HIGH GASOLINE PRICE NOT WORRYING BLOUNT

Chalmers Cars Are Proving to Be Record-Breakers in Matter of Economy.

The high price of gasoline is not worrying J. G. Blount, distributor for Georgia handling the Chalmers cars. This is due to the wonderful performance of the Chalmers six-30, $400 automobile which is proving to be a record-breaker in the question of economy of gasoline. This car is turning 18 miles to the gallon of gas and that is answering the demands of owners nowadays when the price of the motive power is soaring every day.

Continual increase in the price of gasoline has set the prospective automobile buyer to studying conditions closely. Economy, low upkeep and performance make three questions for his study. This study is not keeping any prospects from purchasing cars, but it is getting the man or woman who buys each and every dollar expended and said in the life of that dealer or manufacturer who can not furnish the answer to the three problems.

It is the answer to these problems which is sweeping the Chalmers six-30, 3400 r.p.m. car into the greatest popularity of any car in the south. At every distributing center the answer has made a name for itself. The Chalmers officials foresaw this very point and prepared for it to such an extent that delivery is being made in the quickest possible time. Raw material in sufficient quantities was bought months ago and kept up delivery for weeks to come and to keep down prices at the present hour of 1916 when many others are being forced to raise.

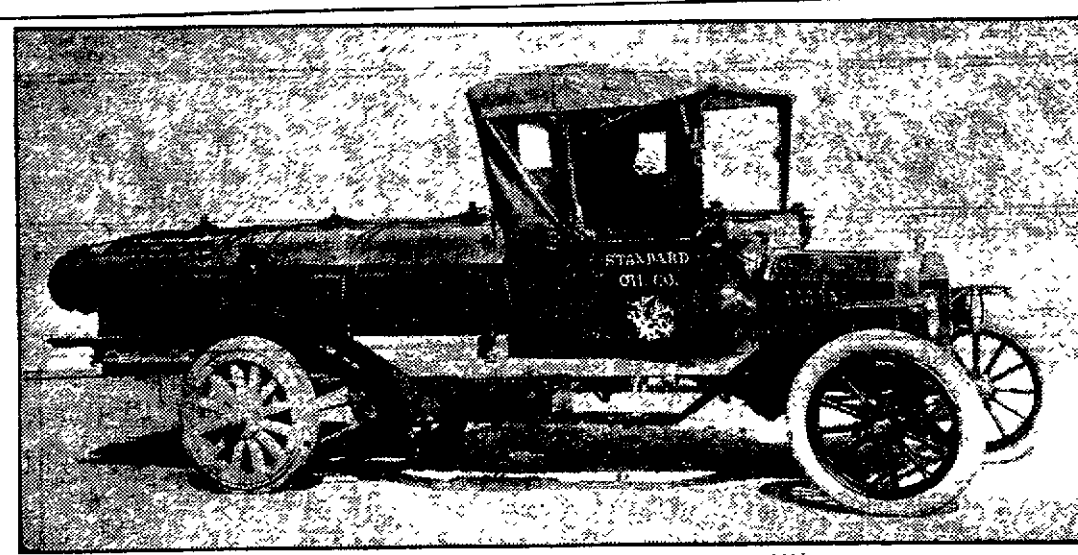

While touring the south, Paul Smith, vice president of the Chalmers company in charge of sales, stressed the high gasoline problem. He told how High Chalmers had demanded of his engineers in the six-30 the three considerations—acceleration, economy and performance, and how they had answered them. He said that the six-30 was a record breaker for each requirement. Mr. Smith told of the 18 miles to the gallon which was heard of in New York but also told how it was answered by the 18 miles to the gallon of the six-30. He said that the six-30 is a record breaker for each requirement. Mr. Smith told of the 18 miles to the gallon which was heard of in New York but also told how it was answered by the 18 miles to the gallon of the six-30. He said that the six-30 is a record breaker for each requirement.

Makes Twelve Miles In Just Eight Hours, And All in Low Gear

To travel twelve miles in eight hours is not a feat many would think of. But it is a feat that has been accomplished by a Chalmers six-30. The car was driven at a steady pace of 1.5 miles per hour for eight hours, covering a total distance of 12 miles. This feat was accomplished while the car was in low gear, demonstrating its exceptional economy and reliability.

Some Spring Sport Splashes

By Malcolm MacLean. During one of the exhibition games at Mineral Wells, Texas, between the White Sox and Fort Worth clubs, Rowland sent Buck Weaver out to umpire on the bases. The game went along nicely until the third, when a foul citizen happened to notice Weaver standing near second and Fred McMullin, who was playing that base, was about six feet from him.

Joe Benz, who was the first to report at Mine, I Wells, was the hero of the town for many days in fact he had the honor of breaking in and out of the town by having a special kind of waltz named after him. The colored bell boys at the hotel, unaccustomed to being tipped when they took ice water up to the rooms, soon learned that Joe was good for a tip on such occasions.

Speaking of the coo piano player who refuses to perform because he for Eddie Clotte of the Sox of a pitcher the Uuden team had two years ago.

NEW HYATT BRANCH ON PACIFIC COAST; BUSINESS INCREASES

DIAMOND RING HOAX PLAYED IN COLUMBUS

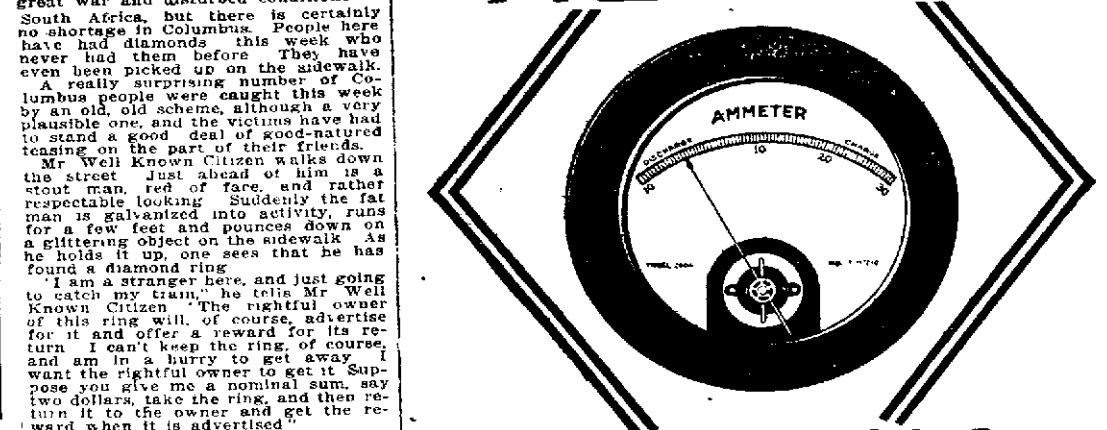

Columbus, Ga., April 1.—(Special)—The world's supply of diamonds may be short, as alleged, on account of the great war and disturbed conditions in South Africa, but there is certainly no shortage in Columbus. People here have had diamonds this week who never had them before. They have even been picked up on the sidewalk.

Mr. Willard Citizen walks down the street just ahead of him in a stout man, red of face, and rather respectable looking. Suddenly the fat man is galloping into activity, runs for a few feet and pounces down on a glittering object on the sidewalk. As he holds it up, one sees that he has found a diamond ring.

The Oil That Puts "Velvet" in Your Motor

Here is the solution of your lubricating problems: you who own motor cars. The oil that enables you to "turn over" easily "Cushions" the moving parts of your car against wear or strain. Works equally well in summer or winter because of its sturdy texture. Gives far greater mileage for each gallon. Is free from solid matter—will not gum. Contains no free carbon, does not "coke" in the cylinders or foul your spark plugs, the slight amount of residue being carried off in the exhaust. The oil that has the body to seal tight the clearance of the pistons and to give the entire force of the explosion to the running of the car. The increased mileage, increased-power oil, is

ROMANCES OF THE RING

By TIM

Once upon a time—it was when the nineteenth century was hanging on the ropes, dazed and groggy, and just about to take the count—there lived in the east End of London a good-looking, intelligent young fellow, somewhere in the neighborhood of nineteen years old, who made a precarious living by fighting in the ring, eking out his income from this source by occasional theatrical tours in the provinces...

The principal characteristic of this youthful disciple of Pug and Broughton was a fondness for Shakespeare. He could recite passages from the Bard of Avon by the hour, and in his delivery he possessed a "punch" which challenged the admiration of his companions. That was certainly an odd accomplishment for a boxer, but Conway Tearle came of a theatrical family which had represented on the stage for more than a century, and, moreover, he had been on the stage himself, off and on, ever since he was six years old.

It was a natural love for athletics, especially the manly art which had been taught by his father, that had led the young Tearle to the prize ring. He had been in the professional ring for two years, getting more than a few pounds for his battles, but still cherishing championship aspirations.

Quits the Stage. The young boxer was a native of New York, although he had spent most of his life in England. His mother, May Conway, was an actress of some note, and she was the pilot of the first American stock company, and for years the owner of the Brooklyn theatre. The family was a prominent one since the middle of the eighteenth century, when Augustus Conway made a fortune on the London boards of the colonial plantations. Conway Tearle took the name of his stepfather, Osborne Tearle, a so-called actor.

Conway was five years old when the Tearles went to England to appear on the London stage. Osborne Tearle had a theatrical company which presented Shakespearean dramas and old comedies all over England, and from the time he was six, Conway played a great variety of roles. At the tender age of ten he had at his command a reputation for his impersonation of a dozen of Shakespeare's plays.

He was about nineteen when he was written into the ambition of becoming a professional boxer. For two years he battled whenever opportunity offered, and he made a reputation for himself as a pugilist except for a circumstance which changed his whole career. He gave a performance of "Hamlet" in a Manchester theatre, but at the last moment the actor called on for Hamlet was sick, and Conway stepped in. He went on in his stead, without having had a rehearsal, and played Hamlet to the hilt.

