa & Gray while the senior member of that firm was en route to the bank with a week's factory receipts. We left Taylor on a crowded city thoroughfare advancing toward his victim with a hand on his "cannon" and his confederates awaiting the signal for an auto dash and the getaway. The object of this writer is not to exploit his daring but his downfall. He was the acme of fearlessness and he has a brain meant for better things. He is using that brain now as it was meant he should use it. Whether you are an upstanding citizen with a respect for the law or a callow youth with a supercilious disrespect of it you will do well to read the story of "Joe" Taylor. There is a lesson in it for both.

By JOSEPH TAYLOR.

AS MR. POPPA—the manufacturer on his way to the bank, carrying a week's factory receipts in a small valise—passed the brick-smith-shop two doors from his own office, William Egan, the proprietor, his friend and neighbor, called out to him jokingly: "You'd better leave that bag with me."

Poppa's friendly, answering smile still lingered on his face as I stepped in front of him and put my gun to his head. "Give me that bag," I said quietly.

With a panic-stricken yell he raised both hands and threw the bag to the sidewalk at my feet as though it burned his fingers, and with lightning swiftness turned and fled whence he had come.

So quickly did he wheel about that Tom—a few feet directly behind—could not get out of the way to avoid a collision that added to Poppa's confusion.

As I stooped to pick up the satchel I saw him (Poppa) throw both arms around the bewildered "harness bull" in a frenzy of fear. This cop, Thomas J. M., told me not long ago that he did not know Poppa that morning. Nor did he at the moment realize just what was happening. In telling me of his part in the holdup he said: "The first thing I did was to clip him over the head with my club because I thought I was being attacked."

I myself did not see the blow struck because Tom and I were running to the corner—guns in hand, and I with the bag—to meet our automobile. But when we reached the corner we were amazed to find it had not moved from the spot a block away where I had last seen it.

A Desperate Situation.

A—'s cousin was still sitting in front at the wheel, but A— himself was nowhere to be seen.

Poppa's loud cries had drawn attention to us by this time, and as if by magic the street became alive with people—from shops, tenement doorways and several saloons. As we stood nonplussed for the moment I saw the cop, firemen, Poppa, now hatless, and a mixed crowd starting in our direction—not with an enthusiastic rush but warily.

In order to avoid the pedestrians Tom and I ran off the sidewalk up the Ninth avenue pavement toward the stationary machine. One young lad ran out into my path and fearlessly tried to intercept me, but I pushed him aside without difficulty.

Reaching the auto I threw the bag on the back seat and vaulted over the side into the tonneau, while Tom jumped in the front beside the "wop" who was sitting horror-stricken at the sight of the mob coming our way along the sidewalk, headed by the uniformed cop and firemen. "Go on!" yelled Tom and I together. "Start her up or we will blow your head off!" "It's no use. Look at the cops," was the Italian's faltering reply.

His hesitation between fear of us and fear of the law was suddenly terminated by Tom firing a shot within an inch of his shaking head, and he started the machine slowly down the avenue along the curb of the sidewalk that held the advancing crowd. "Faster," I cried, as I stood up in back of him, leaning out over the side of the car with gun extended ready to meet the expected volley of shots from the cop.

The crowd had come to a halt awaiting us and as we passed the cop he was but a scant five feet from me. I fired a shot over his head. The policeman was at the curb, the crowd pressing close behind him. He stood as though transfixed. In his hands, in its black leather holster, I saw his revolver, his right hand over the end of the holster, his left grasping the handle of the gun. I smiled at his confusion as I pulled the trigger. Seemingly bereft of the power to act he did not duck his head nor blink his eyes when I fired.

The shot passed over his head, crashed through the window of a candy store and struck an upright display stand of colored postal cards there.

Desert the Car.

Fifty feet north of this window a white-coated barber, Henry Becker by name, dropped to the sidewalk—Becker thought he had been struck in a vital spot by the bullet and he lay there unharmed, although apparently lifeless. Here Tom fired a third shot in the air with his gun, and as he did so the machine gathered speed and drew away from the crowd rapidly. Passing Seventeenth street corner we were forced to slow up almost to a dead stop to allow the passage east of an empty horse-drawn truck, but the delay was only momentary, and continuing downtown we soon turned east, out of the sight of our pursuers, to Eighth avenue, then south to Twelfth street, where I told the driver to go east again.

In front of St. Vincent's Hospital our much-tried chauffeur's nerve went to pieces and he lost control of his car so that the car made a complete circle and nearly overturned.

"Stop the car," said I, and as with some little difficulty he obeyed Tom and I jumped out.

"So long," we offered as we walked away rapidly without further ceremony. There is reason to believe that the driver was as glad to be rid of his so troublesome fares as were we to be gone from him.

During the ride over I had opened the bag and transferred its contents to my pockets and left the empty valise and Poppa's bank book on the floor of the tonneau.

That morning before starting we—Joe R—, Frank A—, Tom C— and I— had agreed to meet after the job in a certain saloon for the division of the money. But Frank had deserted the mob at a critical moment and Joe had remained on his corner throughout the hold-up, instead of doing as he should in the matter of entering and staying inside the saloon after signaling his identification of Poppa (Joe was a crook well known in that neighborhood, and it later developed that his presence there that morning was duly reported to the police by a stool pigeon, although this report confused his identity with that of his brother Philip, an ex-convict).

I Stepped in Front of Him and Said, "Give Me That Bag," With a Panic-Stricken Yell, He Raised Both Hands and Threw the Bag at My Feet.

Because of these breaches of compact I refused to carry out the original agreement by which Joe R— was to get 20 per cent gross and split the balance equally three ways. The bag had contained an $8,000 bank deposit, but only $550 was in actual cash, the remainder in checks.

Tom and I counted the money, took $388 apiece, and I reserved the other $90 for Joe's share. We then proceeded to the meet and were dumfounded to see on approaching the rendezvous our disappearing friend Frank A— standing with Joe outside the saloon.

"What happened to you?" I demanded of Frank. "Didn't you see me drop the guy in the white coat?" was the guile that met my question.

"No. Nor I didn't hear any shot." As I thus replied I reflected that it was possible two shots had sounded as one—his and mine—but his lying story to account for his failure to enter the auto, although Joe contributed a lame assent to some of its details, was a palpable lie.

He said he had fired from behind an iron pillar of the elevated railway structure and struck the barber, Becker, and had then, "slung" the gun (a pearl-handled six-shooter Tom had loaned him that morning) away in the street and hopped on a "rattler" (street car).

"You saw me sling the rod (gun) away, didn't you?" He appealed to Joe, and when Joe said "yes" he lied. After some hesitation I decided to be rid of Frank peacefully, so I gave Tom $30 and told him to put a like amount to it and give it to Frank as I said, "Look at this bundle of checks (fifty-six in number); there was only $220 cash in the bag." Thus I added my lie to the others.

Bidding Tom and Frank good-by, I walked away with Joe, and after handing him $50 and listening to a tale of his financial woes I gave him an additional $10 gold piece and left him.

The checks were worthless to us, so I threw them down a sewer manhole. I felt sure that Frank's cousin had had no realization beforehand of the part he was called upon to play in the hold-up, but I was certainly surprised to read in the newspapers next day that he had been pinched.

"Stephen Dolce," the account read, "the driver of the auto bandit car, arrested in his home in Brooklyn. Police find the red automobile used in the Poppa robbery."

The license on the car had been Dolce's own and Poppa, having noted the number, the auto was immediately traced and the luckless Stephen taken to police headquarters. Under the "third decree" he told how his cousin Frank had deceived him regarding the use to which the car was to be put. Frank had told him he had a couple of good-paying customers to hire the car for $5 per hour.

A few days later I read in the papers how a fully loaded, pearl-handled revolver was found by the police hidden under a seat cushion of Dolce's car. Frank had put it there—probably when he saw the harness bull pass down the avenue. Dolce was indicted for the robbery and he was out on bail awaiting trial when in March, 1913, I was arrested for another robbery.

Either because I was in so bad then that I figured that confessing the truth of the Poppa robbery could do me little harm or because I wanted to keep an innocent man from getting a long bit in Sing Sing, I wrote from the Tombs to District Attorney Whitman, asked for and received the chance to tell the truth about Dolce. Thus was his innocence established.

Threat of Death.

In the first week of December of that year Frank A— was caught. He had just returned from Italy, whither he had fled after Dolce had named him to the police. By that time I was a prisoner in the New York County penitentiary and the first intimation of A—'s arrest came to me in the shape of a warning that I "would be croaked by one of his six brothers" if I testified against Frank.

Both Dolce and I appeared before the grand jury which indicted A—, and later at his trial I took the witness stand against him. But the case against him failed because Dolce, the principal witness for the prosecution, stayed away and could not be produced to testify against his relative.

I was glad when the case against A— collapsed for lack of corroboration of my testimony, because even though I gave my best efforts to convict him I felt I was doing a mean wrong in trying to send him to prison. For, at that time, I had been more than six months in the penitentiary, and what I saw and experienced there of the effect of our penal system of punishment had fully convinced me that it makes a bad man worse, a dangerous criminal more potent for crime.

Prison Brings Reform.

For this reason it is possible that if my false pride had not been aroused by the threat of death I might have declined to testify against him in court. To my notion I was duly and hourly a degraded and oppressed victim of society's revenge. No amount of meditation on the magnitude of my offenses against individuals or the community could induce sufficient measure of contrition to outweigh the indignities that harassed me and my fellow prisoners.

But for an occurrence in which neither priest, minister nor constituted authority, nor personal influence had a creating hand in my reformation I should, in all probability, have come out of prison a much worse man than when I entered, and as such a menace to society.

The Widely Different Effects of Fear.

IN THE same instant fear fell upon two men—the one who had the swag of the holdup and the police officer who sought to catch the thief. The thief was nervously active, shooting at every provocation—the other man, who had no guilt upon his soul, stood dazed, powerless to perform his duty.

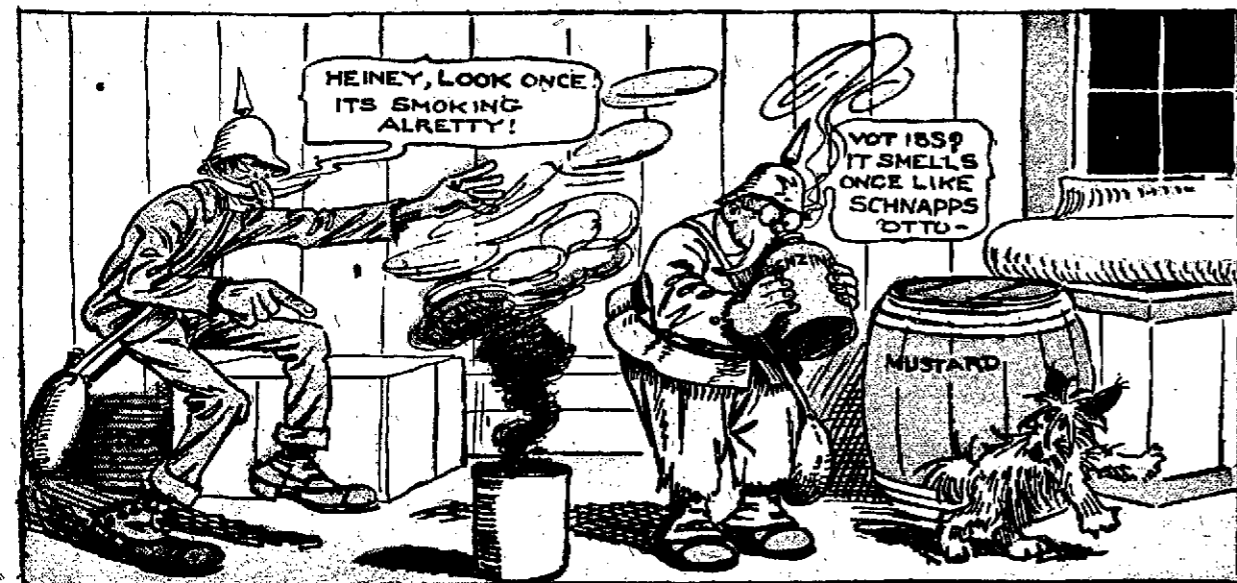

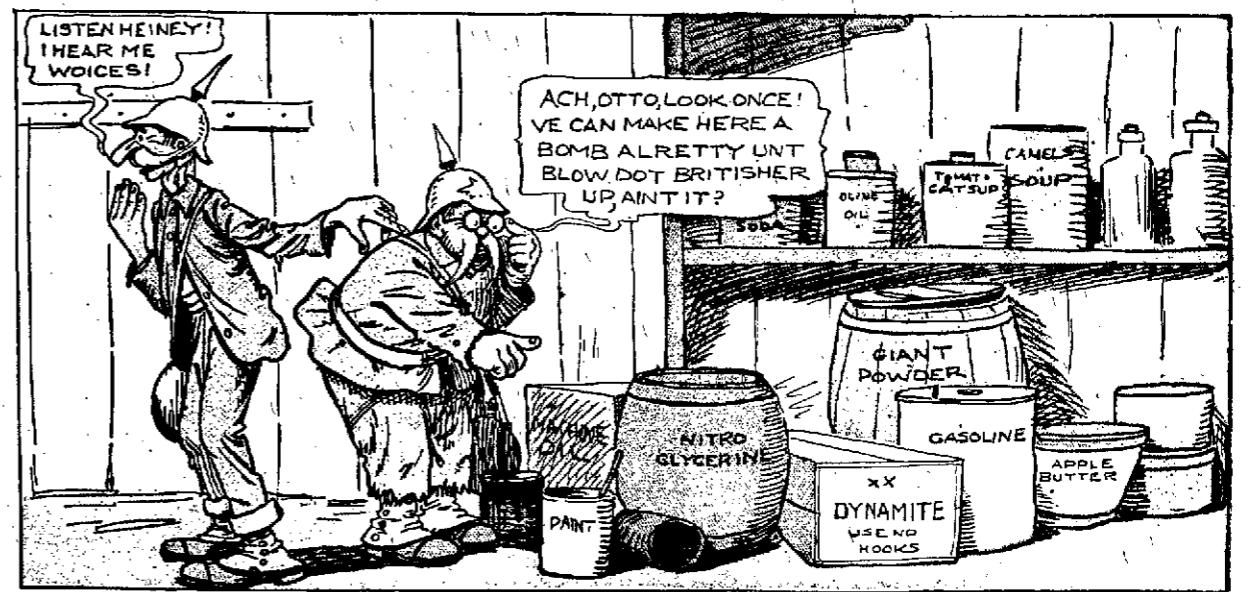

The thief of the story says: "I fired a shot over the policeman's head. He stood as though transfixed. In his hands, in its black leather holster, I saw his revolver, his right hand over the end of the holster, his left grasping the handle of the gun. I smiled at his confusion as I pulled the trigger. Seemingly bereft of the power to act, he did not duck his head nor blink his eyes when I fired. The shot passed over his head, crashed through the window of a candy store and struck an upright display stand of colored postal cards there.

"Fifty feet north of this window a white-coated barber, Henry Becker by name, dropped to the sidewalk—Becker thought he had been struck in a vital spot by the bullet and he lay there unharmed, although apparently lifeless."

Scottish Rite Masons' Convalescent Home Points Way To Health and Happy Days for Crippled Children

New Charity Brings Sunshine to Hearts of Dixie's Maimed Tots

These two buildings, connected by a hallway, constitute the Scottish Rite Masons' Convalescent Home for Crippled Children.

By Betty Craig.

Forrest Adair, who loves a good song, a good story and a good deed, had carried me out the East Lake drive through Druid Hills to the Scottish Rite Masons' Convalescent Home for Crippled Children, the only orthopedic institution in the south.

Miss Lillian Carter, lately of Seattle, specialist and nurse with a mission, had met us at the door with a smile of welcome as bright as the aureate hue of her hair.

"Walk right in," she said. "We shall go directly to see Becky."

It was thus inferred—and later justified—that "Becky" was an institutional showpiece, like the most impressive painting in the reception parlor, or the heirloom vase in the hallway.

There was personal and institutional pride in Miss Carter's assurance that "we'd go directly to see Becky."

Perhaps she wanted to display Becky to us first of all so that, having been duly overwhelmed by the charms of Becky, we would be thrown into a state of unpreparedness to perceive any institutional discrepancies that might greet us on our tour of inspection.

Miss Carter ushered us through the twin buildings. In the reception hall of the second building she stopped, and motioning for us to tip-toe, called into an adjoining room in mock telephone summons:

INTRODUCING MISS BLOOMING.

"Hello, Miss Blooming! Are you there?"

We halted in our steps.

A child's cheery voice came from somewhere in the back of the building.

"Hey-oi Yethum, I'm here! 'S 'at you?"

"Yes. Are you coming over to visit us this afternoon, Miss Blooming?"

"Yethum, I'm count'widerrin' it. Will you be at home all 'th' afternoon?"

"To be sure. Will you come in your machine?"

"No'm! The dwiver, you thea, ith off on a vittit."

Miss Carter discontinued the mock phoning.

"It will take her some time to get here. You see, she can't walk."

Can't walk? Why, her voice had been that of a lively sprite! One could no more associate the joy in it with deformity than sunshine with tears!

We turned to Miss Carter to speak.

"Hey-o Mith Cahiah," interrupted the voice. "I'm tomlin' wright over. I'm bwingin' the children."

"Do bring the family," urged the nurse.

Forrest Adair and I stood awaiting for a laughing child to come skipping from the rear of the building, hurrying on nimble legs into the arms of the nurse.

That was all any stranger, hearing the cheer of that unseemly voice, could expect.

But bolts come from the blue, rhapsodies from the hearts of the ugly, gems of song from beggars, and Becky came to us by a means of locomotion that consisted of one hand which dragged a misshapen body and two lifeless legs and an arm.

THE "CHILDREN."

"The children" she had promised to bring was a tattered rag doll, which she held in her teeth.

Her blue eyes were merry. Her pretty teeth flashed in sympathy with the happy humor that spread over her freckled cheeks. Her curls were jet black. Her head was shaped like a doll's.

She crawled and slid to the feet of Miss Carter. She proffered the rag doll.

"The family sorter sinks it's time for tea," she laughed.

In the presence of Becky, Mr. Adair and I had become as different and solicitous as humble subjects admitted by lowly dispensation to the presence of Her Ladyship. In acknowledgement of our formal introduction, we bowed and salaamed with awed respect.

Most anybody with a pull can commune with nobility. But it's a special distinction to be introduced to Becky. A regal robe and scepter and she could have graced a fairy tale, from whence it was pleasant to imagine she had stepped.

"Oh, I know you." She pointed an accusing finger to Mr. Adair. "Youth Mithther Pohweth 'Dair, saw you dot thumphin' to do with thith hotpital—you/been out here befowah."

Beauty showering its favors upon him, or royalty seeking his counsel, could not thrill Forrest Adair more than this. With an exuberance you'd hardly expect of a mighty reddy man, he bundled Becky into his arms and enugaled her to his chest.

I imagine he did his own children that way when they were tots like Becky. He couldn't have been any more enthusiastic about even his own.

To be remembered by Becky was a crowning glory.

Men have strutted and protruded, their chests for less.

Just as the tattered rag doll is the dearest to the heart of the child, Becky, though broken and maimed, has been a plaything of the Fates. From cradle days until now—she is only four—she has been shunted about from home to home.

Not until she came to the crippled children's hospital did she know a permanent home. And never until then was there any hope for her cure.

She has this repertoire of answers for the questions that are put to her by strangers:

"I'm Webecca Blooming, foah yearth ol', goin' on five. I dot thichka mo' thithert, but they're all whole."

HER RECITATION.

And then she recites for those who wish her little tragedy of the unclad fly, which concludes with the following line:

"O-o-o-o-o-o but ith cold."

Narrating the last line in description of the fly's plight, she embellishes it with a gesture, bringing her arms across her bosom in mock shivering. This she performs by bringing the lifeless arm around in the grasp of the useful one.

She smiles wily in excuse for this, as though to say she could do better if the other arm wasn't helpless.

It makes you want to grab Becky into your arms and obey the impulse to smother her with kisses and promise her anything on earth—and keep the promise.

"And a little child shall lead them!" Children like Becky, yes! Folks who might not care for the hospital can't help falling in love with Becky.

The neglect of the gods who fashioned her will be compensated by the state of perpetual pamperdom in which Becky will bask as long as there is a visitor or "attache around the institution."

The Sunday editor when he assigned me to this story desired that I go out and write up the hospital in general. But Becky did not enter into his or my calculations, although she stole into the heart and has taken permanent residence there.

Here I find I've contributed probably more space to Becky than will be allotted the hospital. Well, I have this to say: Becky deserves it. The printed page of the Sunday newspaper will not be Becky's only or greatest agency of immortalization. There is a walk in store for Becky, and she'll yet walk on two good feet to the foot of the rainbow.

The hospital in which Becky became the charter inmate is destined to become Atlanta society's pet charity. It is the only institution in the south where children can come for orthopedic treatment. It is only an infant of a hospital now, but before two years have passed it will rank with the biggest in the nation.

It is one of the outgrowths of the benevolent work carried on for years by one of the city's best known surgeons, Dr. Michael Hoke, surgeon-in-chief of the Scottish Rite hospital, Although it will be maintained largely by charity, the Scottish Rite Masonic body has insured its permanency.

OPENED LAST THURSDAY.

The hospital opened last Thursday. It will now accommodate twenty patients, but only sixteen will be permitted at present. This number has already entered, having come from all parts of the south. It is not a community, fraternal or sectarian institution.

Atlantans will probably remember the pencil campaign carried on downtown just about this time last year by young girls and women composing the Ladies' Hospital auxiliary, headed by Mrs. W. C. Wardlaw, chairman. The $1,100 gained by the sale of pencils at that time was the fund which furnished the nucleus of the crippled children's hospital.

How it came about was in this manner:

Forrest Adair, a philanthropist with many a good deed accredited to his page on the Eternal Ledger, was confronted with a charity case of "club-foot." He sent the child to Dr. Hoke. When Dr. Hoke had performed his orthopedical duty, Mr. Adair sent around for his bill. It was $5 and some odd cents.

Mr. Adair was astonished. He went to see Dr. Hoke.

"It was a charity case, and I acted accordingly. I only charge actual expenses in such cases," he explained. The $5 represented the ambulance bill.

"Now, see here, doctor," Mr. Adair remonstrated, "this puts me in an embarrassing position. I shall, from time to time, have other charity patients, and I wouldn't under such circumstances, want to send them to you."

"You may do as you choose. I would prefer that you do," replied the orthopedist.

"Well, let's talk this matter over," urged Mr. Adair.

Whereupon the philanthropist and orthopedist got together on the subject of charity and orthopedics. Mr. Adair heard for the first time how Dr. Hoke for years had been quietly serving the city's most renowned practitioners, too, are lending splendid aid.

And what a great work is to be performed! There are countless Beckys in Dixie awaiting only the touch of the surgeon's knife to redeem them from orphanhood and return them to joyous mothers' arms, whole and sound and happy.

Where hitherto superstition has condescended and accounted for the miserable plights of deformed children, it will now be criminal to let them remain so.

The medical staff of the crippled children's hospital is headed by Dr. Hoke, and composed of the following physicians:

Dr. E. V. Keller, Dr. O. L. Miller and Dr. Hugh Batter, orthopedists.

Dr. Theo Toupe, physical director.

Dr. W. E. Campbell and Dr. Newton Craig, eye, ear, nose and throat specialists.

Dr. L. B. Clark and Dr. George K. Varden, children's specialists.

Dr. M. E. Turner, Dr. Charles N. Hughes and Dr. S. L. Silverman, dental specialists.

The board of managers is composed of Thomas K. Glenn, president; Forrest Adair, vice-president; Mrs. W. C. Wardlaw, secretary; J. C. Greenfield, treasurer, and David Marx, John Gilmore and Mrs. J. H. Hillsman.

Organization was perfected last May, but the hospital was not thrown open until last week, because of the delay in securing the services of Miss Carter, the specialist.

It is impossible to operate an establishment of this character without the supervision of an expert in orthopedics. Miss Carter is one of the most renowned orthopedists of the Pacific "And where are you going?" the father questioned, idly.

"The ladies' auxiliary board is meeting today to devise some charity scheme," she replied.

Her father, also bent on a mission of charity, but with a more definite idea, perhaps, of his purpose than the ladies' auxiliary board, accompanied Mrs. Gregg to the tea room of the Georgian Terrace, where the meeting was scheduled to take place.

MR. ADAIR'S SPEECH.

Mr. Adair is a right good speaker. Then, too, he is at home with the ladies.

The speech he made before the ladies' auxiliary board that day in a plea for funds to help Dr. Hoke establish an orthopedic hospital might not go down into history as one of the classics of oratory, but the prompt action of the ladies' auxiliary board in adopting his idea was fitting proof of its worthiness as a plain, result-getting argument.

The subsequent pencil campaign of the ladies netted $1,100 for the hospital nucleus.

Then Mr. Adair submitted the same argument to the Scottish Rite body, who promptly pledged its work and its funds to assure the permanent success of the hospital. Now charitably-inclined social workers and society folk are entering into the spirit of the idea enthusiastically. Some of const She had longed to live in the south, and eagerly grasped the opportunity when the offer was made by Dr. Hoke. But it was not without delay that she managed to sever her connections with the Seattle institution. For Miss Carter, although she wears the plain, simple garb of the customary nurse, is no simple nurse. She has devoted years to an assiduous study of orthopedics.

She and Dr. Hoke will be guiding geniuses of the Atlanta hospital. Miss Carter will conduct its manifold affairs and Dr. Hoke will wield the reconstructing scalpel.

The buildings in which the hospital has been set up are two bungalows, thrown together by a connecting hallway. They are adequate for hospital purposes on the small scale the institution will be operated until the middle of next year, or later.

Hundreds of visitors have gone out in the two weeks the hospital doors have been open to the public. The names of many of Atlanta's most conspicuous society figures adorn the pages of the visitors' roll alongside written assurance that each visitor will do her share in aiding the hospital work.

Sebago-Wohelo Camp Fire Girls. The first and only official camp fire book. By Ethel Rogers, with introduction by Mrs. Luther Halsey Gulick, founder of the camp fire movement. Written at Lake Sebago, Maine, last summer.

The camp fire girl movement is getting to be one of the most interesting subjects we have to discuss—it is of as much importance now as the Boy Scout club. Do you know there are now more than 100,000 camp fire girls, divided into over 5,000 camps, and these camps can be found in every state in the United States.

Sebago-Wohelo is a very appropriate name for the Camp Fire Girls. "Wohelo" is the watchword of the camp fires. It is made of the first two letters of the three words that "embody" their motto—"Work, Health, Love." It was at Lake Sebago, in Maine, that the first camp fire club was organized, the founders, Dr. and Mrs. Luther Halsey Gulick, who in their summer camp on the lake, four years ago, started the camp fire movement.