The triumph of the boxer-actor marked the end of his career as a London theatrical manager. He witnessed his father's immediate offer to play in the London theatre, and Conway refused. He made a big hit—a bigger hit than he had ever made as a tragedian—and he was a sensation. He fought the part of Hamlet right before the eyes of the public. Young Tearle had often thought of going into the theatre, but while he made the boxing game, but while he made the triumph of the Antipodes it was as an actor engaged for the title role in "Hamlet."

Becomes Actor Again. From that time Conway Tearle never saw another thought to the boxing game, a though he continued to put on the gloves in friendly bouts whenever opportunity offered, and remained all his life a member of the National Amateur Athletic Union. Only a few years after he had been pointing his fellow man to a ring, Tearle was in the line of business of the Terry's company. For two years he remained with the great billion, and for two years more he was with the Charles W. Winham. After that he made a brief trip to America to play with Grace Terry, but he soon returned to England.

When Conway Tearle next visited his native land it was with a thoroughly convinced opinion that he had found his life's work. He was in his pocket Mr. Frohman placed him with Miss Marlowe and Miss Marlowe, but after two days of rehearsal the boxer was dismissed as a hopeless case by Miss Marlowe. Happily for Tearle, Conway Tearle did not accept the verdict as final. In spite of the lovely Julia's bitter condemnation, Mr. Frohman's list was a long one, and gave him a part with Miss Marlowe in "The Toast of the Town." For eight years he was leading man to various American stars, but ill fortune pursued all the theatrical ventures in which he was engaged, and scarcely one of them was successful.

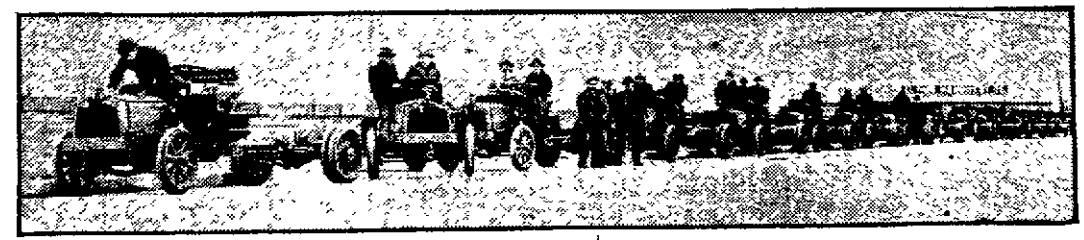

Until recently Mr. Tearle had been a matinee idol, a handsome, dashing fellow, a regular devil of a fellow, and a great favorite with very young girls. Great success did not overtake him until he assumed quite another role, that of Bill Walker, the Bernard Shaw's "Major Barbara," in which Grace George has been starring in New York. The refined, handsome matinee idol was chosen for the part of Bill Walker, this production. As Bill Walker is a Greek professor, and Tearle seemed well suited to this important role, but after the first rehearsal he made violent objections to continue in it. He longed for the part of Bill Walker, a rough, costumed character, a ruffian who beats up everybody he comes across, women included. After many objections, he was given the part, and from the opening night he was the big hit of the successful production.

As Bill Walker, the ex-bruiser, battled everybody in the Salvation Army show. He hurled defiance at the teeth of the granddaughter of a belted earl, beat up two women, reduced the man to cowering submission to his will, and raised Hades generally. The ex-boxer confesses that there is enough of the primitive in his blood to give him a sneaking sympathy for Bill, the wife-beater. "Bill is a ruffian and a brute," he admits, "but for all that he's honest about it and doesn't pretend to be anything else. He bullies an old man and beats women, but at that he isn't a coward. When he knows he is up against a man who can whip him he doesn't take any of his medicine like a man. Bill is a primeval person, a beater of women in an age of feminine adulation, and his lot is not a happy one. Gawd!" he groans, "there's no justice in this coin."

The trucks in the picture are a part of a large shipment which was sent down some time ago, with Goodrich solid truck equipment, of course, and it is notable that this famous tire brand is equal to the heroic work across the sandy deserts, over the rough mountain trails and the many places where there are no roads at all, along the American lines of communication. The wear and tear which such tires are subjected and the fact that the Goodrich are doing all the work expected of them—and more too—is a splendid tribute to the wearing qualities of these tires.

a lot stronger on paper this year than they did in 1915. Hughey isn't visibly worried. He declares that the "Tigers" will, barring accidents, be in the race with both feet. Last year the Detroit team led the Johnson circuit in batting, and in the big department the champion Red Sox had to take their dust. Jennings has a solid foundation for his confidence, for any club that the Detroit department of the White Star Peaches has to have some assistance, but the reports from Wapakoneta indicate that Jennings is going to have a good, well-rounded team.

from Jack Chapman, manager of the Louisville club in the old American association, which was a major league. Chapman enclosed a hundred dollars in his epistle, and ordered Hughey to climb aboard the Colonel's band-wagon. Chapman had been tipped off by a friend who had great confidence in the future of the red-haired Irishman, and he acted on the advice without losing any time.

To jump from a semi-pro outfit to a major league club seemed appalling to Hughey, and he was filled with misgivings as to the result, but he had the hundred bones and he figured that at worst he would have a free trip to and from Kentucky, and a little experience.

Jennings started his baseball career in the mining district of Pennsylvania. He was born on April 2, 1876, in Pittsburg. As a youngster he played ball in Mauch Chunk, Lehigh and other towns in the coal region. In 1891 he was catching for a semi-professional club in Lehigh. One June day in that year young Jennings got a letter

Chapman didn't need a bookstop. He had acted on the spur of the moment in buying his mail-order recruit, and when he got him he scarcely knew what to do with him. Soon after Hugh's arrival Taylor, the first baseman of the Colonels, was put out of the game and Jennings was perched on that sack.

Hugh gave a very fair imitation of a first baseman, but was soon switched to shortstop. It was as a swatter, however, that he made his big reputation. In his second game he got three safe hits out of four times up, and he finished his first season with a batting average of .286. In 1895 Louisville was admitted to the National league. Hugh continued to play shortstop and batted .322. The following year he temporarily lost his batting eye, and was traded to Baltimore. He batted .332 for the Orioles in 1894, .338 in 1895, and .322 in 1896. In 1899 he went to Brooklyn, where he batted .306. In 1901 he went to the Phillies and remained there two seasons, when he landed in Baltimore. He played shortstop and second base for the Eastern league club until 1907, when he was drafted by Detroit, and became the bench manager of the Tigers.

NEVER DID ANY CAR ENJOY a greater vogue—never did any product achieve such an unqualified victory. Never did orders pour into the Reo factories as they have during the past three months—as they are pouring in today.

JUST THINK OF IT! On March first we had on hand at the Reo factory in Lansing, immediate shipment orders for more than 4200 cars—about equally divided between the two great Reo-models.

THAT'S MORE ORDERS than we ever had on hand at any previous time. That was March first, mind you—not May first—and despite the fact that during the past three months, January to March inclusive, we had shipped more Reos than during any previous three months in Reo history.

ISN'T THAT A WONDERFUL RECORD—doesn't it prove that after all sound engineering practice and sound business principles win in the long run?

YOU WILL RECALL DOUBTLESS that we Reo Folk took no part in the recent noisy controversy. We did not vie with others in claiming supernatural qualities for this Reo Six. Like yourself, we were amused onlookers.

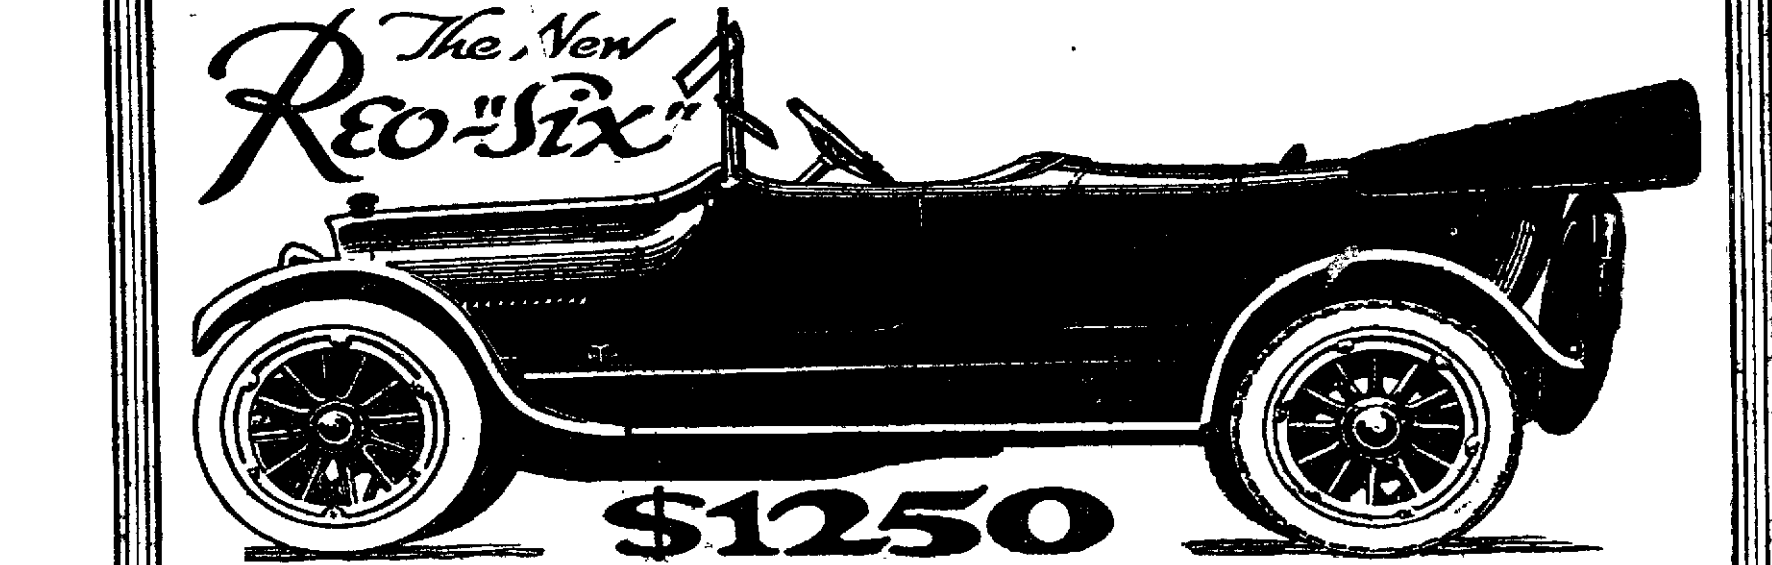

REO'S POSITION WAS SECURE. We think it is permanent. Knowing as we do that Reo prestige is the result of long years of conservative designing and of energetic improving; of establishing an ideal, and working consistently toward it, we were only mildly interested in the wordy melee.