This interesting book should be read by all girls, for it has the freshness, the naturalness of nature, it shows you the joyousness of a girl's life out in the open air, through the live and play, enjoying each day's pleasures—reading, sewing, taking long hikes over the hills, through the woods and making little incidents of their summer camp on the lake, four years ago, started the camp fire movement.

Neurosthenia, or Nervous Exhaustion. With chapters on Christian Science and hypnosis, etc. By Dr. J. H. Kellogg, L.L.D., superintendent of the Battle Creek sanitarium. The physician, who for about a half-century has held very forcibly the same views on the causation of nervous exhaustion, has written this instructive work, and he is a most able contributor to the subject of practical medical knowledge.

Since the publication of the book, the demand has been so great that this second edition has been published. The chapter on "Worry" is one that should be read by every man and woman in America, and even by the members of all American households. "DON'T WORRY—CHER UP!"

Among other useful and instructive books brought out by this company are "Dieting a Delight" (The "New Cookery" by Miss Lena Frances Cooper, chief dietitian at Battle Creek sanitarium); "Constipation" (Colon Hygiene," etc., by Dr. Kellogg).

THE PORTLAND SURVEY.

(A text-book on city school administration based on a concrete study.)

This discussion of school questions by educational experts is arranged in four divisions, under which valuable and practical recommendations are made concerning:

Organizations and Administrations, Instructional Needs, Buildings and Cost, and the Curriculum of the New York City school survey, but the same problems are universal and the methods of solution, recommended, applicable north and south. The book is of great practical importance to school administrators. Published by the World Book company, Yonkers-on-Hudson, New York.)

We control this market for the most wanted plaid silks

Popular velvets

We knew that velvets would be popular. We knew that velvets would be scarce. We prepared for this unprecedented velvet season, and are now ready with the largest assortment of pile fabrics that we have ever shown. In fact, we honestly believe that this is the only store hereabouts in which you can find a complete assortment of much wanted pile fabrics. This includes:

- 40-in. high pile costume velvets $5.00
- 40-in. black chiffon velvets; yard $4.50
- 40-in. erect pile coating velvets $3.00
- 44-in. fast pile black velveteens $2.50

- 20-in. millinery velvets, very soft $1.25

The largest and most comprehensive showing in the state, of New fall silk fabrics

For years we have specialized on silks, and in all of our experience as silk sellers we have never gathered together in any one collection such an assortment of much wanted silks as we are enabled to show you tomorrow morning. Of course, to accomplish this, our plans must have been laid long ago.

We had the pre-science to forecast the popular fabric wants and the nerve to buy largely months ahead. We now are maintaining the high standard and have added many novelties unobtainable elsewhere.

- 36-in. monotone plaid grosgrains, greatest novelty of the season $2.50
- 36-in. taffeta plaid monotonies, in the stylish broadcloth tints, yard $2.00
- 36-in. mesaline plaids, in popular greens and blues, bright overplaids $2.00
- 26-in. Louisiana plaids, useful for combination dresses of serge and silk $1.00
- 36-in. taffetas, two-toned ribbon striped effects now so popular $1.75
- 36-in. Pekin stripe satin taffetas, in the much wanted cloth shades, yard $1.75
- 36-in. black and colored Ottomans, with broad Pekin self stripe for costumes $2.00
- 40-in. gros de Londres, in black and colors, with broad satin stripe $2.00
- 40-in. satin stripe faille, the scarcest novelty of the season, yard $3.00
- 36-in. black checks, two-toned satin, twilled, for handsome costumes, yard $2.00

New furs

We have always been recognized as the furriers of this section. As such, let us seriously advise you that this is the opportune time for the purchase of furs.

In the nature of things, furs are bound to advance, and our present prices are fully one-fourth less than you would see them again. Our orders were placed for these before the scarcity of dyes created such alarming conditions.

- charming new blue fox sets $100.00
- bright red fox sets $85.00
- Eastern mink, with watermelon muff $75.00
- dark mink, with barrel muff $65.00
- real black lynx sets $75.00
- pure white fox sets, fancy muffs $100.00
- pointed fox sets $135.00
- black fox sets, lustrous $70.00

Many luxurious suit creations ready tomorrow

A prodigal display of new styles, and a liberal assortment of qualities will be found in the showing here tomorrow. The modes are so diversified, and there is such a versatility of designs, that every woman can find among these new suits something for her individual taste. Every woman of good taste, no matter how small her purse, can find here just the suit she wants.

Luxurious suit creations, ready in every style. Everyone fascinatingly smart, every one decidedly modish. Handsomely tailored, beautifully trimmed, they appeal at once to the eye of the fastidious.

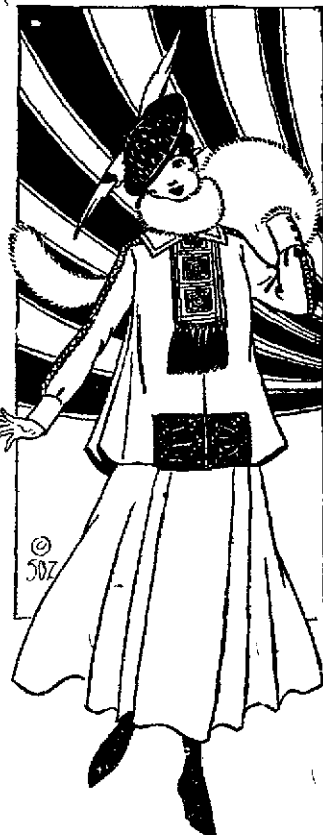

The materials are club serges, gabardines, poplins, whipcords, fine cloths.

The colors are field mouse, mole, plum, dark greens, prunes, as well as rich blacks and every good shade of blue.

The coats show every new mode in a variety of lengths, some are short hip, plaited or braided on the side; longer effects in flare styles, falling in graceful folds; other modes are in box styles; others on semi-fitted lines; others are mannish sport coat styles.

You will be pleased with the new ideas in skirts. We call particular attention to the richness of the fabrics and the abundance of fur trimmings used in the embellishment of these suits. Quantities of them are fur trimmed with fur trimmed skirts; others are braid trimmed, others are embroidery trimmed, and yet others show all three in combination. These new suits ready tomorrow; priced at

$19.75, $25, $29.75, $35, $37.50, $50

New broadcloths

It is conceded that no fabric this season will be so popular; so much in demand, so hard to get, in all good colors, as broadcloth.

The dye situation has made it almost impossible to get broadcloths in proper shades, unless the orders were given at least a year ahead. This we have done, and tomorrow we produce the cloth for your inspection.

- 54-in. costume twill backs; yard $1.00
- 54-in. chiffon cloth, satin finish $1.50
- 54-in. lustrous high finish cloth $2.00
- 54-in. German suiting cloths; yard $2.50
- 54-in. West of England broadcloths $3.00
- 54-in. black costume cloths; yard $3.50
- 54-in. superb cloth, all colors $3.50

Important news for the wide-awake shopper of wanted styles in New woolen dress fabrics

The dress goods sales launched here tomorrow will prove to be most attractive. They challenge your attention, first, because of their correctness in style; second, their completeness in variety; third, their charm in color tones; and fourth, their value as to price.

Lace novelties

This season fashion is bountiful in her favors. She is most prodigal in the luxuriousness of style seen in fancy laces.

Filmy lace nets with iridescent borders; all-over nets with glistening brilliants; dressy black or white nets with silver or gold borders; 2-tone ombre dress nets in 45-inch flounce widths.

Tomorrow we show such a collection of these that space at our disposal will not permit of a full description; but we have every good and charming conceit in fancy nets for vestees, for flounces, for full dresses, for evening dresses and demi-dress toilettes, ranging in price from $2.75 to $13.50 yd.

200 novel ostrich feather boas--shown in neckwear section

WITH BRITT CRAIG

"Tribby captured a huge audience and held it to the finish," begins a review of that picture in The New York Sun.

TITLES DO NOT A PICTURE MAKE.

Should it be taught that it's not the title that makes the picture?

Atlanta picture lovers overlooked good opportunities in the last two weeks to witness two of the month's most admirable offerings. "The Galloper" and "Playing Dead."

Both were shown at one of the city's highest class theaters. Theaters were reported that on both occasions even the theater's clientele felt far short in patronage.

Now, "The Galloper" was a rollicking good comedy, replete with genuine funny situations, quaintly acted and prettily photographed. Clifton Crawford is a whimsical comedian who does not require a gag-writing team for water or well-worn pie. His impersonation of "The Galloper" was like an old-fashioned story, so natural one can't help laughing.

"Playing Dead" and "The Galloper" were both written by Richard Haiding Davis. The stories were good to begin with, and Clifton Crawford and Sidney Drew, the latter of whom played the leading role in "Playing Dead" are legitimate comedians. Their restrained, naive humor is the sort that gets under the vest and carries appeal as well as mirth.

Sidney Drew, as the meditative self-sacrificing husband of "Playing Dead" was not naturally Sidney Drew—and nothing else—that he might have been any one of a number of men you know in your own community.

But if the theater in which both pictures were shown had depended upon their patrons for a livelihood, the management and house staff would have gone hungry both days, and neither picture would have been displayed in lavish grandeur out front. It might have been a different story.

Where is the fame that once surrounded the picture of "Lizzie Went to Sea" by Lottie Pickford? We hear of them but every once-in-a-while. Both of them are just as good as dead. The film was like millions of other atoms that go to make up the dear public, etc. It is a shame.

We were once pleased to see the faces of Mary and Charles adorn the magazine cover and screen, now we see them in either a silly or a growing fat and Charley lame? A New Helen.

We had a hunch that when J. P. McGowan, her husband, quit directing Helen Holmes in "Helen," something would befall her. Well, here it is, fresh from the Kalum sheet.

"Of Paramount importance is the announcement that Miss Helen Holmes has been engaged to succeed Helen Holmes as the heroine of the "Hazards of Helen" series. Miss Gibson is said to be admirably suited for the role. It is because of her absolute lack of fear—the position of delight she seems to take in performing the most hazardous feats—together with her protean ability, which caused her to be added to the Kalum's galaxy of stars.

Myrtle Stedman Still With Morosco Company

The New York offices of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay company have telephonically sent the report printed in various papers that Myrtle Stedman, the popular star, has been engaged to the fulfillment of his duty. William Duncan appears as Newbold Natalie De Lontan as his wife, George Fritch, and Myrtle Stedman as the girl, besides George Kunkel, William V. Ranous, Otto Lederer and Anne Schaefer in exceptional parts.

The program at the Vaudette for this week includes Monday the latest Pathe story "Neal of the Navy," featuring Lillian Lorraine Tuesday, a two-reel American, "The Terror of Twin Mountains" in which Helen Rosen will play the leading part. "Seeing America First" will also be on the program for that day. This week the views will be Niagara Falls. Tuesday is also the day for the clever cartoon pictures, "Keepleing Up" with Jones and the day a three-reel Centaur with Margaret Gibson and Crane Wilbur will be on the bill in the title of this picture is "The Protest."

One of the best pictures to be shown during the week at the Vaudette will be on Thursday, "The Price of Silence," in which popular Florence La Badie will play the star part.

Florence La Badie is an exceptionally popular young woman. She undoubtedly has the largest following than most players in picture work. Her best attested by the great number of letters she receives daily from admiring fans in all sections of the country.

A large number of communications are from young girls and young women, who are desirous of entering motion picture work. And to be honest a number of letters are forwarded to her by would-be screen stars of the opposite sex. Of recent months the demands on Miss La Badie's time are so large that she has had written and sent a circular letter, reciting her own experiences, the best method for winning success and so on.

One of these letters is forwarded to each of the writers with Miss La Badie's best wishes for their success.

"The Chalice of Courage" an Unusual Photoplay.

The first offering for the week at the Georgian will be comedy, and good comedy at that. Charley Chaplin will be seen in "The Mix Up" Wednesday and Thursday the bill is Myrtle Gonzales in "The Chalice of Courage" Friday comes Grace Darmond in "The House of a Thousand Candles" Saturday Mary Pickford will be presented in "The Dawn of Tomorrow."

Vyrus Townsend Brady utilized a keen portrait of a human emotion as a foundation for "The Chalice of Courage," one of the most potent of the Vitagraph's blue ribbon pictures. Released through the V-L-S-E Seldom do films act so upon their audiences as does this wonderful photoplay. In reason of its human theme, a theme realistic and effective.

As the nucleus for the major plot is given a man Newbold who when his wife is mortally injured by a terrific fall, has the strength of courage to kill her at her own request. Later the dead woman's old lover becomes passionately fond of another girl. The girl is a child of the mountains is found and cared for through the long winter by Newbold. A sacred love sprang up between them. For three months they live as brother and sister, fighting, each in their own way, to live according to the dictates of duty. At length the lover appears and is recognized by Newbold as the man undoubtedly responsible although in an indirect way for the death of his wife. After a terrific battle, in which outside interference saves the man's life, the latter confesses to the woman the snow and commits suicide, leaving his old enemy and the girl he loves to live together their union being sanctioned by the girl's father.

Situations unusual in photoplays are presented in "The Chalice of Courage," situations that are of enormous appeal. Their strength and dramatic power are nearly unmeasurable, their effect on the spectator is indescribable. The scenes of the picture are laid in the expansive mountains of the west, the exceptional scenic grandeur of the very heart of the untouched country. Photographically the picture is a masterpiece. The photography setting being ideal for the story.

Rollin S. Sturgeon, who produced "The Chalice of Courage," demonstrated his ability as a masterly director in the handling of this film. On the scene each picture was most successful in the fulfillment of his duty. William Duncan appears as Newbold Natalie De Lontan as his wife, George Fritch, and Myrtle Stedman as the girl, besides George Kunkel, William V. Ranous, Otto Lederer and Anne Schaefer in exceptional parts.