SO WE TOOK NO PART. We were content to let others claim anything they thought best—content in the knowledge that we Reo Folk could, when put to the test, prove as much and more.

OUR ONE CONCERN WAS TO BUILD enough Sixes to supply that ever increasing clientele who feel safer when they have tied to a Reo—that ever increasing class of discriminating buyers who are looking, not for the fastest, but for the best, in motor cars.

AND IT WAS A REAL PROBLEM. Consider for yourself. Last year the Reo Six enjoyed a tremendous demand. That was its first year. We had gone about it in our usual conservative way and as usual had underestimated the demand for this Six.

WE ARE ANXIOUS TO EXPRESS that great fact upon you. We have no mental reservation in speaking of this Reo Six. We know what goes into it—and we know that all there is of Reo experience and Reo integrity went into its design and making.

The New Reo Six $1250 The Supremacy of This Reo Six Was Achieved by Peaceful Conquest

THE TREMENDOUS DEMAND—the over demand—the excess of orders over possible factory production—that this Reo Six enjoys is proof that it now reigns supreme among six cylinder cars.

NEVER DID ANY CAR ENJOY a greater vogue—never did any product achieve such an unqualified victory. Never did orders pour into the Reo factories as they have during the past three months—as they are pouring in today.

JUST THINK OF IT! On March first we had on hand at the Reo factory in Lansing, immediate shipment orders for more than 4200 cars—about equally divided between the two great Reo-models.

WE ARE ANXIOUS TO EXPRESS that great fact upon you. We have no mental reservation in speaking of this Reo Six. We know what goes into it—and we know that all there is of Reo experience and Reo integrity went into its design and making.

THIS YEAR WE FIGURED that if we built about one Six to two Fours it should about meet the demand. But again we underestimated. That was soon apparent. So we planned some months ago to add to the Six schedule and make just as many of them as we could—split the production 50-50 between the two models as nearly as possible.

BUT THAT WON'T BE ENOUGH to go sound. That is now a certainty. We haven't touched the peak of the demand yet—but daily orders are already in excess of daily output.

AND WE'RE MIGHTILY PLEASED, we Reo Folk. For, while it is aggravating to be unable to supply all who want Reo Sixes, it is gratifying to know that our policy is approved by such a tremendous percentage of buyers—and they the best class of buyers because the most discriminating and cautious.

BEST OF ALL, that demand is the result, not of artificial stimulation, but of steady growth.

WE HAVE NEVER FEATURED excessive speeds or radical features of construction. We speak only of Reo quality—Reo uniformity of quality—and of economy of upkeep. Just those things the more sensible buyers demand in a car.

THIS REO SIX APPEALS to a class of buyers who formerly paid several times as much for their motor cars. Men able to pay anything—but too sound in the head to pay for an article more than it is worth.

MEN WHO LOOK TO QUALITY of materials and workmanship—not merely the price tag.

THINGS HAVE MOVED SO RAPIDLY in this industry—such tremendous advances have been made in the improvements of metals and their treatment and in manufacturing methods—it is impossible for most buyers to realize what wonderful quality is available today for $1250.

IT IS NOT TOO MUCH TO SAY—and you know we Reo Folk are not given to extravagant use of words—that it was impossible, three years ago, to buy, at any price—at any price mind you—a car of such excellent riding qualities, of such consistent performance, long life and low maintenance cost, as you obtain in this Reo Six.

AND IT WAS A REAL PROBLEM. Consider for yourself. Last year the Reo Six enjoyed a tremendous demand. That was its first year. We had gone about it in our usual conservative way and as usual had underestimated the demand for this Six.

WE ARE ANXIOUS TO EXPRESS that great fact upon you. We have no mental reservation in speaking of this Reo Six. We know what goes into it—and we know that all there is of Reo experience and Reo integrity went into its design and making.

AND SO WE SAY—and we measure every word because we Reo Folk stand back of what we say—that no man, however rich, can want or can buy a better automobile.

WHAT COULD HE ASK that is not in this Reo Six. Size?—It is a big liberal seven-passenger car. Power?—It has ample. Riding qualities?—It is unequalled. Speed?—all a sane, sober man will ever care to use. Beauty?—It has been called the "Fashion Plate". Reputation?—none stands higher than Reo.

YET ITS UPKEEP COST has proved to be less than one-tenth—get that, one-tenth—that of some five-passenger cars. And stumpy Fives, at that!

IF YOUR PAST EXPERIENCE has been only with other makes of cars, you would not believe—could not credit—the facts we might tell you about the low operation and upkeep cost of this Reo Six.

YET ANY REO SIX OWNER will endorse them—any Reo dealer will show you the proofs.

SO ANYONE WHOSE FAMILY DEMANDS a seven-passenger car can afford to own this Reo Six—while the wealthiest will find in it all the luxury that can be had at any price.

IS IT ANY WONDER the demand for such a car is so greatly in excess of our ability to build them—even in the big forty-acre Reo plants? Is it any wonder?

NOW IN YOUR CASE, if you happen to be one of those who are still delaying the placing of your order. Satisfy yourself as to the superior value of this Six. Then don't delay another moment. We've told you the conditions. You must realize that thousands must be disappointed this spring as every previous spring.

FOR NEVER SINCE the first Reo was made and sold has it been possible to make enough cars to supply all who wanted Reos. Never a time.

THOSE WHOSE ORDERS are in our hands well in advance, can count on getting Reo Sixes for spring delivery. We have our allotment by date. Can tell you just when you may expect your Reo Six. But every day's delay is dangerous—there won't be enough to go round. First orders will be delivered first.

TODAY won't be a minute to soon.

"Cole 8" Plays a Big Part In the Highway Movement

"COLE 8" ON THE DIXIE HIGHWAY TOUR.

Of all the motor cars manufactured in America, none is more closely related to Dixie Highway movement than the "Cole 8." It was the car that acted as the official pilot on the inaugural tour from Chicago to Miami, Fla., last autumn, carrying the officials of the association over the course when they inspected it for the first time.

Simultaneous with this official opening of the great southern highway, the Cole Motor Car company began to take aggressive steps to develop the south more thoroughly than ever before, and as a result, it now has representation in many of the larger southern cities and its southern organization is growing by leaps and bounds.

The "Cole 8" has proved to be an ideal car for this section. It is noted for its hill climbing ability and has performed remarkably in the sandy country. Its striking economy in the use of gasoline and oil, and its cooling efficiency are two important features which have recommended it to southern motorists.

Further than this, its wonderful work on the Dixie Highway tours has proven it out to everyone's satisfaction in the very territory where it is used. It was one of the three cars which alone were able to complete the tour on their own power, and became the source of constant comment wherever it halted on the tour.

On the recent Dixie Highway tour, Commissioner W. T. Anderson, driving his "Cole 8," as the official pilot car, made the statement that he drove 235 miles on 16 gallons of gas, which is very nearly 15 miles to the gallon, and he states that much of the road was deep sand. This is a remarkable performance when one considers that the "Cole 8" develops 70 horsepower, and to get so much horsepower on so little gas is a wonderful tribute to the efficiency and gas economy of the "Cole 8."

With the marked steps to develop the south that the Cole Motor Car company has taken and the favorable impression that the "Cole 8" has made through its performance in this section, a brilliant future for the Cole product is predicted by those familiar with the motor car situation in this section. Vigorous advertising and sales campaigns throughout the south are being planned by the Cole company and are being left unturned to put the "Cole 8" on the map in this section.

The "Cole 8" is distributed in north Georgia by Hubbell-Oakes Motor company, of this city. The latest model is now on display at their showroom. The prospective motor car purchaser should not fail to see the latest "Cole 8."

HANSON IS SATISFIED; SAXONS ARE ON THE WAY

George W. Hanson, southern district manager for the Saxon car, was a rather disappointed man—for a very short time, however—just the other day. Mr. Hanson was expecting a full trainload of Saxons in within a few days. He could picture just how mammoth and fine that big trainload would look as it came sweeping into the city. But he is to receive them now in two sections. Of course, that won't look quite so big, but it gets the cars here—and that's the main thing that Mr. Hanson is interested in. The following telegram explains some of Mr. Hanson's disappointment—but it also gives some idea of the broad smile which flitted across his face when he received it, on March 27.

J. W. Hanson, Atlanta, Ga. Owing to any snow storms transportation companies able to handle shipments in one solid trainload, shipped trainload fifteen cars today, and are shipping second trainload today or tomorrow.

A Line on the Boys' High School

By FRANK L. STANTON, Jr.

The Boys' High school is going along nicely. Going along nicely and gradually, attaining, piece by piece, the little "delicacies" that the school has been pulling for for years and only beginning to get. They're starting a museum now—a small one, in the lobby of the first and second floors. Not half of the first lobby is filled yet, but E. H. S. is mighty proud of it, proud of it because it is the first bud of years of hope. Proud of it because this start is backing up their faith in hope and in the belief that there are very few things you cannot do if you try hard enough.

If the city council, the governor and the Mayor and the president knew how appreciative this Boys' High school is of what they've got, and of what they are going to get why, b'george, they'd send 'em a blank check and tell 'em to fill it out to their own ideas. I betcha. I know they would—for I know how I felt when I saw Mr. Ragland the other day. I never wanted so much in my life to be a fire escape company president. A fire escape is the thing they're wanting most now, because when they get one on the north side they can tear away that heavy old porch on the front and get more light (and more compliments on their architecture, too).

"We are all mighty glad for what we've got," Mr. Eugene Ragland, principal, told me, "because it promises more. The fact that we're gradually getting this and that is more encouraging than you on the outside can believe. Look—here's a bicycle room, with racks for the bicycles. The boys used to pack them in the basement vestibule or on the outside. And the recent lunch room, which took a whole lot of plugging to get, has already outgrown its bounds. We're growing in our—er—little detail necessities. And the new principal, but senior professor, smiled like a young boy.

The school is growing from the standpoint of population, too. There are 423 boys going there on time every day. Most of them arrive every day. The percentage of stay-at-homes is getting smaller and smaller, which is nearing quite Mr. Ragland's ideal.

"I try to interest the boys in going to school from a business standpoint. And that is the status of a school; it's a plain business proposition. We do not demand any more work than the average employer does, but we try to demand as much. And they are seeing it that way. For instance, today there hasn't been a single boy to come in with a headache or some excuse to home or skip a class. That is a pretty good average for 423 people.

"And I am very strongly in favor of the get-together spirit among the boys personally. For this purpose we are installing study rooms, and reference rooms with libraries, and also one that you might call a bicycle room. There is a dark room which any student may have for his personal use. This will encourage amateur camera clubs, which do very educational work at the same time in picturing scenes for study in physical geography classes."

And so the Boys' High school is going along nicely—and looking bright and cheery than you'd imagine a school to be with fishing weather all around.

When I mentioned this to Mr. Ragland he quoted Frank Crane, "Happiness is a mental condition, not a geographical location." He might also have added that the boys seem to realize that without work life would be a baseless fabric, a groundless unsubstantial blank; that it takes a head to get ahead; that when you're in school you're in business—out to make good. The records of the school show that this spirit is there.

The Boys' High school is moving along to all expectations.

Once Again—We Must Ask You To Place Your Order Before It Is Too Late

Two weeks ago, we published an advertisement urging you to act QUICKLY in placing your order for a Paige, seven-passenger "Six-46."

At that time, we told you of the overwhelming demand for this model.

We told you that the factory was literally flooded with orders and predicted that there would be a shortage in the very near future.

Well—all that we said in that advertisement is now DOUBLY IMPORTANT.

SINCE THAT TIME, EVERY SINGLE PAIGE DEALER ON OUR BOOKS HAS APPEALED TO THE FACTORY IN AN ATTEMPT TO INCREASE HIS ALLOTMENT. This statement—astounding though it may seem—is the actual, literal truth.

And at the time this advertisement is written, our March orders for the Fairfield Model alone amount to ONE MILLION, FIVE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-FOUR THOUSAND DOLLARS. This represents 1,200 cars.

These are cold, uncompromising figures—the kind of evidence that no man can deny.

So, now, it is only a matter of a short time before Paige dealers will be compelled to refuse any orders for the "Fairfield" which are placed subject to "immediate delivery."

We are doing everything that is humanly possible to keep step with the demand. So far, our tremendously increased production has enabled us to satisfy most of our distributors.

But—with the spring retail season almost at hand—we know that this condition cannot continue. Soon we shall be compelled to apportion our production to the best of our ability—and many people will be obliged to wait thirty or even sixty days for their cars.

Such—in plain terms—is the condition that stares us in the face. A SHORT-AGE OF "FAIRFIELDS" IS COMING.

Surely, after two such explicit warnings, the wise man will protect his own interests and see the Paige dealer while immediate deliveries are still possible.

And now—after turning these facts over in your mind—you will find yourself, face to face, with one inevitable conclusion.

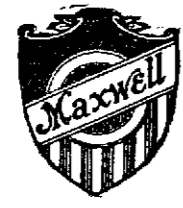

The REASON for this overwhelming demand must be based upon the consistent day-in and day-out performance of the "Fairfield" in the hands of thousands of owners. This is the truest and safest of all tests.

No other construction can be placed upon such decided preference on the part of men who know automobiles. In short, the "Fairfield" leads in demand because it leads in "value received."

Leadership

LEADERSHIP, after all, gravitates to the fittest. And Service must ever be the measure of that fitness. When a man ceases to serve his community, his fellow-men, his value is lost. So it is with motor cars.

In one of several automobile classes the Maxwell aims and always has aimed to give that full measure of service which shall proclaim it a leader. Every effort of our organization has been toward that end.

Economy, efficiency, beauty and comfort—these are the qualities dignified by an inbuilt honor, to which Maxwell service is sequel. And these are the qualities that have set the Maxwell apart, and, in its class, marked it with the seal of distinction.

Maxwell Motor Cars are honest, worthy products. They are made by folks who have not attained absolute perfection, but who strive earnestly to maintain the eminence and good will they have earned.

EDGAR GARAGE COMPANY

Here Is Where the Smith Form-A-Trucks Are Being Assembled

W T EDGAR

That the Edgar Garage has been selected by the Smith Form-a-Truck Company as the most accessible and the best equipped place in which to have its trucks assembled, is a well deserved tribute to the wonderful success which has come to W T Edgar in the short space of time he has been established in the garage business, at 66 Fairlie street, corner of James

It was Mr. Edgar's ambition when he established himself, about ninety days ago, to build up in this city a garage "of a different kind"—a garage in which real, efficient service was offered—where every equipment and accommodation could be tendered the automobile owner who needed the service of a garage—where there was ample room for storage purposes, with plenty of light and sanitary arrangements—and where automobile owners could be assured of the services of the most expert workmen in the country. That Mr. Edgar has succeeded in his ambition is amply attested by his hundreds of satisfied customers. They are his best advertisements. They are given even more than they expect or bargain for when they visit his place, either for the simple matter of storage or for any kind of repair work. They have been talking about his garage—talking favorably about it—and that is the whole secret of his success.

Consequently, when the Smith Form-a-Truck Company came into the city, with its well advertised product, its officers naturally looked for a place big enough, reliable enough, and with ample equipment to take care of the large number of orders it is going to turn out from this point. There was but one answer—Edgar's Garage.

Mr. Edgar's many automobile friends are congratulating him, not only on the splendid success he is making in the garage line, but in having just made so splendid an creditable a connection with the big truck company.

$350 and a Ford makes this guaranteed One Ton Truck Smith Form-a-Truck Cheapest hauling cost in the world

Immediate delivery guaranteed

Attachment complete, $350 f. o. b. Chicago, Ill.

$9,000,000 sold in last 90 Days

THE SMITH FORM-A-TRUCK UPSETS ALL previous standards of Motor Truck success. At least 40% of the 128,000 motor trucks to be built for 1916 will be Smith Form-a-Trucks.

SHIPMENTS AS HIGH AS $43,000 WORTH HAVE been made in a single day, to one sales territory—one dealer alone. And there are over a thousand Smith Form-a-Truck dealers now—who have bought $9,000,000 worth in the last 90 days. It is the most sensational success in the history of motor truck building—because it is the most practical—the most economical—the most efficient.

ORDERS IN SIGHT ALREADY SHOW THAT A substantial percentage of our total production of 50,000 jobs for this year will be sold in the Atlanta territory. Certainly, no truck is more ideally adapted for Southern roads and conditions than the Smith Form-a-Truck.

THIS IS WHY THE MOST EXACTING BUYERS—the biggest corporations—the shrewdest purchasing agents—those who know hauling costs down to the fraction of a penny, are literally swamping us with orders.

YOU KNOW THE FORD IS THE WORLD'S unbeatable wonder car for all-round performance and low cost of operation. You don't dispute that for a moment.

YOU ARE NOW DOUBTLESS USING FORDS in great numbers for your salesmen, just as all concerns are doing who make it a point to get the most for their money. ADD TO THIS UNPARALLELED FORD PERFORMANCE and matchless economy, the indestructible Smith Form-a-Truck Attachment, that carries 90% of the "dead weight" load, relieving the front end of the Ford of most of the present strain, and you have a guaranteed one-ton truck that will give you 365-day-in-the-year-service at half the usual first cost and half the cost of upkeep and operation.

THESE ARE BIG STATEMENTS, BUT WE CAN prove them. It is by proving them that we sell Smith Form-a-Trucks, and every time we are asked to prove, we get the business.

THE SMITH FORM-A-TRUCK CONSTRUCTION is standard and best approved throughout. It is honestly built of the best procurable materials—it is endorsed by engineers everywhere, as the best in design—and the workmanship is recognized as the very best.

THE SMITH FORM-A-TRUCK ATTACHMENT is simplicity itself. It telescopes over, fits perfectly, and is bolted securely to the entire length of the steel frame of any old or new Ford Car.

THIS DOUBLE CO... TRUCTION, REINFORCED by side-frame members and sway braces, gives the Smith Form-a-Truck the strength of trucks designed to carry two tons and over.

THE SMITH FORM-A-TRUCK ATTACHMENT comes complete. We furnish you everything—no other parts are required. Any old or new Ford will do and no skilled workmanship is necessary. Any two men in a few hours can complete the job. Bring in your Ford and we will have the truck attachment on and ready for the body almost while you wait—and any one of our dealers can give you the same service.