A BIGGER, BETTER CITY. Atlanta has many civic organizations which devote themselves periodically and spasmodically to city improvement.

THE BOLL WEEVIL AS A FRIEND. The boll weevil may prove more of a friend than enemy to Georgia.

Let City Work Together To Some Definite End. Editor Constitution After reading what has been said about the wonderful improvements in the west and wherein we are lacking in some respects my impulse is to say something along the same line but am so minded of the minister who had a very wealthy and fashionable but rather worldly congregation.

FIELDS OF SCARLET. The red ran of the battlefields of Europe would make the harvests grow if Europe did not have more time for blood than bread.

Some Striking Figures About Georgia Farms. Editor Constitution I have been working out some figures which I thought might be of interest to you.

Dealer Jesse B. Lee Makes a Statement On Gasoline Situation. Editor Constitution I am a local dealer in gasoline and in behalf of not only myself, but of the other retail dealers, I wish to make a statement that I am sure will commend itself to the public.

EX-GOVERNOR JOSEPH M. BROWN ANSWERS JUDGE S. B. ADAMS. The Constitution published on the first Sunday in September an extensive communication from Judge Samuel B. Adams denouncing ex-Governor Brown, and incidentally referring to the following communication which appears in the following column.

times only a little work is necessary to turn an eyesore into a beauty spot. But it often requires effort, and plenty of it, to get the wheels set in motion and the work done.

There are many things it could and should do. School yards should be converted into beauty spots, with trees and shrubs and flowers.

There are only a few suggestions. There are many other things Atlanta could and should get, and there isn't a question that organization of the right kind will bring them.

There is no need of elaborate plan, involving tremendous expenditure that staggers on the threshold. That is not what Atlanta wants.

These are the kind of things that count most. They are the things that well directed organization can often easily get.

Let's have an improvement club combining all lines of city activities, and get to work now for the bigger and better city.

THE GASOLINE TRUST. We publish elsewhere on this page today an interesting statement from Councilman Jesse B. Lee, who is not only active in city politics, as the representative of the fifth ward, but who, in addition to his other business activities, retails gasoline.

Mr Lee, in speaking for himself and, as he believes, for all the retail dealers of the city, agrees with The Constitution that something is fundamentally wrong where 16 cents is charged for gasoline in Atlanta when the sale price is less than 10 cents in Chicago and Kansas City.

But Mr Lee thinks that the local retail dealers are in nowise responsible for this condition. They are given the rate at which they must pay by wholesale, and they have no alternative than to pay as demanded and satisfy themselves with the margin to which the retail dealer is entitled.

Mr. Lee indorses the position taken by The Constitution that gasoline, like other commodities in general use, such as cotton, wheat, corn or any other common product, should sell at a uniform price the country over, plus only such difference as is created through additional cost of transportation.

Just now the cities of the south seem to be the bright and particular field for plucking by the gasoline trust, and it is just a question of how long the people are going to permit the process to continue.

It is a situation which the anti-trust laws of the federal government ought to be able to reach.

Commissioner of Agriculture J. D. Price, whose department has charge of state gasoline inspection, suggests a state investigation. This would be valuable in bringing to light important facts bearing on the situation. But we need more than that, we need remedy.

The federal department of justice could and should go to the bottom of it, for the trouble undoubtedly comes under the provisions of the anti-trust laws.

Some Striking Figures About Georgia Farms. Editor Constitution I have been working out some figures which I thought might be of interest to you.

Georgia has 291,027 farms ranking second of the forty-eight states in the union in the number of farms being surpassed by one state the state of Texas which has 417,770 farms.

Georgia averages 92.6 acres in all farm lands per farm, with 42.8 acres in improved land.

The value of land per farm is $1273. The value of buildings 774. The value of implements 72. The value of live stock 274.

There are 14 horses and mules per farm in value $198.32. There are 14 milch cows per farm 28.82. There are 61 swine per farm in value 18.65. There are 183 head poultry per farm 7.15.

Income for all crops, per farm 778.61. Value of animals slaughtered or killed 74.52. Value of dairy products per farm 28.54. Value of eggs and poultry 27.80. Value of live stock products per acre improved land 2.64.

I have compiled a statement showing these figures for the various states. It is interesting to note that with the exception of the state of Connecticut, Maine and Massachusetts the southern states have the smallest number of horses and mules milch cows and in poultry rank lowest with the exception of some of the southern states.

It must be said that in his pictures Carraza puts a pretty good face on the matter.

cow and pigs and chickens he has food in plenty to meet any emergency.

If the farmers of Georgia will only realize what they can do and how they can protect themselves at comparatively small expense they will forget that the boll weevil is an enemy and live the better in spite of his coming.

FIFTY YEARS OF SERVICE. Fifty years ago tomorrow the Atlanta National bank opened its doors to the Atlanta public and began a service to this community which has rounded out into half a century of splendid achievement.

Since its establishment there has not been a day when it has not continued to grow. Beginning business immediately following the close of the civil war and amidst general devastation, it successfully weathered the stormy period of reconstruction, and laid the foundation of an institution in whose career is largely written the history of the city.

The solidity of the institution always proverbial among Atlantans has rested in the exceptional character, ability and integrity of the men at the head of it.

Atlanta will be glad to felicitate this institution not alone upon the attainment of its fiftieth birthday, but upon the magnificent success it has achieved in these years of effort. It is an institution of which both city and state are proud.

Now, if there is anything wrong and there certainly is some discrimination somewhere, the responsibility should be placed where it belongs and we should be relieved of the suspicion of bringing about a condition for which we are in nowise responsible and which is very distasteful to us for it makes us happy to please those who patronize us, and we know they cannot be pleased at this apparent discrimination in favor of other cities.

This is a fair, conservative straightforward presentation of the situation. Now if anything can be done to relieve the pressure overhead, and to put this responsibility where it belongs, no one will be better pleased than the Atlanta retail dealers in gasoline.

Let City Work Together To Some Definite End. Editor Constitution After reading what has been said about the wonderful improvements in the west and wherein we are lacking in some respects my impulse is to say something along the same line but am so minded of the minister who had a very wealthy and fashionable but rather worldly congregation.

Mr. Lee indorses the position taken by The Constitution that gasoline, like other commodities in general use, such as cotton, wheat, corn or any other common product, should sell at a uniform price the country over, plus only such difference as is created through additional cost of transportation.

Dealer Jesse B. Lee Makes a Statement On Gasoline Situation

Editor Constitution I am a local dealer in gasoline and in behalf of not only myself, but of the other retail dealers, I wish to make a statement that I am sure will commend itself to the public.

Much has been said about an increase in the price of gasoline in Atlanta to a figure far above the difference in freight rates between cities where it is sold cheaper and Atlanta.

Let me say that I fully agree with your argument that something is wrong where gasoline can be sold in Chicago, or in Kansas City, for less than 10 cents, while the charge in Atlanta is 16 cents.

So what alternative have we but to take our medicine just as it is given to us? We may strain at the dose, and wonder why it is that we are charged 14 cents at wholesale when gasoline is being sold at retail in Chicago at less than 10 cents.

The local retail dealers of Atlanta ask only a reasonable profit—the same as in every other city—even as in Chicago and Kansas City, where gasoline is retailed at less than 10 cents.

Now, if there is anything wrong and there certainly is some discrimination somewhere, the responsibility should be placed where it belongs and we should be relieved of the suspicion of bringing about a condition for which we are in nowise responsible and which is very distasteful to us for it makes us happy to please those who patronize us, and we know they cannot be pleased at this apparent discrimination in favor of other cities.

IN HARVEST LAND

By FRANK L. STANTON.

SEEM to hear a message from the windows of the blue "Angels from the hill-clouds are waving hands to you". Barns are piled with plenty, and Joy—we've clipped his wings. Hear the world's heart beating while the whole creation smiles.

Life a glad Thanksgiving— Read your dreams of bliss; Thank the Lord we're living In a world as sweet as this!

BLUE smoke upward curling from happy but and home. Table spread and waiting and the honey in the comb. Earth the great rewarder—Heaven itself your friend. Try to count your blessings and you never reach the end.

SUN and soil seem singing— Happy time an' chance. Where Joy himself is swinging. Gray Trouble, in the dance.

SUMMER'S toil is over—Lives bright glow in win. Farewell to the shadows. The living light streams in! Here are lovely faces, Loves the welcome guest. With remembered roses of summer on his breast.

What is earth-crowned glory? Ho! Wanderers who roam, Here's a sweeter story Of Love, with hearts at home.

THANKSGIVING for the blessing of summer sun and sod. Where once, in bending lines, we read the thoughts of God. Thanksgiving for the harvest—the glimmer of its gold. And all the joys of living the arms of Life can hold.

No sorrow now befalls you. And never storm of strife, Enter. The glad earth calls you To harvest lands of Life.

EX-GOVERNOR JOSEPH M. BROWN ANSWERS JUDGE S. B. ADAMS

The Constitution published on the first Sunday in September an extensive communication from Judge Samuel B. Adams denouncing ex-Governor Brown, and incidentally referring to the following communication which appears in the following column.

With this the controversy over the matter referred to ends, so far as The Constitution is concerned. We believe that no good purpose can be served by continuing the discussion of the issues involved. The sooner the whole of this dark chapter of Georgia history is consigned to the realm of the past the better it will be for the state.

EX-GOVERNOR BROWN'S REPLY TO CRITICISM OF JUDGE ADAMS. Editor Constitution Returning home after an absence of several weeks, I find in your issue of September 5 a communication from Judge Samuel B. Adams denouncing Governor Brown's act in commuting the sentence of Leo M. Frank and making some pointed remarks about myself.

In that communication Judge Adams says Governor Slaton had the power and the discretion to commute the sentence. The constitution of the present code as follows: He (referring to the governor) shall have power to grant reprieves and pardons to commuted penalties etc.

Now in answer to the above let me say that the constitution of Georgia also says: "The legislative, judicial and executive powers shall forever remain separate and distinct and no person discharging the duties of one shall at the same time exercise the functions of either of the others, except as herein provided."

None of the sections give the governor the power to veto a court record. Judge Adams has been a member of the supreme court and he knows that that court holds that all parts of the constitution should be construed as to put no one of them in conflict with others. He knows that after the courts have adjudicated a criminal case and sent a man to the penitentiary or sentenced him to be hung they have no power to do anything but execute the sentence.

It is a situation which the anti-trust laws of the federal government ought to be able to reach.

Commissioner of Agriculture J. D. Price, whose department has charge of state gasoline inspection, suggests a state investigation. This would be valuable in bringing to light important facts bearing on the situation. But we need more than that, we need remedy.

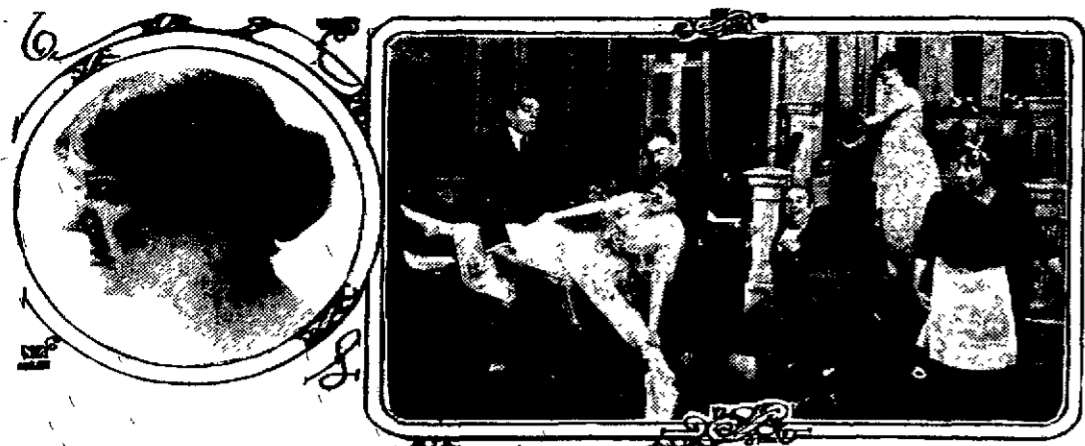

The federal department of justice could and should go to the bottom of it, for the trouble undoubtedly comes under the provisions of the anti-trust laws.

"A Pair of Sixes."

(At the Atlanta.)
"A Pair of Sixes," the farce which New York critics declared to be the funniest play ever seen on the New York stage and which ran for an entire year at the Longacre theater, New York, will be presented at the Atlanta Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, with a Wednesday matinee, by a company of well-known actors. It is in three acts. The author is Edward Peple, who has already won a high place among American dramatists by his other great successes, "The Prince Chap," and "The Little Rebel."

The plot deals with two partners, who disagree as to the relative importance in the conduct of a prosperous patent medicine business, and they decide, after much squabbling and irritation, to sever their business interests. But their partnership agreement does not provide for any method by which they can end their relations.

Their lawyer is called in, but they decline his various business ideas and he finally suggests the inexpensive method of playing a show-down poker and to see who gets the most cards. He has control of the business, as well as the direction of the other partner's affairs. "A Pair of Sixes" wins, and the winner obtains the services of his partner as a butler in his household for one year, under an ironclad agreement by which not a word of explanation shall be made nor an order violated, without the payment of so many fines that the loser will be bankrupt.

After the butler is installed in his menial duties, he is almost driven mad by a homely old cockney housemaid, who pursues him with her attentions. To make matters worse, his wife becomes infatuated with the man of the house. He cannot explain for fear of the fines which would sacrifice his interest in the business, and the wife of the winner sympathizes so openly with the unlucky partner that her husband becomes a laughing stock in the condition of affairs develops the most hilarious fun and twisted situation, which is brought to a close through the cleverness of the loser's sweet heart, who ultimately plays the winning hand.