THE SMITH FORM-A-TRUCK ATTACHMENT is 14 feet long. It accommodates any standard or special 9-foot roomy loading body. The wheels are of standard truck construction, with solid Firestone truck tires. There is a specially designed heavy steel axle and spring and double chain drive—and the wonderful time-tested Ford rear axle becomes the jackshaft of the truck without a single change or an additional penny of expense.

THE SPEED ABILITY OF THE SMITH FORM-A-Truck is wonderful—as high as 12 to 15 miles per hour over roads in an average condition—the tire economy is also remarkable, the pneumatic front tires carry less weight with the Smith Form-a-Truck fully loaded than when used on a Ford with a touring car body. The solid tires on the rear wheels will cut your tire cost down to the lowest possible figure—6,000 to 8,000 miles per set is the demonstrated average FIFTY MILES A DAY, CARRYING FULL loads, is maintained by many users with a gasoline cost of only 75 cents. From 12 to 20 miles per gallon of gasoline is the demonstrated average.

HERE ARE THE ECONOMY FEATURES. Lower man-day charges in delivery and shipping departments, because of frequent returns to loading station. Lower ton-mile haulage, because every cent of operating cost is doing its whole value in real work. Lower cost on insurance, because the original investment is lower. Lower overhead in delivery, because of greater economy in fuel, tires and upkeep.

IF YOUR HAULING IS COSTING YOU TOO much, you want to remedy it, don't you?

TELL US YOUR HAULING PROBLEMS, AND our company's transportation engineers will show you where the Smith Form-a-Truck will save you money and how much. This will incur absolutely no obligation on your part. So put it up to us. Call, telephone or write TODAY. The Woman's World

By ISMA DOOLY

Years ago—some time in the nineteenth century—when men had the first craze for organization and began to settle their difficulties with the aid of a book called "Parliamentary Law," and subsequently through newspaper cards and controversies, there was the element of enterprising citizens called the "finers" (Joiners). This name came to them because of their willingness to join any organization which sprang up, especially if there were the usual number of offices to fill. Beside the perquisites office-holding afforded, there was a chance to be a delegate and go to the headquarters meeting generally bid for them, as now, by the city sending the best boosters.

The professional "finer" was democratic in the extension of his interests and he "finned" the church as flippantly as he would. He seriously exposed the organized cause of ward politics. If he succeeded in the cause of politics he made a profession of "finning," and the world became full of them. One in full of them has only to look on in any community, big or little, to find the man who belongs to the "finer" profession, or more properly speaking now, the profession of politics in their lower acceptance. Sometimes it is only for empty honors these men work the hardest, and they are given the opportunity for publicity and impress the people who are drawn into the organization which is supported by a "per capita" assessment. The "per capita" is religiously collected because it entitles the member to perform that sacred and almost exclusively masculine right just so often to bad use.

THE PURPOSES.

The "organization purposes" mean, as a rule, the payoff of the organizing officer who goes about with the "message" which is well thought out and worded to catch the "finers" who are organized into branches, chapters, etc. The "per capita" is collected for purposes also cover expenses for banquets given national officers or head celebrities who tour the country for the cause; also to buy flowers for the desks of the board, or handsome badges and fire carriages for town parades when all organized bodies turn out.

Not the "finers" as a rule are much on sacred grounds. They rather do check up embarrassingly often on the matter of funds, do require some ethical procedure as to the purposes of organization, and limit membership to those they regard themselves in public view. The "finers" are not lacking in system, because their organization is weak, for now the "finers" have firms. These firms have not placarded offices, and wear signs, "Wiggins, Wiggins, Wiggins." No, they do their business by unwritten laws of ethics, and a system of high signs.

For instance, Mr. Stiggins is on a very important board (for boards and directorships are very much sought by some men) in some semi-civic, semi-philanthropic, or semi-social organization. "The message" of the board, or gets mad about something and resigns. Even before the secretary can be instructed to send the resolutions of regret to the family of the deceased, Stiggins has nominated his friend and fellow-citizen, Mr. Wiggins, for the place on the board.

THE FIRM.

Then and there you are not only informed of the cardinal virtues of Wiggins, but you have to hear of the petty virtues—skin to (mayhap) he never served in the army, never trumped his partner's trick, and as a little boy was never discovered maltreating his sister's dog. Then this active unwritten firm looks after the sons-in-law, and even gets the ear of the courts.

The incident is related of a certain famous case in the courts of a state, not far away (where angels dwell), when many attorneys able and unable were engaged in some angle of the case. When preparations were being made for the opening of the "legal battle," one young man seemed to never mind the other, and was rushing about before the calmer members of the bar assembled. "Who is that fellow?" asked one of the able lawyers. "Another," looked vacantly toward the ceiling, stroked his chin where there never have been chin whiskers, and replied, "Just somebody's son-in-law, I suppose."

gins, the juniors always put forward as worthy recipients of unworthy receiverships.

Now, fortunately the firm of Stiggins & Wiggins, Juniors, do not go on forever in the organization of the civic associations and boards. When they exhaust the perquisites thereof, they drop out and become the Mellin's food of local politics. They nourish the factional forces, and precipitate frequently very undesirable conditions. But like all flesh produced by starchy substances, they lose strength, and the last of the firm of the finers is they have been steam-rolled like battercakes by new forces—for the believe people are fickle in their loves and in their hatreds.—(Read John Galsworthy's little play, "The Mob.")

THE WOMEN FINERS—WHAT OF THEM?

And now comes the period of the Women "Finers."

Dangers are threatening them. They are the daughters of the same parentage which produced the men "finers." They have the same tastes and inclinations. They like to hold office, run for it, lobby for it, and are just as cute about some things as the men. And they have learned to filibuster in their meetings. They know how to get up at a meeting, raise a question that will take away from the main issue, and they can as innocently inject a prejudice that will catch the prejudices of a meeting as any member of the firm of Wiggins & Stiggins can. They go to an out-of-town meeting that is a precedent, and never having any actual work to report never bother the professional delegate. Sometimes her expenses are paid, and that comes out of the general fund made by her capital assessments, and comes under the head of "organization purposes." If she can go as president of the organization in her section, all the better. They go to the more exclusive official social affairs of the meetings which must invite invitations to officers and delegates with no room frequently for the alternates who have just as pretty gowns and just as smart hats as they.

And then when the professional delegate comes home she brings the "message" of the big meeting to those who did not go, but who have made up their minds to help them. They are going next year themselves. The message speaks of the great and representative body that was present. It tells especially where literature pertaining to the cause was distributed. They had for just a small extra assessment per capita on the part of the organization. The report deals extensively with the royal hospitality of the town where the big meeting held, and especially mention with pride that attentions were shown her just because she was from Georgia—and she here mentions "our own Ty Cobb." I am glad she does, for he always stands to his business and knows his business.

THE SERIOUS SIDE.

The woman's organization has come as a new factor in civilization. It has brought women collectively into every great movement which concerns the world at large. It is because the woman's organization is so broad and so general that it ought to be protected from those who would use it, and it needs protection right now from many dangers which threaten it.

It shall not go into the petty discussions of the office-seeking woman, of the Mrs. Malaprop, and of that patronizing member who opposed the plan of helping the oppressed slaves by organizing her twenty times over, and collecting per capita dues for "organization purposes," but I do believe women must awake to the dignity of their organization. They must see to it that they are not dwarfed by too many organizations, and not used to promote enterprising business institutions.

Women have not yet the opportunity men's organizations have, of letting their professions be protected from the complexities of local politics. They have not that protection yet, and they must just carry in their organization the office-seeking member, and the patronizing member who have inherited a knowledge of how to quibble about that wonderful something, "parliamentary law," about which I cry out as did the great statesmen about liberty, and the patriot about what he thought of him. He called him by all the names he deserved to be called by, and was about to raise the riding whip, when the dandy said "Yes, sir, I want to tell you something, yes, sir, just got to tell you something. You know, boss, I see wants to tell you I like you because you see how many crimes (and how much ignorance) is committed in this name!"

The finers must stay to lobby and to filibuster, and even in the good work organization which is proving its purposes by active work it can point to women who have not seen to it that they encourage more organization which comes only to duplicate the effort of the tried one.

The origin of limited means must be protected. The multiplicity of organizations is difficult to her. She wants to join in any welfare movement which is launched that the other women are in. She sees them, and she sees she is launched that the right thing. She sees they do not stop to question whether they were not organizing two bodies working for the same end, and she thinks, "Why should I?"

DANGER.

To illustrate that great expense attached to so many and new organizations, I recall that about two years ago two lady organizers came to Atlanta to do a special line of uplift work which was of common interest to women. They were informed by leading women on their arrival that that work was being done in Atlanta and in the state. They were shown that not merely committees had been appointed, and officers elected, etc., but that actual work was being done in that direction. But that did not satisfy them. They were determined their particular little school of uplift was the very best, and with little effort they got a following. When they had the advice he gave me. Many things he said to me have proven a great inspiration," said Mr. Barrett. "He had wisdom, and yet all the buoyancy of youth. I recall that the incident of his coming to Atlanta, and Mrs. Grady turned her head to speak to a guest. As she did, Mr. Grady asked his little son, who sat next to him, "Henry, want some potatoes?" The youngster's eyes beamed with mischief as he held his plate not flat but sideways. Mr. Grady took the spoon full of potatoes and aimed it at the center of the plate where it remained, greatly to the joy of the young man. Mrs. Grady looked in that direction and interrupted any further service of the kind.

"And the name of Grady will enthrone any audience now and inspire interest as few other names can," continued Mr. Barrett.

"A few weeks ago at a dinner given by Doctor Nicholas Murray Butler, of Columbia University, the name of Grady was mentioned. Something he said was noted, and the incident of his famous speech at the New England dinner recalled. In the company was a man who had reported the banquet and the speech for one of the leading New York papers of the time, and he told us over again the story of the occasion.