Field's Minstrels.

(At the Atlanta.)
Bryan and Roosevelt are the characters, the Mexican situation the motif and the general events are taken in Europe, in "Auntie Skinner's Chicken Dinner Party," Al G. Field's Greater Minstrel, which will be seen at the Atlanta Thursday, Friday and Saturday, with a Saturday matinee.

"Damaged Goods."

(At the Atlanta.)
The Atlanta, on October 4, for three nights, will present Richard Bennett's comedy, "Damaged Goods," which proved so successful at the Fulton theater, New York, for over two hundred performances. "Damaged Goods" is strong and its presentation of truths, which,

Full Prices Allowed on Diamonds Exchanged

Nearly every day we take back diamonds at full purchase price, in part payment on more expensive stones. If the mounting is worn, we take it at full old-gold value, too.

This liberal contract applies on all solitaires sold by us. Under this plan you can start on a small stone and keep exchanging it at intervals until you have as large a diamond as you wish to own. By this plan, you at all times have the pleasure of wearing a diamond which is wholly yours.

"The Only Girl."

(At the Atlanta.)
In writing "The Only Girl," which is to be produced at the Atlanta October 7, 8 and 9, by Joe Weber, the author of the book, Henry Blossom, evidently has in mind the theater-goers who wish to be amused also desire to have their amusements served up in a safe fashion. He has therefore, it is admitted, provided a libretto that contains a story, both consistent and plausible, and has been so careful to draw his characters so that they resemble human beings. Added to this, that the lines are very much like the lyrics mean something. It was not so difficult for Victor Herbert, the composer, to provide a score that the critics have declared to be admirable in every respect.

Keith Vaudeville.

(At the Forsyth.)
Artists who are known wherever there is vaudeville will feature this week's bill at the Forsyth, with a great variety of offerings, from farce comedy to acrobatic stunts.

Jewell Kelley.

(At the Bijou.)
The Jewell Kelley Stock company begins its fourth week of their present engagement at the Bijou theater tomorrow matinee and night, offering for the week the western comedy in four acts, "The Days of '49—The Scenic," dealing with the days of '49—the scenes laid in California and in the Sierras.

MAY ORGANIZE A BOYS' BUGLE AND DRUM CORPS

Colonel Orville W. Hall is planning to organize a boys' bugle and drum corps for the Fifth regiment of the Georgia national guards. Colonel Hall says that something must be done to attract interest in the military, and he hopes to have the co-operation of the citizens of Atlanta. He thinks a boys' bugle and drum corps, to be composed of twelve buglers and two drummers, would help to make the members of the command take more interest in the drill.

ANNEX TO RATHSKELLER OF ANSLEY IS OPENED

Hundreds of Guests Amazed and Delighted With Transformation Achieved.

The fall gastronomic season may be said to have been fully and gloriously opened Saturday night at Hotel Ansley, when every chair around every table of the large rathskeller and in the beautiful new annex was occupied from early in the evening until late at night with many of Atlanta's epicures.

When the business men of Atlanta decided to hold the fall carnival Manager Secker, who had tentative plans for the annex under way, promptly decided to push his plans to an early conclusion, and the result of his decision was the opening of the annex last night, and it proved an instantaneous success from every point of view.

Manager Secker has been catering to the cultured taste of Georgians for the past ten years, and he has been anxious to note their likes and to that end has imported an Italian chef, who gradually has been introducing into the menu for several years he was the "autocrat of the culinary." Musical Director C. E. Tandy, general manager of the hotel, has also been anxious to note their likes and to that end has imported an Italian chef, who gradually has been introducing into the menu for several years he was the "autocrat of the culinary."

Boils and Pimples Dangerous S. S. S. Your Remedy

Standard For Fifty Years

Modern science has proven that boils and carbuncles, pimples and unsightly skin blotches, are the danger signals of diseased blood. Scaly skin and itching of Eczema, Scrofula, rashes—all skin diseases are aggravated by the impurities of the blood. Don't wait for the boils. If you have pimples and blotches, take instant action. Pimples tell you that your blood is filled with impurities. You must wash out your blood, strengthen and stimulate it to healthy action with Nature's own blood tonic, S. S. S. It is the standard blood purifier of the world. Don't use any drugs, don't use ointments and salves. S. S. S. reaches the blood, drives out the impurities. It makes healthy perspiration—the poison is literally sweated out through the skin. Boils, blotches, Eczema and the Scrofula indications disappear. It does what salves and lotions can never do—it goes to the very root of the trouble by reaching the blood. Your skin becomes clear and you soon feel the vigor of the return of perfect health. S. S. S. is purely vegetable. You can get it at any drugstore, but you must take S. S. S. Let us tell you about blood diseases. Write for book of facts, "What the Mirror Tells." FIRING LINE NOTES

J. M. Bennett and J. R. Thornton both with an abundance of orders were among the line at the S. P. Richards company Saturday.

J. G. Robertson who handles western territory for the Ragan-Malone company was in the house Saturday with a customer. He got out in his territory again Saturday.

T. B. Lewis of the Capital City Tobacco company, was in Saturday to attend the sales conference of the boys of his company.

Arthur Whitteyer the affable South Carolina traveler for the Ragan-Malone company, was in the house Saturday. He reports conditions as fast improving in his section.

Robert H. Patterson United States representative on C. H. S. cigars spent a few days in Birmingham and Montgomery this week and reports good business in that section of the country.

Crawford Drug company have a pretty window display this week of C. H. S. cigars.

D. P. Yates president of the Ridley-Williamson company left Saturday morning for a few days trip to New York. He expects to lay in a supply of spring goods as well as goods for umbrellas and shoes.

Among the road men for the Ridley-Williamson company who had spent an exceptionally good business the past few days in the Capital City territory were J. P. Hicks, along the Georgia road, J. J. Cheek, in the north Georgia territory, W. J. Hays, West Point and Central roads and J. L. Yates north west Georgia.

Among the boys at Ragan Malone company Saturday who had spent in a nice bunch of orders for the week and who brought along another nice batch Saturday were Morris, G. G. of the West Point road, W. W. Scott from southwest Georgia and Zack Daniel who travels northeast Georgia.

Bill Redmond representative of the Edgewood Manufacturing company of New York and known to all the dry goods houses in this section was working among the boys Saturday. He was a caller Saturday at Dougherty-Little-Redwine company.

Walter Barnwell in charge of the notion department for the Ragan Malone company left Saturday for a buying trip to New York and other eastern markets. He will go after goods for both fall and spring.

E. P. Stone traveler for the Rice & Hays company was among the travelers for that company who gave an unusually good account of himself the past week.

Among the travelers for Dougherty-Little-Redwine company who blew in Saturday with a nice bunch of orders were J. O. Castleberry, A. V. Hobery, M. McKibbin, J. A. Wood, H. L. and Dave Lester.

Sam and Carlton Hanes who each have their respective territories for the Ragan-Malone company sent in a number of nice orders to the house the past week.

C. C. Phillips, who looks after territory in south Georgia for the Capital City Tobacco company was among the cigar salesmen who attended the conference of his co-workers Saturday at the house.

Virell M. Hyatt, S. T. Burton, P. H. Jeter, J. W. Hughes, D. M. Braswell, R. Jones, S. A. Johnson and Banks White were the travelers who were in Saturday at John Siley & Co. All of them were all smiles by reason of the lot of orders taken the past week.

C. A. Smith, L. B. Robinson, W. P. Sewell, Chris Irby and J. A. Sewell were among the travelers for the A. M. Robinson company who reported a Saturday with a swell bunch of orders.

J. K. Orr who has been spending the past month in the west returned to the city Friday night. The A. M. Robinson company was in the house Saturday after a two weeks trip to south Georgia where his reports had splendid success gathering in the coin.

FULTON COUNCIL, 505 A G. Vining with the Ware & White Co. was working the trade in Augusta the past week.

Brother P. A. Hussey of the Atlanta Woodware Co. delighted the boys of his territory by the cordials he gave at our last meeting. On account of sickness in his family he had not attended but the boys were glad to see him out again.

E. S. Browne the quiet man of the E. L. Adams Co. they say had been dining on fish lately—cooked right on the bank where the fish are.

Evans McConnell one of our live members who travels for the Ragan-McConnell Co. was back on his territory last week after a brief illness.

Brother R. F. Head road man for Conley & Linnis was working the Georgia road territory the past week.

L. R. Martin of the J. G. Flint Tobacco Co. was in the house with our good brother, Fording, it through Gwinnett county last week.

We were pleased to take into our council at the last meeting night Brother J. W. Johnston who makes his home in Woodstock Ga. and travels for the Woolson Spice Co. We are sure he is going to make us an active and live member. FIVE-O-FIVE.

Crew Visits McCord-Stewart. C. P. Crew, a leading farmer merchant who lives near Madison, Ga. was a visitor at the McCord-Stewart company one day last week. Mr. Crew is one of the largest and best farmers in his section and reports that every body is happy over the good price of cotton. He says he has a tendency to be as good as they should have been on account of the season, that some of our farmers are practicing the old practice of buying cotton just as they use it. It would be a big mistake. They are now beginning the practice of diversifying their crops but with some discouragement on the grain by reason of the season and the good boost of cotton. I'm afraid will make some of them change their mind—but I hope not.

Crete called his attention to cattle and stock raising and believes there is a great future in Georgia in this industry.

MERCHANDISE SCARE NOW IN NEW YORK

Most Seasonable Goods Are Increasing in Price, Says J. D. Robinson.

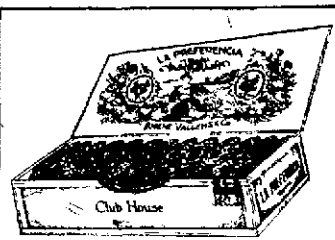

J. D. Robinson of the firm of A. M. Robinson company returned to the city Friday night from a trip of several weeks to New York and other eastern points. J. P. Morgan, superintendent of the Robinson overall factory who had also spent some time in New York returned a few days ahead of Mr. Robinson.

C. J. Williamson who recently went with the company and who will have charge of the dry goods line in New York making his selection for goods for the Robinson company.

Mr. Robinson stated Saturday that business conditions seemed much improved in the east. I was really fortunate he said for having gone on to New York about this time. I was able to place orders for goods in our new line before they grew so scarce. Really there is just now a scarcity of staple goods up there. Prices are still coming quite rapidly. I was able to save some money—for myself and customers—by getting up there about a month ago. We will not have our big dry goods line going good until sometime in November perhaps but we are going to have a most complete line when we do get started.

Johnny's "Specs" Are Lost. Has anybody found a pair of glasses for rather spectacles? Johnny Lassetter that carries guns, traps and all round good fellow who handles the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company line was all put out Saturday. He had to take his eyes, and couldn't see how to make out the large number of good orders he had brought in with him. Until he finds his glasses his friend, J. D. Robinson has volunteered to copy out his orders for him.

NEWS NOTES FROM THE CLASSIC CITY

By Sam Wood. Tobacco company in this week were E. J. Head out of the Atlanta office for Liggett & Meyers, W. A. How and the Brown & White company. T. H. Pugh who covers eight states for L. S. four cigars, Ira Bladberry, C. C. Stearns, J. J. H. and J. J. P. Peay holds Tobacco company.

Atlanta men in Friday making Athens headquarters were Lon Haucock with Ochsley, E. J. Head, R. C. Viles and J. H. Bledsoe with McCord-Stewart company, W. I. Alder the L. S. A. weight with the Atlanta Paper company and W. J. Beachum with the J. K. Orr shoe company.

Clude Stephenson salesman for the N. E. L. banks company was working local retailers all the week.

Chaile Elder is back on the road with Talmadge Brothers company but at still on out of town.

Henry Browder with the Sea Gull Specialty company was working through local jobbers all the week.

Ins Saturday morning for the weekend was K. D. Erboston with the Southern Moline Flour company and J. W. Orr with the Webb C. Fox company.

O. V. Byfield a specialty man for the Zanco cigar was here all the week boosting that particular brand.

J. K. Hays an old traveler out of Athens and former senior counselor of Claytons Co. was in the Atlanta Paper company last week in Lower Va. having a leg broken in two places and being bruised up considerably.

Working local territory all the week was George H. Snooks with the Standard Oil company and S. Daniels with the Bohannon Tobacco company.

O. W. Davidson and J. H. Tucker salesman for Armour & Co. were in the last of the week.

Salesmen in this territory lately were that smile that is the reason is that cotton is over the 10-cent mark.

COLUMBUS U. C. T. BOYS TO HAVE BIG TIME

Officers and members of Georgia Council No. 287 U. C. T. of Columbus have gone out to the Racine hotel in Columbus. They are preparing for an evening of delightful entertainment. A banquet being advertised for this occasion. Plates for 200 guests have been planned. During the serving of course a musical program will be rendered, the banquet to be followed by a dance. A number of boys from Atlanta will be present on occasion and remain over for the U. C. T. meeting the following night. As the members of Georgia council have quite an array of candidates for the occasion the evening will be a drawing card for all members in that territory.

Skelly Still Worrying. J. P. Skelly, that clever American Cigar Co. salesman who had the misfortune a week or so ago to lose his grip, is still bemoaning the loss of several fine boxes of Patric cigars which were in the grip. Of course he said, I know we have made a good customer out of that grip. Every day any money for cigars for after smoking all that elegant batch he will never want any other kind. But it is hard to know who my customers are.

Getting Repeat Orders. Robert H. Patterson United States representative of the Famous C. H. S. cigarettes as well as the C. H. S. cigars is well pleased with the way the Columbus cigarette are doing in Atlanta. Business is improving every day on Themells rose tips and one of the largest clubs has ordered the banquet size Themells No. 2 are coming rapidly to the front. All of the large cigar stands and clubs are giving repeat orders on these famous brand of cigarettes.

Full of Sunshine. Among the optimistic travelers who blew in for the week-end was E. L. (Sunshine) Harrison of the S. P. Richards Co. He was found Saturday morning filling out several pages of orders and really said he had no time to say anything more. Saturday is coming fine and coming easy. We have had the best business for the past thirty days we have had in a year and it looks now like things are going to turn this fall.

IT'S A PERFECT DELIGHT TO LIGHT

A man of sound judgment will not accept a cheap imitation of substitute Cigar but will demand the C.H.S.

Colton Kind o' Chilly. W. L. Colton who travels for the Havana American company didn't find the weather exactly to his liking when he blew in Friday night from a trip to south Georgia. The cool atmosphere which was blowing around was not exactly compatible with the searucker suit and straw hat which he wore and the weather exactly to his liking when he blew in Friday night from a trip to south Georgia. Wooltex Suits Are Irresistible This Season

That Fifth Thing That Sells the Suit.

These four and one more go into Wooltex suits.

The fifth thing is unusual.

It is "Know How."

It characterizes all Wooltex suits.

It is there. You see it. The woman sees it. It sells the suit. It makes the purchaser enjoy the wearing of the garment. It brings the comment of satisfaction at the end. And that's what makes repeat business on Wooltex.

"Know How" means the correct interpretation of current style. It includes fit, hang, snap, silhouette and all the other subtle, intangible things that attract.

"Know How" is only one of the characteristics of Wooltex suits. Honesty of materials and workmanship is another. Variety in design, fabrics and colors is another. Style precision, with good sense, is another.

In the Social Whirl

By Isma Dooly. The engagement of Miss Sallie Cobb Johnson to Mr. Stewart Hill Jones, of New York, made elsewhere in the paper, will be of far-reaching interest. Miss Johnson is widely known in Georgia, her native state, and is popular in New York, where she has frequently visited her brother, Mr. Ashley Johnson, and friends. She is the only daughter of Mrs. L. D. McDonald, and her father was the late W. E. Johnson, who for a number of years previous to his death was a member of the business staff of The Atlanta Constitution. Miss Johnson is distinguished in her beauty. She is blonde, of queenly stature and bearing, and has many attributes of character and nature that have won for her, from countless friends, sincere affection as well as admiration. The wedding will be witnessed only by relatives and a few friends, and Mr. Jones will take his bride to a lovely home in New York city, where they will spend the winter months. Their summer home will be at Lenox, Mass. Mrs. L. D. McDonald leaves for New York today to be present at the wedding. *****

HALLOWE'EN BALL. The announcement of the annual harvest and hallowe'en ball at the Piedmont Driving club the last of October is a source of social interest, the ball generally marking the real opening of the fall season, when people are assembled for the first time after summer vacations. The ball will, as usual, be on a very elaborate scale, and the guests will wear fancy costumes. There will be a feature menu, feature decorations and many plans are being made for the pleasure of the guests. The company will be limited, because of the desire of the club management to have a number that will guarantee satisfactory service at the dinner to precede the ball. *****

THE ITALIAN DINNER. Not beneath sunny skies like those of Italy, nor was the atmosphere what poetic minds associate with Lake Como, but rather under a clear sky illumined by silver moon, did the members of the Capital City club enjoy the Italian dinner-dance on the roof of the clubhouse Wednesday evening. The flower boxes still showed blooms the fall breezes had not chilled; hanging baskets had their place, and the Italian flags and colors fluttered from the columns of the pergola. The tables had bright-colored flowers as decorations, and flags as centerpieces, and over the entrance door on the roof was a miniature representation of Mount Vesuvius—wonderfully realistic, declared the guests who had seen the real thing. During dinner two clever interpreters in Italian costume sang and danced. There was an old-time artist who played the accordion to the delight of the guests, and then the street organ was wheeled out, and the pretty girl dancer and her partner looked after the production of the music. It was for fun; there was the scissors grinder and his machine, the usual bell announcing his approach. The menu was most satisfying, and included a light soup, a paste with cream, fresh chicken proved to contain spinach, and minced meat, highly seasoned; then chicken with a rich sauce; macaroni delightfully prepared with cream and cheese; a lettuce salad with Italian dressing and frozen cream and cream cake. *****

Roller skating in a roof garden will make a fortune. "What else did I notice about fads and fashion?" "Well, women are smoking more and more in public, and it is no use to charge it to the young and frivolous, for the chorus girls and foreigners, for I saw middle-aged, conservative women with their husbands, and with family parties, smoking cigarettes on the roof gardens and in the cafes. They are very deliberate about it. "I noticed a young woman who seemed very popular, very carefully remove her cigarette from the ash tray and dance off with her partner. On her return she found her cigarette freshly lighted, and continued to smoke with her companion. "What do I think of it?" "Why, I think if women wish to smoke, they have a right to do it." "How would you like to see the young lady, whose escort you were that night, smoking here here?" "Why, I would throw her—why, that is a different thing," was the reply. The friend chimed. *****

THE BIRD CAGES. "Then, many of these little girl-women carry bird cages instead of cropping bags, the young man continued. "Sometimes the cages contained birds, but just as often they did not." "Did the men carry little chicken houses instead of cages?" I asked. "And what about the new dances?" "There is very little to be said now about dancing," he answered. "The fad of roller-skating is growing every moment. I noticed that at the Hippodrome, at all the vaudeville performances, there was always the roller skating feature with experts, wonderfully arrayed, doing wonderful stunts on skates, and I worked out the idea in my mind that roller-skating had started the roller-sock fad, and that roller-skaters were fur-trimmed boots. *****

ROLLER SKATING. "They are not skating in the roof gardens?" I ventured. "No, not yet, but dancing as the girls of the moment is, the vaudeville people were not so enthusiastic as they were this time last year, and I predict that the first man to start it the large number of southerners contributed to much of the social life incident to the exposition. Mr. and Mrs. Elexet Lee, after an extensive trip west, are in Chicago. Temporarily they are at the Virginia hotel during the time their home is being completed for them. They will visit friends in Atlanta later, in the winter. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Riley have taken the home of Mrs. Lee for the winter. Dr. and Mrs. James Gilder, formerly of Atlanta, now of New York, are temporarily located at the Hill Crest apartments, 116th street. Mr. and Mrs. Mark Bristol have returned to Washington, D. Appointing the Wedding Day

There are many little perplexities connected with functions carried out upon the wedding day, but there is none so important as sending out the right kind of invitations. This is an item that should never be given to the "bargain counter," where lack of knowledge of correct forms or cheap material are the dominating features. If there is ever a time when the bride should appear well to her friends it should be through the proper appearance and verbiage of her wedding cards; to fall upon this point is a mistake that induces unfavorable comment. The safest plan is to have these very important representations of one's taste executed by an engraving house that has an established reputation for the manufacture of such articles. The name of such a maker upon the envelope is a guarantee that establishes beyond doubt the correctness of style. For over twenty years past the imprint of the J. P. Stevens Engraving Co., of Atlanta, has stood for the very finest products in the engraver's art. Material is of the highest grade, the forms of expression are those required by the strictest rules of social dictum; their engraving has that finish and balance that is only attained by engravers of skill, and shapes are right-up-to-the-minute style. Upon request this house will send out samples that will exhibit the superiority of its work.

"SWEET SALLY" WILLIAMS. The News, of Jackson, Miss., comments upon the marriage of Miss Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Sharp Williams, to Lieutenant Bunkley, of Sandersville, Ga., as follows: "Sweet Sally Williams, as she is so often called by Daisy Fitzhugh Ayres, to the dismay of Kirby Smith, has chosen her father's country home in old Yazoo as the scene for her marriage, at an early date. Kirby Smith, a young officer, with whom she has chosen out of all the wide brilliant official world wherein she meets her father's daughter, in the nation's capital, and friends have received the following invitations: "Mr. and Mrs. John Sharp Williams invite you to be present at the marriage of their daughter, Sally Williams, to Joel William Bunkley, Lieutenant United States navy, on the afternoon of Wednesday, the 5th day of October, nineteen hundred and fifteen, at half after 5 o'clock, Presbyterian church, New York City. "Naturally this event will be anticipated with the greatest interest by many friends and relatives of the groom-elect in Meridian, and many out-of-town and from other states will be present to witness the marriage. This wedding claims the affectionate interest of many friends and relatives of the groom-elect in Meridian, and many out-of-town and from other states will be present to witness the marriage. "Miss Jennette Bunkley, of Sandersville, Ga., sister of the groom-elect, will be the guest of honor, and Mr. Charles Demek, will participate in the wedding. *****

WELL-KNOWN PEOPLE. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Norval Fortson and their daughter, Virginia, spent several days in the city en route to their home in the country. Mr. and Mrs. Blanton Fortson, the latter entertaining a family party, which has included Mr. and Mrs. Schmidman and Messrs. Henry and Lawrence Tompkins. Mr. and Mrs. Schmitt could not visit their summer home in Austin this year and have divided their time between New York and Georgia. Previous to going to Athens Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fortson visited Dr. and Mrs. Charles Demek at their home in Sewanee, Dr. Kirby Smith having returned from distinguished service rendered in the American Cross activities in the war zone. The Messrs. Tompkins leave this week for the east, Henry Tompkins studying at Yale and Lawrence Tompkins at a preparatory school for Yale. Mr. Perrin Nicolson will return from Paris this month, where he has been a member of the staff of the American Ambulance, and will continue his studies at Columbia university. Clark Howell, Jr., will enter the department of law at Harvard university this month, and Howell Foreman will continue his studies here. Joseph Brown Whitehead celebrated his 20th birthday at a dance given him by his mother, Mrs. Kirby Smith, at their cottage, The Pillars, Hot Springs, Va., last week, and entertained the young set summering in the hotel and cottages. At supper a number of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Evans joined the young people in the happy occasion. Mrs. Evans gave a luncheon last week to Mrs. Frank Ellis, who had her guest after visiting her sister, Mrs. James Spurr, who also has a cottage at the Hot Springs. Mr. John L. and Mr. Samuel Dunlap, of Macon, are at the Hot Springs, Va., having motored there from New York, stopping en route at Atlantic City. Mrs. W. D. Grant and Miss Margaret Grant have returned from the Virginia springs. Dr. and Mrs. Cliff Atchison are in New York, accompanied by their daughter, Miss Marian Atchison. They will visit their old home in Nashville before returning home. Mrs. Dr. Campbell and Miss Isoline Campbell are in New York after an extensive motor trip in the west. They came home by Chicago and attended the Travis-Hill wedding in Maryland before going to New York. Miss Campbell was the recipient of many congratulations while in San Francisco, where

From a Man's Point of View. Fashions from a Man's Point of View would indicate that at last all women have determined to defy Father Time in the matter of fashion, and to purchase their gowns no longer according to "Misses' Styles," "Young Ladies' Fashions," or "Things Suitable for Matrons." They are all going to be governed by the same models. "What impressed me most during my recent visit to New York, was that you could not tell when you walked behind a woman whether she had slipped out of school for a walk on the beach, or whether she was a grandmother out with her favorite grandson," said a worldly young man recently returned from the north. "Going into a theater, for example, and having to walk slowly to your seat at the ticket office, you would behold what appeared to be a company of school girls, out with men of all ages. But getting in front and looking back, you would meet the countenances of women of all ages, but all wearing the same school girl length. Some of them wore the regulation high boot, laced or buttoned, and I could see about two inches of sock above the boot. "Socks, only?" he was asked. "Didn't they have on the flesh-colored or stockings, and then the roller socks?" "I didn't see any flesh-colored socks," he stated positively, "but I was not there to see the fashion notes." "The skirts are very full and staid out," he continued. "They just put out here in an old-fashioned way," and he made a gesture to indicate the old pannier drapery, the fur-trimmed boots were zig-zagged around the bottom. "You mean scalloped," I interrupted. "No, I mean skirts were actually shorter on one side sometimes than the other, and many were shorter in the back than in the front. *****

Recital by Mrs. MacDowell To Be Noted Artistic Event

Mrs. Edward MacDowell, wife of the late composer and herself a musician and lecturer of no small reputation, will appear in lecture recital in Atlanta November 14 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Arrowood on Linden street to be the scene of the distinguished occasion.

The announcement will be received with interest by all music lovers, primarily on account of the reverence in which they hold all that concerns the great MacDowell and his work. The earnestness with which his widow has endeavored to carry out the plans he had formulated in the interest of music and musicians add sentimental interest to her public work, and finally the lecture interpretations are in themselves musically and educationally worth while.

Her theme will be the "Effect of Race on the MacDowell Music," and the proceeds of the evening will be devoted, as are the fruits of all the recitals given by Mrs. MacDowell, to the MacDowell Memorial association fund.

Hand embroidery and tucks create the dainty blouse effects all women seek for present wear with new fall suits. See these Allen values at $2.95.

Small Hats and Veils for First Fall Wear
The present mode is the veil. Of necessity the small hat fits under it. Veils, large and small, accompany almost every hat, thin net face veils daintily traced; harem veils to the nose or falling to the shoulder, as you will.
Tall Crowns appear on large or small Hats.
Hats of silk beaver or hatters' plush are Puritan in shape, having a tall bell crown and narrow or wide brim, reminding one of Quaker days.

"Coolie" Hats for Youth
The smart new thing for girls is the Coolie-hat of Chinese tendency, being perfectly round, dome-shaped and having its upright and only trimming exactly in the center. Made of antique satin and there is usually a touch of fur.
Everywhere there is fur. It dignifies and decorates almost everything in Millinery.