"The banquet speakers were beginning to lose the hold they had on their audience, the ladies were beginning to leave the boxes, and the guests were stirring restlessly when Mr. Grady was introduced. He was very white when he arose, and his voice was not at first impressive. He did not seem to be making any very great effort, and yet the ladies in the boxes hesitated to see who it was, and soon to take their seats again. Men leaned forward a trifle, and finally there came that silence which only the human voice can bring to big assemblies. Then as if by magic every word the speaker uttered drew his audience nearer to him. His climate became more thrilling the reporters destroyed the lead to their banquet stories, and men and women alike stood as one in a frenzied enthusiasm when the great southerner bowed in concluding his message.

Well Known Remedy Relieves Chronic Case

Important to Dispose of Waste from the Stomach With Regularity.

People frequently attribute to failure of the digestive organs conditions that are primarily due to inactive bowels, and apply remedies that from their very nature are more apt to aggravate than to relieve the disorder.

When the bowels act regularly the stomach is in better shape to perform its allotted tasks and can usually be depended upon. To keep the bowels in condition there is no more effective remedy than the combination of simple laxative herbs known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is sold in drug stores for fifty cents a bottle.

Dr. Caldwell has prescribed this remedy in his practice for over a quarter of a century and it is today the standard household remedy in thousands of homes Mr. Thos. DeLoach, with the Department of the Interior, Office of Indian Affairs, at Washington, wrote Dr. Caldwell recently that "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the best laxative I have any knowledge of and the cleaning up guaranteed by its use relieves every organ."

A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin should be on hand in every home for use when needed. A trial bottle, free of charge, can be obtained by writing to Dr. B. Caldwell, 434 Washington St. Monticello Ill.

In Treating Tuberculosis

It should be remembered that one of the aids to relief is found in abundance of fresh air—day and night—the largest possible freedom from overexertion and well-kept, pure food.

Attention to these should do much toward arresting the progress of the malady, but in many cases there is need for extra help. Where nature has to work with a weakened body her power is limited. Before she can do her best, there must be a return to normality of functions.

Under such circumstances, try Eckman's Alternative, which has been used with large benefit by many sufferers from tuberculosis. In numerous cases it has helped to bring about recovery.

And since it contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, its use is not attended with danger. Ask your druggist or direct.

SAYS WE BECOME CRANKS ON HOT WATER DRINKING

Hopes every man and woman adopts this splendid morning habit.

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried, some days headachy, dull and unstrung, some days really incapacitated illness?

If we all would practice inside bathing, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of thousands of half-sick, anaemic-looking souls with peevish, muggy complexions, we should see cheeks of happy, healthy, rosy-cheeked people everywhere. The reason is that the human system does not rid itself each day of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living. For every ounce of food and drink taken into the system, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out, else it ferments and forms poisonous poisons which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clean the ash-tray from the furnace each day before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clear the waste organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body toxins. Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of washing out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the indigestible material, waste, sour bile and toxins, thus cleansing and refreshing and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the system.

Millions of people who had their turn at constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, nervous headache, and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning inside bath. A quarter of a glass of hot water, taken each day, not cost much at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate to anyone, its cleansing, sweetening and refreshing effect upon the system.—(Adv.)

BIG CENTRAL SCHOOL FAVORED BY WHITE

Dr. J. C. White, member of the city council, tells a very good story he heard Private John Allen tell at a banquet in a central west city. The banquet was given by prominent citizens to a group of railroad officials and magistrates, whom the citizens desired to impress with the greatness of their city as a railroad center. At the banquet, a gentleman who had been one of the planks of his platform to point out the inequities of railroads rather than their factorship in national prosperity, began to speak. He had been asked to address the general inquiries of railroad systems, but he even told what he thought of certain railroads and the men who were at the helm of them. He barely got through his remarks, and his opinions that the hosts of the banquet were embarrassed, and the guests of honor were wishing for the next feature of the program, when John Allen, a prominent citizen, stepped forward and said, "I have a story to tell you, a story that I have heard told to me by a man who wanted a well dug. A ducky in the vicinity applied for the job, and after having told what an expert well digger he was, stated what his price would be. He said he could begin work on the well the next morning.

However, when the ducky came the next morning it was only to explain that he had to go to the city, for his wife was sick and that if his employer would advance him a dollar to buy medicine, he could look after his family, and the next day set to work digging. The next day the ducky reported again with the hard luck story of continued illness in the family and the need of another dollar. This was repeated for several days, the farmer looking patient more surely each time. Finally the fifth day the ducky did not come at all and the farmer hitched up his buggy, armed himself with a large buggy whip, and set out to find the culprit.

He met him in the middle of the highway, jumped out of his buggy and with all the vigor of the Mississippi gentleman, he began to thrash the ducky. He thought of him. He called him by all the names he deserved to be called by, and was about to raise the riding whip, when the ducky said "Yes, sir, I want to tell you something, yes, sir, just got to tell you something. You know, boss, I see wants to tell you I like you because you see how many crimes (and how much ignorance) is committed in this name!"

As incongruous as it may seem, this story kept recurring to me Monday evening when I heard the interesting address of Leonard Leibling, editor of The Musical Courier, when he told the truth about American cities and music, not leaving out Atlanta.

It is not believe he is as artistic as we think," said an Atlanta lady present on the charming occasion, "for he seems so very human!"

I shall not raise the question of whether or not very artistic people are artistic, but I do believe that the human qualities, the critics and editors and more thoughtful people who heard him can do that, but I do see the value of the man who tells us the truth about ourselves.

The most thoughtful of Americans are beginning to realize that too much self-satisfaction is not a factor in higher civilization, and that patriotism does not prohibit people seeing themselves easily as they are. The American who studies his country and the people of it, who sees where the weaknesses are and where reconstruction should begin, and the people of the world who is needed. He has to know a thing or two before he can do it. He must see what old-world civilization has meant; what we have drawn from it; what we have still to draw from it before he can begin to draw from the well of the new world, and make us see it.

We must bear with the one of our own who knows and can tell us, whether he is the young editor of The Musical Courier, or the old editor of the Atlanta Constitution, or the American citizen who sees the ideal of whatever he strives for, reaches for and is helping others to reach with him.

AN OLD STORY RETOLD.

John Barrett, director general of the Pan-American union, with headquarters in Washington, D. C., spent Tuesday night in this city with Mrs. M. Mrs. Sanders McDaniel, en route to Montgomery and New Orleans. Having luncheon with a party of friends, Mr. Barrett then his first visit to Atlanta when his first acquaintance was the late Henry W. GERMAN ASSAULT CHECKED BY FIRE OF FRENCH GUNS

Crown Prince's Troops Unable to Follow Up Their Success in Gaining Foot-hold in Vaux Village.

INTENSE BOMBARDMENT ON THE VERDUN FRONT

Berlin Claims That the Russians Lost 140,000 Men in Their Recent Offensive, and That Nothing Was Accomplished.

London April 1.—An attempt by the Germans to follow up their success in obtaining a foothold in the village of Vaux by an infantry attack between Vaux and Fort Douaumont has failed. Preparation for the attack was made by a violent artillery bombardment. The French position of fire stopped the infantry assault early, says the Associated Press.

After a period of bad weather fighting has resumed on the Aisne front. The Russian attack is mostly confined to an artillery bombardment. Berlin summarizes the recent Russian offensive as barren of results for Emperor Nicholas' forces while the Russian casualties are estimated to have been at least 140,000. More than 600,000 men were engaged on the Russian side according to Berlin, and the expenditure of ammunition was declared to have been on an unprecedented scale for the eastern front.

GERMANS STOPPED BY FRENCH FIRE

Paris April 1.—The Germans continued their intense bombardment of the French positions between Avocourt and Malancourt today. A heavy bombardment also was carried out to the east of the Meuse. This was followed by a German attack between Douaumont and Vaux, which according to the German press was repulsed by the French.

In the Argonne our batteries are working in the north of Latreux and La Ferté. The enemy is attacking the enemy camps and is burning part of the chappis wood.

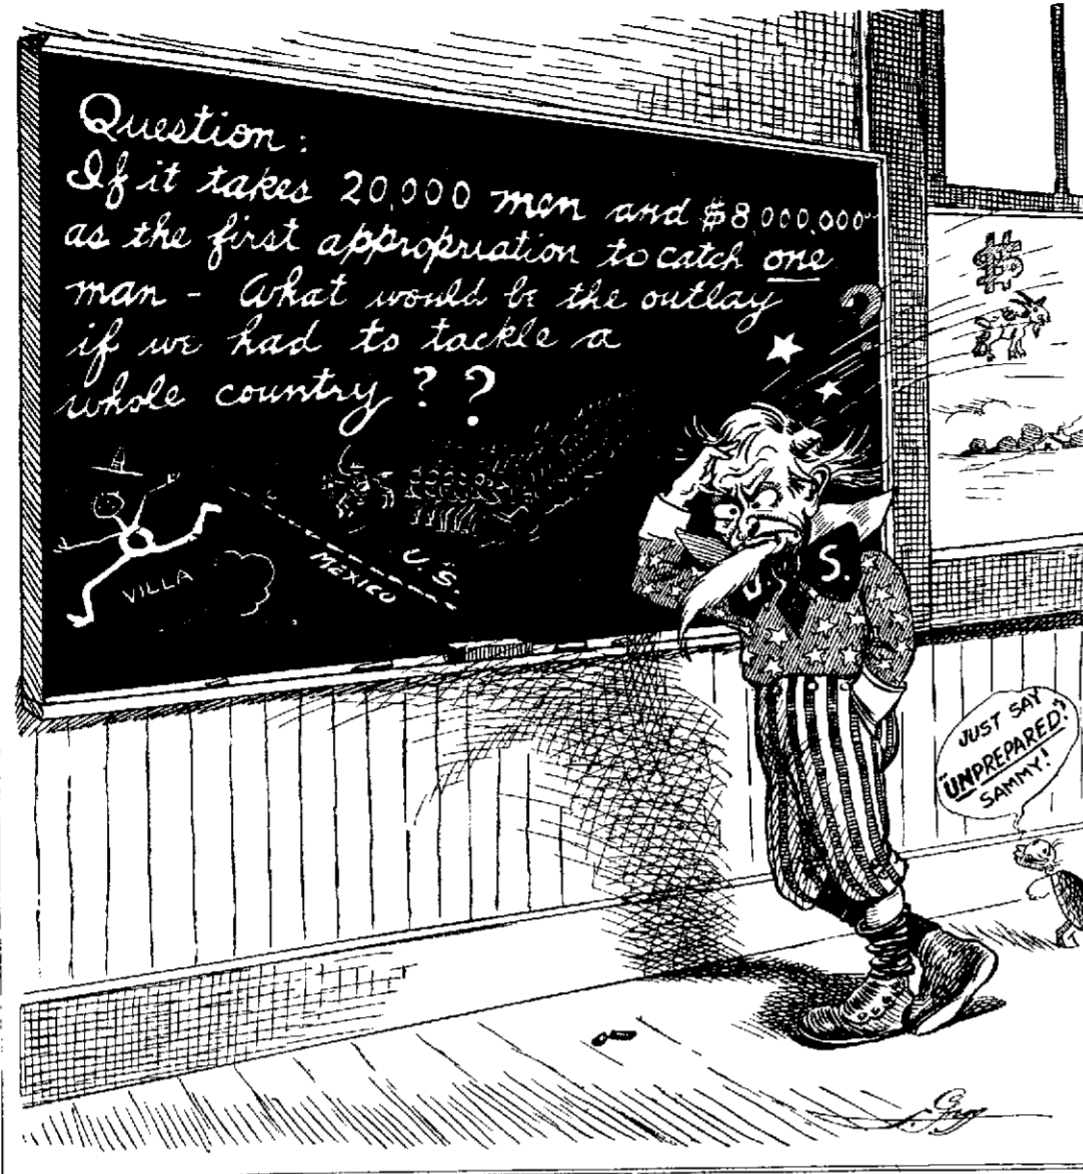

West of the Meuse the bombardment has been intense against positions between Avocourt and Malancourt.

In the east of the Meuse a quiet front was maintained. In the afternoon a German attack on the village of Vaux was completely stopped by our fire.

In the Argonne district we have detected a destructive fire on the high-ways and railroad lines of the enemy to the north of Haute Chaux.

West of the Meuse there has been an intermittent bombardment in the

SEGREGATION LAW FOR CITY PLANNED

Councilman Renfro's Ordinance Will Differ in Detail From One Declared Unconstitutional in 1915.

Councilman J. N. Renfro of the First ward has prepared an ordinance for the segregation of the races in the different wards of the city and will introduce it into council on Monday for its first reading.

The caption of the ordinance reads as follows: An ordinance to prevent conflict and ill feeling between the white and colored races in the city of Atlanta and to preserve the public peace and promote the general welfare by providing for the segregation of the races in the different wards of the city.

The ordinance is drawn to take the place of the one passed by council in 1914 and introduced by councilman Little Ashley making similar provisions for segregation in the city.

In declaring the ordinance unconstitutional the court rendered the opinion that it was seeking to deprive citizens of the right of opening and trading in property without due process of law.

The same ordinance or ordinances drawn from and based on the one introduced by Councilman Ashley has been held unconstitutional in other states.

North of the river Aisne there has been considerable activity on the part of the opposing artillery forces in the vicinity of Moulin-sous-levent and Fontenoy.

The Argonne district we have detected a destructive fire on the high-ways and railroad lines of the enemy to the north of Haute Chaux.

West of the Meuse there has been an intermittent bombardment in the

ASKS THE COMMITTEE TO REJECT SUGGESTION

Announces He Will State His Position on Race for Governor After Meeting of Democratic Committee in Macon.

Although Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey has not yet made clear whether or not he intends to run for governor he has at least made it clear in a statement authorized last night that he has not foregone the idea of running and that he will make known his intentions in this direction during the week immediately following May 3 when the state democratic executive committee meets in Macon and fixes colors for the state primary.

In his statement Mr. Dorsey expressed himself as opposed to any rules which the committee might fix looking to dividing the white voters of the state.

What action the committee may take at that time, he said, will in no way affect his decision to run or not to run for governor.

The last information from General Punston was that General Gavira was waiting for instructions from General Carranza, who agreed to the arrangement several days ago, to put it into actual effect.

State and war department officials reiterated tonight their intention to await results of a fair trial of the tenative arrangements for Carranza's return for further concessions to secure shipment of supplies. The question whether Carranza should be furnished guards or whether the Carranza government should supply such protection for supply shipments is considered a possible factor in the delay. Some officials believe the protocol will be arranged before actual shipment can be begun.

The possibility that the American troops may contract fever which is epidemic upon the Grand plateau of Mexico caused the war department to issue a special bulletin today warning the troops to guard against infection. The bulletin says the soldiers should observe the closest attention to their personal cleanliness and under no circumstances occupy native unfurnished houses or use native clothing or bedding.

VILLA IS TRAPPED. PERSHING THINKS

San Antonio, Texas, April 1.—Villa is dead at the battle of Minaca, according to General Pershing today, in a report to General Punston. The report was received in the headquarters for miles along the routes taken by the Villa himself was believed to be northeast of Guerrero, but the opinion that he was killed in the escape of his detachments from four segments of the route was held by him. He had been reported as being in the mountains of the Sierra Madre, but the operations of the troops in that region had been reported as being in the light of the situation.

General Pershing's report was dated March 31. It was written and dated yesterday but it was not until today that it was received. It was written at San Antonio, Texas, and it was not until today that it was received. It was written at San Antonio, Texas, and it was not until today that it was received.

RIDING MERCILESSLY ON TRAIL OF VILLA

Columbus, N. M., April 1.—Blindly following four hundred American troops under Colonel Dood are making desperate efforts to capture or wipe out the remnants of Pancho Villa's army. The troops were ordered to ride on the road north of Casas Grandes and on that part extending southward toward San Juan. The road is in better condition than in the north. It also called attention to the fact that the aeroplanes are equipped with engines of low power.

The report from Chihuahua that Villa had been captured at Minaca only a few miles south of Guerrero was unconfirmed. It was reported that there was no position to believe that General Punston was in control of the trail of the report that Villa was badly wounded prior to the fight at Guerrero and it was believed that his escape was now highly improbable.

VILLA MURDERED FIVE FOREIGNERS

El Paso, Texas, April 1.—The story of the murder of five Americans and an Englishman at Minaca was brought here today by Americans arriving from Chihuahua city and was accepted as authentic by federal officials.

The bandits victims were Benjamin Snell, Dr. A. T. Still, Lee Lindsey, American and Donald McGregor, also known as Bruce, a British subject, and two other Americans, Henry Aikin and Frank Woods, were in Minaca at the time but their fate has not been determined. The news was brought to Chihuahua city by J. H. Locke, the only American known to have escaped the massacre.

GERMAN ASSAULT CHECKED BY FRENCH

Region of Malancourt but without any infantry engagements.

East of the Meuse the bombardment became exceedingly violent. Yesterday evening and last night along the sector between the wood south of Haudremont and the region of Vaux. Against this latter point the attacks in which large numbers of men took part. The first of a break in the line near Haudremont from both the north and the south at the same time was checked by our curtain of fire and the fire of our infantry before it could get as far as our line.

GREAT RUSS LOSSES REPORTED BY BERLIN

Berlin, April 1.—(By Telegram to Sayville.)—Russian casualties in the recent offensive on the northern part of the line were not less than 140,000 men, the German war office estimated today.

The German statement refers only in detail to the fighting about Yandun, mentioning only artillery duels there and at other points.

Villa in Secret Hiding Place.

Other information indicated however, that there is still much doubt as to whether the bandit chieftain was with his forces during the engagement. One report given much credence was that Villa sustained the wounds which broke his leg and shattered his hip bone in the attack made on the Carranza garrison at the town of Guerrero March 27 and that the leader was carried away by a few chosen followers in a jolting wagon to a secret hiding place in the wilderness around Guerrero.

Although the pursuit of the Americans is a new experience for Villa, one guerrilla warfare army men here are not inclined to minimize the task before Colonel Dood.

The Guerrero district in which Villa, with a price on his head was able for eight years to escape capture by the army, is a region of rugged mountains and does in caves, canyons and almost impassable mountain trails, all heavily wooded and thick with brush. It is a region of the most isolated vegetation in the United States and the number of the bandit has the largest number of friends.

News of Capture Expected

Scores of civilians and soldiers gathered around the army wireless station spread the news that the bandit had been captured and was being brought to Columbus. Some suggested that it would be unwise to bring him across the border because of high febrile heat of this settlement was expressed at a sale of thirty four Villa mounts captured in the mountains of the Sierra Madre. The news was spread by the bandits who had owned the animals. The lives of the animals and the men who had been in a good one were looked after and aroused no response. The prices obtained for a similar kind of animals ranged from $40 to $20 and the best horses captured the others being in such condition that it was necessary for the quartermaster's department here that it was no information was given to the chase for Villa was nearing an end. In fact three truck trains carrying supplies and equipment of a nature such as would indicate at least that the end of the chase is not clearly in sight. Left for the front.

One Gleam of Light.

The one gleam of light in the dark story is the probability that Villa's activities in what enabled Colonel Dood to deliver his crushing blow at San Geronimo ranch two days after the crime of Minaca, and that the brigands had high hopes that the brigands raised are numbered.