The Fall New Model Corset
As fashions are fickle so are corset models. Woman must conform in figure as well as color and unique mode.
The new corset has a higher bust line and confines a bit more at the waist line—leaning more to the curves of earlier periods.
We Present the Newest Models in

As a matter of preparedness

Let us suggest that you dry clean your winter wear while the sun shines—while you can afford these friends a leave of absence.

Pretty soon it is going to get cold, and you'd feel mighty good if all the heavy things were ready—looking fine and dandy—when you called.

This applies to your overcoats, suits, blankets, gloves, furs, plumes—everything.

Practice preparedness.

Holstein Cows' Milk for Nursing Mothers
Success in feeding infants with Holstein Cows' Milk emphasizes the health possibilities of this milk for adults also. By ordering it for nursing mothers, physicians are able to build up exhausted women and prolong the nursing period.

The same reasons that make Holstein Milk the only suitable milk for the bottle-fed baby make it an ideal milk for anyone with impaired digestion and for those who find ordinary milk distasteful. The butterfat is not excessive and is in the form of small, even globules less than half the size of those in ordinary milk. That means easier and more rapid digestion.

LAGRANGE COLLEGE NOTES.
LaGrange college held opening exercises with an unusually full enrollment. A most enthusiastic audience of patrons and friends. A delightful program had been prepared, and all the numbers were thoroughly enjoyed. Among those who made short live talks were Dr. R. F. Eakes, Mr. W. S. Witham, Colonel A. J. Thompson and Miss Marie Bradley. Irone Futene came in daily, and the prospects for the year are bright and encouraging.

The most interesting feature of the opening week of LaGrange college was the reception given in honor of the new girls by the Young Women's Christian association.

Hon. H. J. Fullbright, of Waynesboro, Ga., came over to LaGrange to enter his daughter, Miss Iris Fullbright, in the freshman class of LaGrange college.

Quite a number of the old students of LaGrange came to help welcome the new girls to college. Among these were Misses Marie Bradley, Irene Futene, Maria Cotton, and a host of local alumnae.

Mrs. J. T. Doster has returned to her home in Birmingham after a most delightful visit to her daughter, Miss Nancy Senn Doster.

Misses L. S. Waycross, came up on Tuesday to enter his sister, Miss Mabel Taylor, at college.

The new girls of Woodbury: Florence Blanton, of Griffin, and Nellie Park, of Moreland, are among the new girls enrolled this week.

The Mezzofantian and Irenian Literary societies have both held enthusiastic meetings. The programs were interesting, and reflected much credit upon these organizations.

The tennis court, basketball field and swimming pool are gay with students. During the hot days of last week the swimming pool was a favorite resort at all recreation periods. The new physical director, Miss Hilda Threlkeld, of Kentucky, has won the confidence and admiration of the entire student body, and is the leading spirit in all athletic sports.

BRENAU COLLEGE, GAINESVILLE.

The first "big walk" took place on Thursday afternoon, at which time, on the invitation of President Parks, the entire school and faculty were invited to go on a picnic across the river and spend an hour or so on the beautiful Treanor meadow. Several of these enjoyable excursions are planned. The entire corps was in the receiving line and received a large number of Sparks' requests.

The faculty recital on last Friday evening at the college auditorium was the greatest social event of the season. The recital was given by Miss Sarah Kinnon, piano; Miss Frances Waddell, voice; and Miss Frances Eichen, soprano. They proved themselves delightful entertainers, and stimulated added interest among the audience in the work of the fine arts departments.

ATHENS, GA.
Invitations are out for the Thomas-DuBose wedding, which is to be a brilliant event socially, in Athens, and of course it is all of the state on October 2. Few marriages will center more interest in the state than this, on account of the high social standing of the families which will thus be united. Miss Isabelle Thomas, the sister of the bride, Miss Mattie Thomas, will be the only attendant. Mr. Delaney Hill will be the best man to the groom, Mr. Boling DuBose. The marriage will be performed at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. George Dudley Thomas, on Prince avenue, Dr. E. L. Hill, pastor of the first Presbyterian church, will officiate. The bride is the youngest of five sisters. Mr. DuBose is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Toombs DuBose.

SOCIAL LIFE IN MACON

Macon, Ga., September 25.—(Special Correspondence.)—Several attractive visitors now in the city were the occasion of most of the week's gaieties.

The first of these affairs was given Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Meta Schley, of Augusta, the guest of Miss Lily Griffith. Mrs. William Dunwoody was the hostess at the enjoyable game of bridge played. The guests included Miss Schley, Mrs. Eugene Steadman, Mrs. Charles Stone, Mrs. Lily Griffith and Miss Louise Callaway. Miss Holmes made top score, winning a pair of silk hose.

Monday evening Miss Schley was the hostess when Mrs. Nisbet Tinsley entertained at bridge for her. Hanging baskets of dwarfed sunflowers and dahlias adorned the porch, where the guests played.

Mrs. W. O. Kinney was hostess Tuesday morning for her visitor, Mrs. George L. Snowden, of Spartanburg, S. C. Mrs. Snowden, as Miss Rosa Guerry, of this city, was quite a social favorite here, and her visit here was greatly enjoyed by her friends.

A most enjoyable evening was spent Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Jordan Tinsley, Mrs. Granville Connor, Jr., Mrs. Richard Moncure, Mrs. Frank Hazlehurst, Mrs. Robert Sparks, Mrs. Elsworth Collins and Cora Burr.

Mrs. Leon Willingham and several other friends of the honoree.

Another charming game of bridge was given Mr. and Mrs. William E. Martin Tuesday evening when a number of their friends gathered at their home on College street and spent the evening dancing. This was in the nature of a farewell party, as Mr. and Mrs. Martin are to give up their home October 1 and have apartments with Mrs. Martin at 236 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Carlisle, Bazemore. The drawing room where the ceremony was performed was decorated in the southern style, palms and flowers in the stars by twenty of her most intimate girl friends, all beautifully gowned. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. R. Childs, of Yatesville. A handsome reception followed the ceremony. Miss Bazemore is one of Macon's charming and accomplished young ladies, possessing all those graces that have attracted her to her legion of friends. Mr. Cox holds a responsible position in the erecting shops of the Central road. Mr. and Mrs. Cox left immediately for Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York.

THOMSON, GA.
Miss Ada Hawes entertained delightfully the "As You Like It" club Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. D. L. Farmer was hostess to the Matron's Trail club Friday afternoon.

Dr. W. H. Young gave a lecture Thursday evening on "Shakespeare" to the Woman's club and their invited guests.

The dramatic section of the Woman's club held a meeting with Mrs. Ira E. Farmer Monday evening.

The Methodist Junior Philanthropic class gave a barbecue Saturday in the Wilson building on Main street.

"SEEING GEORGIA" TOUR WILL NOT BE A FROLIC

Chairman Price Says It Will Be Pleasant and Instructive Business Trip.

Not a frolic, but a pleasant and instructive business trip, is the second tour of Georgia...

Madison, the first noonday stop, and Athens, where we spend the second night, are places...

Governor Harris expects to go on this trip, and the officers and tourists are united in the determination...

The roads over the entire route are in fine condition, and we anticipate in every respect one of the most delightful trips...

"DEAR MOTHER:— A good thing to send would be a package of Grape-Nuts, or something of that kind that is not expensive or heavy and is of good food value. Your son, WILL."

Wherever hardships are endured, wherever big deeds are accomplished, there a food is demanded that provides maximum of value in brain- and body-building material with minimum of bulk.

In this respect no other food equals Grape-Nuts

In building the Panama Canal thousands of brain workers as well as brawn workers kept themselves fit and in trim by eating Grape-Nuts dry from the package.

Not only does Grape-Nuts supply all the brain- and bone-building, nerve- and muscle-making elements of choicest wheat but also the rich nutriment of malted barley.

Grape-Nuts is highly concentrated nourishment in compact form—always ready, crisp and delicious—thoroughly baked and packaged to keep indefinitely, anywhere.

Wherever time is precious and sound nourishment vital you'll find Grape-Nuts.

Wonderful Success of the Misses Rosenbaum Shows What Women Can Do in Business World

MISS CLARA ROSENBAUM.

What home talent can accomplish at home is illustrated in the career of two well known Atlanta women. When one sees over one of the largest business institutions on Whitehall street, the sign, "C. & C. Rosenbaum," it would give the impression that the firm were masculine, and maybe physically in proportion to the size of the building!

The "C. & C." stands for Misses Clemmie and Clara Rosenbaum, two Atlanta women who, through their own talent, taste, ability, initiative and industry have built up one of the largest and most successful millinery shops in the south. They employ almost exclusively Atlanta talent and industry, and their buyers are Atlanta women. Their business reaches through every state in the south, and every

For the night which they will spend in Atlanta a splendid entertainment will be arranged. The meeting of Monday will decide upon the details of this entertainment. On the morning of October 16 the tourists will leave for Macon. The Atlanta Automobile and Accessories association will furnish an escort all the way from Atlanta to Macon.

Mr. R. N. Reed, Atlanta, Ga.—Dear Mr. Reed: Owing to the plans already made by the people in Chicago and the fact that they have had Governor Dunne promise to take part in the starting exercises of the tour by the commissioners, we have been compelled to change the date and set the start back to October 3. This will put the tour in your city on the evening of October 16, and we will leave there on the following day.

"We will probably have a moving picture man with us and have a number of prominent newspaper men who will follow the tour all the way through. Very truly yours, (Signed) W. S. GILBREATH, Field Secretary."

Citation From Bible, In Charging the Jury, Results in New Trial

The court of appeals yesterday handed down a decision in the case of Braxley v. The State, in which the court held that it is inappropriate for the judge to cite the gospel as a criterion in charging a jury, and also holding that the judge was in error in admitting to testimony revelations of the defendant's insanity.

Time-Loss in Tuberculosis

In the Journal of the American Medical Association (January 17, 1914) was the following: "It has been many times stated that in tuberculosis or in the pre-tuberculous stage an increased amount of calcium (lime) is lost both in the urine and feces. In fact, a demineralization has been thought to be a forerunner of the development of tuberculosis."

Always we have urged consumptives to attend strictly to matters of food, but often the effect of a remedial agent is needed. In many cases of apparent recovery Beckman's Alternative seems to have supplied this need. It contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, so is safe to try. From your druggist or direct.

DRESS-UP WEEK

October 3rd to 9th

The aim of Dress-Up Week is to interest men in wearing good clothes and generally "sprucing up."

For the past two years American men have been more economical in matters of dress than they were formerly.

But now times are becoming better. We have more money, we are doing more business. It's time we were showing our belief in these good times by "Dressing Up."

Every man should join in this Campaign, Makers, Dealers and Wearers, and make the event one Grand Success.

Judge Longstreet Carved Emory Gate With Penknife

By Wightman F. Melton. (Special.)
 Oxford, Ga., September 25.—(Special.)
 Visitors to the home of the president of Emory college, Oxford, Ga., little dream, when passing in or out of the gate, that the rungs in that gate were whittled out with a pen-knife, some seventy-five years ago, by Judge A. E. Longstreet, when he was president of the college.

Judge Longstreet, jurist, editor, author, minister, college president, belonged to an ingenious line. His father, William Longstreet, announced his invention of a steamboat before Fulton did and tried his boat successfully on the Savannah river not long after Fulton had succeeded on the Hudson.

Judge Longstreet, he who whittled the Oxford gate, was graduated from Yale, began the practice of law at Litchfield, Conn.; became a legislator and a judge in Georgia, established

Finds a Cure For Pellagra

Harvey, La.—Mrs. S. W. Spruiell, of this place, writes: "I suppose it will be a great pleasure to you to know that you cured my child. She had pellagra very bad and the doctor said she never would get well. She is well of pellagra and looks fine."

"You may use this letter as a testimonial if you wish. Great benefit have you done my daughter, Mindie Abrams."

There is no longer any doubt that pellagra can be cured. Don't delay until it is too late. It is your duty to consult the resourceful Baughn.

The symptoms—hands red like sunburn, skin peeling off, sore mouth, the lips, throat and tongue a flaming red, with much mucus and choking; indigestion and nausea, either diarrhoea or constipation.

There is hope; get Baughn's big Free book on Pellagra and learn about the remedy for Pellagra that has at last been found. Address American Compositing Co., Box 2803, Jasper, Ala.; remembering money is refunded in any case where the remedy fails to cure.—(adv.)

875 ENGLISH CASUALTIES FROM GERMAN AIR RAIDS

London, September 25.—The east coast raid committee, appointed in January, submitted today to the treasury a report covering fourteen German aerial raids previous to June 15 and the bombardment of the Harlepool, Scarborough and Whitby by German warships. The number of claims reported for personal injury is 697, of which 178 were fatal cases. The number of claims for damage to property which have been investigated is 10,297.

WILKINSON HEADS FAIR ASSOCIATION

Ivan E. Allen Chosen Chairman of Executive Council. All Officers and Directors Are Announced.

Mell R. Wilkinson has been elected president of the Southeastern Fair association and will head the workings of this organization.

The five presidents are Ivan E. Allen, Walter G. Cooper, Beaumont Davison, H. G. Hastings and V. H. Kriegshafer. Ivan E. Allen, chairman, and Walter G. Cooper, vice chairman of the executive council; Henry W. Davis, treasurer; R. M. Striplin, general manager, and Henry H. Robinson, secretary, are the other officers named.

It will be remembered that through Mr. Wilkinson's timely and liberal subscription the fair fund was projected and raised, and the stockholders count themselves fortunate that he has consented to serve as president.

Mr. Allen's Responsibility.

As chairman of the executive council, Ivan E. Allen will have in hand the active workings of this organization and on his shoulders largely rests the responsibility for the success of the fair. The other members of the executive council are Walter G. Cooper, vice chairman; H. G. Hastings, Albert Howell, Jr., V. H. Kriegshafer, Brooks Morgan, F. J. Paxton, S. B. Turman, Mell R. Wilkinson and James G. Woodward.

Mr. Allen was chairman of the general working committee which raised the fair fund and has largely shaped the policy of the fair.

A very representative board of directors, which includes leaders in all lines of business, is composed of the following gentlemen:

DR. THEO TOEPEL

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:--AND NO OTHERS!

IN the first place, let me explain, that this is an "advertisement."

I do this out of deference to the two Atlanta newspapers which are carrying it at so much per inch; I don't want to get them mixed up in this thing without their knowledge and consent.

Also, it is an advertisement, because it has a purpose to serve; not exactly a selfish purpose, but, nevertheless, a specific and important purpose—at least, as I see it.

I am addressing it only to those who see the present situation in Georgia as I see it; the others may think about it as they please.

I see in the present situation in Georgia an urgent necessity—and a splendid opportunity—for arousing the best conscience of her own people against mob violence. Too many have been aroused FOR it heretofore.

All this has not so much to do with the Leo Frank lynching; for that horrible affair was but the outgrowth of what we had been sowing in Georgia for many years past.

When I say "we," I don't mean "we"—I mean such people as Tom Watson and his most "incurable" followers.

It is in an effort to offset and overcome this mob spirit in Georgia—which even has its "official organ" in Watson's Jeffersonian—that I have been printing a series of articles in The Augusta Chronicle.

And, now, I am getting to the advertisement: But, first, I would like to be understood about it. Not that I expect to be understood by some, but I shall, at least, give them the opportunity to understand it—whether they want to or not.

I'm printing this "advertisement" in the Atlanta Constitution and Atlanta Journal, at a cost of over $100 for each paper—a "special" professional rate; may the Lord forgive them!—not with any view of making money out of it for The Augusta Chronicle (though I would, at least, like to "get our bait back") but, solely, with a view of having next Tuesday's Chronicle as widely calculated as possible.

That's all! And that's why I say I am addressing this advertisement only to those people who feel about this matter as I do—who want to see Georgia set right before the world and with her own conscience.

But, I may as well be perfectly candid and say it—I can't hope to do this with The Chronicle's normal circulation. This is exactly 9,350 Daily and 11,500 Sunday.

So, you see, The Chronicle—situated, as it is, on the side of the State—does not cover all of Georgia, by any means.

I am free to confess that Tom Watson circulates about ten times as many of his papers in Georgia as we do.

This does not speak well for Georgia—because there is not a line of news in Watson's papers, and seldom a word of Truth—just abuse, obscenity and sensationalism—but, still, it is a fact.

Now, then, what I am trying to do is to put next Tuesday's Chronicle in the hands of 50,000 Georgians, at least, and if possible, a few thousand on the outside.

But please understand this right at the outset—I am not trying to "make money" out of it for The Chronicle.

No, the only thing I am after is to get this particular issue of The Chronicle circulated as widely as possible.

And why? Because it will contain the whole "Slaton-Watson—Law or Anarchy" controversy brought down to date, as follows:

"I WANT TO TRY TO PUT 50,000 COPIES OF NEXT TUESDAY'S CHRONICLE IN THE HANDS OF PEOPLE WHO NEED TO KNOW THE TRUTH—WHETHER SOME OF THEM WANT TO OR NOT—AND I AM ASKING THOSE PEOPLE WHO FEEL AS I DO ABOUT THE PRESENT SITUATION IN GEORGIA TO HELP ME DO IT; THAT'S ALL."—THOMAS W. LOYLESS, EDITOR AUGUSTA CHRONICLE.

SLATON OR WATSON; LAW OR ANARCHY--WHICH?

many other names and letters added since they were first printed; three pages.

Fourth—Voluntary letters from every part of Georgia, either commending or condemning the Slaton-Watson articles; six pages. Many new ones, which ought to be put before all the people, not only as showing the real sentiment of Georgia, but because of their "moral weight" in helping to determine this vital issue of Law and Order rightly.

Fifth—Newspaper comment from scores of Georgia weeklies—the dailies being as yet unwilling to speak out—together with intelligent and helpful comment by newspapers in neighboring states—about four pages—all helping to set Georgia right in the eyes of the country.

Sixth—A review of Tom Watson's attempted "reply" in the last issue of his Jeffersonian; more of his misrepresentations being shown up without mincing words. His entire case against Governor Slaton riddled by merely citing the record. There are about two pages of this, and if I do say so, it makes interesting reading. Not because it is particularly well written, but simply because it brings all the facts to bear against Tom Watson's mere unsupported assertions.

Seventh—And you will want to see this, and have others see it; just five years of Tom Watson's record in wholesale abuse and slander. He starts in with Christopher Columbus, calling him a "liar and a fraud," and working down to date with President Woodrow Wilson, calling him a "liar and a coward," the "tool of the trusts"—and a whole lot more, besides. To him Grover Cleveland was a "rotten hog," President Taft a "pot-bellied traitor"; Bishop Candler a "pot-bellied priest" and some other things besides. And, of course, there are all the things he has said about every Georgia Senator, Congressman and everybody else for the past five years.

He has spared nobody, they are all "vile"; and, as Sydney Smith once said of Shelly—"he even speaks disrespectfully of the Equator."

I give an outline of next Tuesday's edition of The Chronicle just so you can determine for yourself whether or not it will be worth while to give it a wide circulation, both in and out of the state, in the present effort to redeem Georgia from incendiarianism and mob rule.

If these articles have any merit at all—and hundreds of the best men and women in Georgia have, already, said they have—then, the only way they can be made effective is to distribute them far and wide.

If they will do any good in helping to remedy the present situation in Georgia—and, particularly, in helping to clear her name of some of the slime with which Watsonism has smeared it—then, the only good can come in putting this issue of The Chronicle into as many hands as possible.

So far, this has not been done; perhaps, not 30,000 people in Georgia have seen even the first article, and not 15,000 have seen the subsequent articles.

Not 5,000 outside of Georgia have seen any of them.

For, as already explained, I cannot undertake to do this single-handed and alone. The expense is too great.

Right here, it may be interesting to note what I have already caused The Chronicle to spend on this work. Here it is, as the bookkeeper furnishes it to me:

Extra composing room pay roll $197.08
 Extra white paper consumed 382.08
 Extra postage paid 148.50
 Extra mailing room expense 54.00
 Extra expense addressing wrappers, etc. 38.00

Total $819.64

An increase in The Chronicle's weekly cash expense of over $400 per week; and even that isn't all—The Chronicle has lost 79 old subscribers, or $456; or a total for the "debit" side of $1,272; or about $200 per day. But that's all right.

Of course, some of this has come back to it in "paper sales" and "new subscribers"—the latter, however, averaging less than three (3) months' each. The record for the past two weeks showing as follows:

Extra paper sales, less returns	$331.09
204 new subscribers added at an average of $1.48 each	$302.72
Total	$633.73

I mention the above, not by way of asking for help, or anything of that sort, but, simply because it has been charged that The Chronicle entered upon this work "for pay"; that it had been "hired" to do it, or that I had.

What The Chronicle gets out of it, and what I get out of it, is truthfully shown above—except for that little extra item of "satisfaction"; the satisfaction of having performed a duty to your State.

Now, with these lights before you, if you feel that you want to assist in giving this "Appeal to Georgians, in Behalf of Georgia" as wide a circulation as possible, you are given an opportunity to do so—at as near cost as I can figure it. Here it is:

The white paper will cost us one (1) cent per copy; the postage (extra) one cent, the cost of production, writing wrappers, etc., one (1) cent; or, say, about three (3) cents per copy.

So, let that be the price. For as many copies as you may care to have The Chronicle mail out for you next Tuesday, or as few.

Just send in the names with three cents for each one and we will do the rest.

And if you haven't any money, or don't feel like spending it, send in a few names anyway—and I will send papers to them for nothing.

I, simply, want to get this particular issue of The Chronicle circulated as widely as possible—and, as stated, I can't do it all by myself.

That's why I am running this "advertisement"—to let others who feel as I do about it know exactly what I am trying to do.

If they don't want to co-operate in this good work, they needn't to. I am, simply, giving them the opportunity.

But, if they do, I would like to hear from them, with as many names as possible, before next Tuesday.

I am taking a chance and printing 50,000 copies. It will take that many to meet Tom Watson's publication on an even footing (as to circulation, I mean not otherwise—God forbid!) in every town and county in Georgia.

Think it over, you who want to see an end put to this man's devilish work in Georgia—and do as you please about it. But do it quick!

And, remember, you are NOT doing it for me, or for The Chronicle, or for Jack Slaton—but for Georgia!

Yours for the Truth and the Redemption of Georgia's Honor,

THOS. W. LOYLESS,
 Editor and Manager of The Augusta Chronicle,
 Augusta, Ga., September 24th.

P. S.: While I'm at it, I want to thank those 204 people who have voluntarily subscribed for The Chronicle during the past two weeks. Nearly all of them have written to me personally, but I have as yet not had a chance to answer their letters. I suppose they have understood why. If not, I'll tell 'em—been working from fifteen to eighteen hours a day, digging out Tom Watson's record and answering his crazy charges about Slaton and others. I am, also, supposed to look after the business office, "between times," but I have just had to let that go. I don't know enough about business, anyway, to worry me much—and I care even less. Still, I know those 204 new subscribers will be a help, in making up for those who got "huffy" and quit—and so I thank them for getting in the "trench" with us.

Fall Apparel For All Women!

AND from the crowds that have been in our Suit and Dress department during the past few days it would seem that most all women are choosing their needs at this store. Our showing of Dresses, Suits and Coats was never prettier than this season.

Charming Evening Gowns Your Fall Suit Is Here

At moderate prices the styles and materials are very excellent. Of chiffon and taffeta, chiffon and net, Georgette crepe and nets, etc. Colors of white, lilac, eel blue, maize, pink, turquoise and orchid. The styles are very daintily trimmed; the wide skirts prevail. These lower priced really expensive looking Gowns at $16.75 to $29.50.

The Gown Sketched Is $60

A genuine Georgette model of Georgette crepe, chiffon and velvet. The yoke and sleeves are of metal lace. Net lining and Arabian style ornaments. The workmanship is very excellent.

Other Evening Gowns to $175

Our French room is fairly glistening with new, stunning Gowns for better wear. Bright, high shades prevail and the styles are very good. Models of Georgette, Larvin, Lucile, Jenny, Callot, Ducet and others. Faithful reproductions of the most exquisite Parisian styles at prices of $35 to $175.

We believe that only at this store can you view the most complete assortment—the models that correctly interpret Parisian fashion tendencies.

Paris has decreed that the fall suit should be plain; not only in style, but plain in color. Quiet tones of brown, green, navy and black predominate. While gray plaids and checks rank second best. Coats come in most all lengths; skirts are short and full, many circular models being displayed. Materials are broadcloths, serges, gabardines, zibelines and velvets. Prices go from $15 to $175.

The Season's Furs

Being exclusive Atlanta representatives for the renowned Revillon Freres Furs, we can present the authentic styles for your approval.

The outlines of the whole skin have been well preserved in every way possible in designing the Scarfs. Neck pieces are smaller than they have been in the past, only a few large pieces in fox and lynx being shown.

Muffs are very conservative, the smaller varieties being in vogue. Flat shapes are also good.

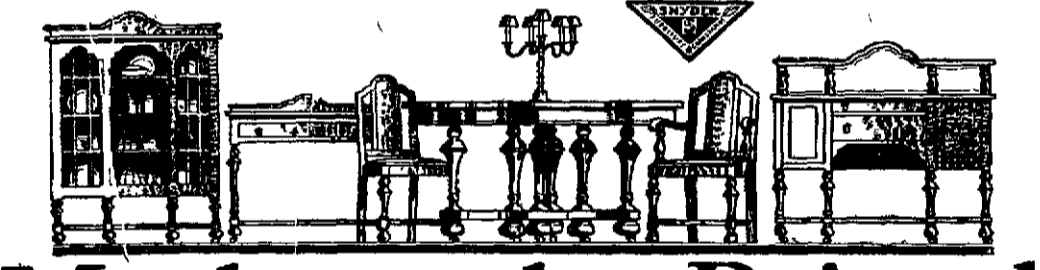

Skins are Beaver, Hudson Lynx, Hudson Seal, Belgium Coney, French Coney, Australian Silverline Fox, Black Fox, Skunk, Rose Wolf, Mouffloon, Mink, Blue Fox, etc. Prices go from $5 to $185.

Moderately Priced Dining Room Furniture

Dining Room Furniture reflects, the instant one views it, the wisdom of the one who has chosen it. Artistic Dining Furniture renders the home more attractive. It not only gives the occupants a feeling of pride, but to friends it imparts a feeling of being at home—of recognition of your good breeding and culture.

Lose at once the idea that Furniture, to be artistic and honestly constructed, must be out of reason as to price.

In this store Furniture must meet with our requirements before it is offered for sale. Honest construction, thorough reliability and the real style, real quality that are apparent at a glance to the Furniture-wise are the prime requisites.

We have chosen as the subject of this advertisement Dining Room Furniture. And we have done so simply because moderate priced, artistic Dining Room Furniture is a feature with us. Several suits, with their values, are mentioned below. We want you who are in the field for Furniture to examine these pieces. Furniture knowledge has aided in making up our stocks—in choosing these sets. You can rely upon that same knowledge in making your selections. Divided payments may be arranged.