Dr. Still, one of Villa's victims at Minaca, with from New Orleans and has lived for some years in Mexico. Donald McGregor was a newspaper man who worked in Denver, Chicago and other cities. Nothing is known here of who worked in the Carranza garrison. Snell, one of the Villa's victims, came from Kansas City, where he is understood to have left a wife and two children. Locke's escape was due to the fact that he was absent from Minaca at the time of Villa's arrival. He was going toward the town when he heard of the escape and hid in the brush. Soon after he saw Villa himself at their head town with Villa himself at their head town with Villa himself at their head town.

Villa Shot in Raid

It was in the raid on Guerrero last Monday that Villa was wounded being shot in the knee according to a message received today by General Gavira at Juarez from General Gutierrez telegraphing from Chihuahua. Gutierrez had asked for further information about Colonel Dood's battle working badly on the southern loop and he had only the bare details of what had been accomplished. Gutierrez received said that Villa broke into Guerrero at 3 o'clock Monday morning in heavy street fighting. A number were killed on both sides. Then the Villa forces already captured a large number of men and children were wounded in the knee. Gutierrez City in Juarez today said that a freight train carrying supplies and equipment of a nature such as would indicate at least that the end of the chase is not clearly in sight. Re,—the new "Barefoot" Rubber— in GOODRICH Tires

Of course, it is "not pure Rubber" (no Tire is). Of course it is "only an Alloy" (every Tire is). But this Alloy resembles the pigments used by a certain world-famous Artist, which he admitted, on inquiry, were "mixed with Brains."

It took some 47 years of Rubber-Manufacturing Experience to produce this "mere Alloy."

It took the best efforts of the largest, and ablest, Research Department possessed by any Rubber Factory in America to develop it.

But,—it was worth all the time, effort, and skill, required to develop it.

Because, it has done for Goodrich Rubber what certain other marvellous Alloys have done for Steel and Bronze,—i. e., multiplied its EFFICIENCY for the purpose intended.

And, it has done this without increasing the cost of Goodrich Tires to Consumers.

FIRST we called it "Hyper-Rubber," which it is of course. But, one of its most valuable characteristics, for Tire (and Shoe) purposes, is its CLING quality—its tenacious grip on smooth and slippery surfaces.

Through that it gives its maximum Traction with a minimum of Friction.

When you put on the Brakes to stop the Car, or throw in the Clutch to start the Car, the Tires made of this Goodrich Rubber Alloy instead of grinding against the ground for Traction, CLING to it, as your bare foot would cling to a slippery floor.

That's why we've finally christened it, and trade-marked it, as "Barefoot" Rubber.

Get a sliver of it, at any Goodrich Branch, and you'll find it stretch almost as much, and return to shape almost as instantly, as a pure Rubber band.

Weight a Goodrich "Barefoot" Tire of any size against the corresponding size of other makes of Tire, and you'll find it many pounds lighter, though many "Miles" stronger.

Drive it, and you'll find in Goodrich "Barefoot" Tires a line-ness, a quick response to power, a tenacity of traction,—and all this with a Mileage capacity which will surprise and delight you.

WE developed this "Barefoot Rubber" primarily for use in our now famous "Silvertown Cord" Tire which, this year, showed such marvellous ENDURANCE on the Race Track, at over 100 Miles per hour.

But, since we cannot yet supply the demand for "Silvertown Cord" Tires, until three times as much special machinery for its manufacture can be constructed and installed, we decided to use this wonderful "Barefoot" RUBBER Alloy in all Goodrich FABRIC Tires, for 1916.

We also make it into Goodrich Inner Tubes,—Goodrich Motor-Cycle Tires,—Goodrich Truck Tires,—Goodrich Bicycle Tires,—Goodrich Rubber Boots, Overshoes, Soles and Heels, as well as into Silvertown Cord Tires.

Because,—in all of these its characteristics of "Cling,—Spring,—Stretch,—Strength,—and Lightness" are first requisites.

Now, compare GOODRICH Fair-List prices with prices you are quoted for same size Tires of other Brands, that have not the wonderful Resilience and Cling-quality of this new "Barefoot Rubber," which can be had in no other Tires than those made by—

THE nineteen-sixteen touring season is now at hand. To the thousands who own motor cars this is the season of keenest anticipation, and to the tens of thousands who do not own motor cars it should be the season for planning a different and better spring and summer than they ever enjoyed before. The myriad charms and delights of the great outdoors cannot be enjoyed without a motor car. For the wives and mothers who have been kept indoors by the rigors of winter, and for the children long confined in the school rooms the season now at hand brings compensations—if there is a motor car with which the family may take advantage of them. The Buick

Valve-in-Head, six-cylinder, touring car pictured above is the ideal possession for the family. It is economical in first cost and in maintenance, beautiful to look upon, sturdy, dependable and durable. It has a reputation and prestige gained in years of performance. It involves no new or untried principles of engineering or manufacture. It is a tried and proven motor car. The demand for these cars always exceeded the number of them available, and only those who make their reservations early will be able to obtain their Buick without waiting. In past seasons those who failed to take this precaution had many reasons to regret it later on.

The Atlanta Home of Buick Cars

The Buick building, on the corner of Peachtree and Harris Streets, is the largest and most completely equipped plant in the entire south, devoted exclusively to the sale and service of any one motor car.

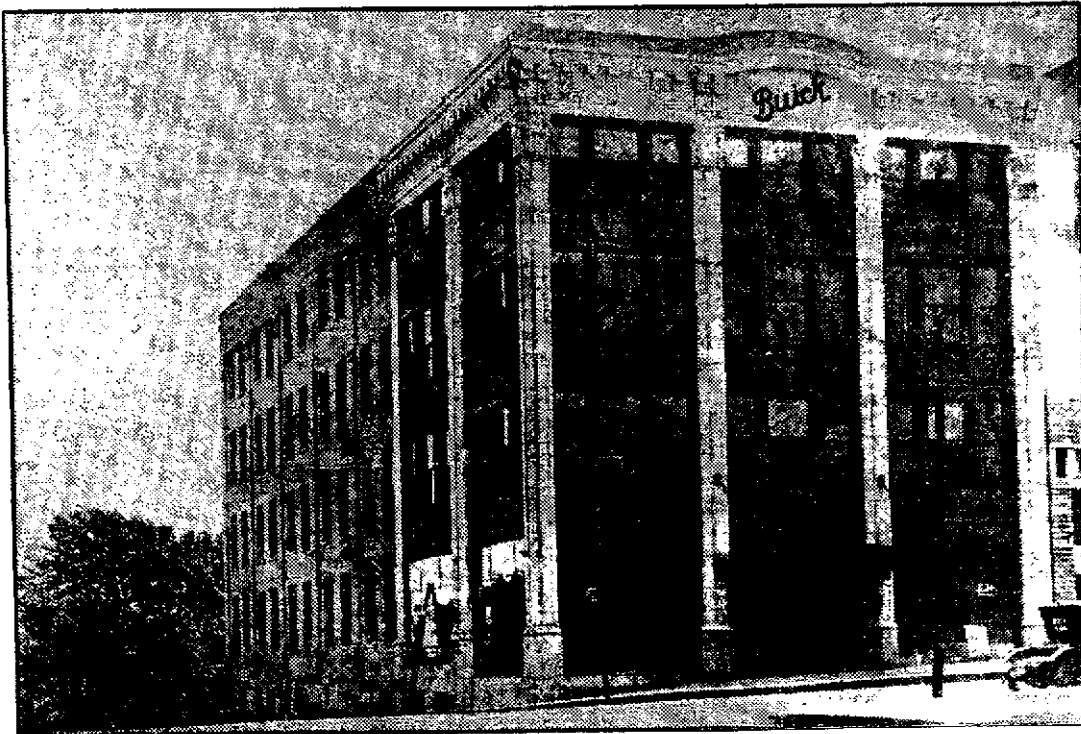

Five floors—the garage, entrance on Harris Street, is in charge of Mr. Frank Baxter, who is supported by an efficient corps of men—and they are at all times at the service of Buick drivers. The office and salesroom take up the entire first floor of this building. A large office force is necessary to handle the several million dollars' worth of business which is done each year by the Buick Branch and under the direct supervision of the General Manager, Mr. Geo. D. McCutcheon, this clerical staff is kept up to the highest point of efficiency and accuracy.

The salesroom just in front of the office is divided off into five compartments, consisting of three Sales Departments, Ladies' Writing Room, Rest Room, Telephone Exchange and Sample Room, where a full line of cars are on display at all times. The Sales Departments consisting of three divisions, Division A, Mr. Byron H. King, Sales Manager, covers the territory of South Georgia, Florida and South Carolina. Division B is under the management of Mr. Benj. F. Ulmer, covering the territory of North Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee. Division C covers Atlanta and surrounding territory. Mr. Wm. H. Blodgett is Sales Manager of this Division and is assisted by Mr. Waldo J. Keller, former manager of the Capital City Club; Mr. Wm. P. Ellsworth, formerly manager Atlanta Automobile Exchange; Mr. A. E. Hardeman, and Mr. Leonard R. Booth.

The second floor is confined entirely to the handling of service parts. This division, under the management of Mr. J. R. Dunn, is, strictly speaking, a public service proposition. The parts are kept on hand for every model of Buick cars for the convenience of Buick customers. Few people realize what it means to keep a complete stock of parts for the thousands of old and new Buick cars which are running over our southern roads. Tens of thousands of dollars are invested in this department alone and it is worth one's time to inspect the department and learn what a great amount of labor and money is required to carry a full line of parts for old and new automobiles.

The fourth floor of the building is used as a wareroom, while the fifth floor is used as a shop with Mr. Ralph Cannon, Superintendent, in charge of a corps of Buick specialists. This department is equipped with all modern machinery and appliances necessary to the efficient repairing of Buick cars, and is divided into five subdivisions, consisting of radiator department, forge, machine shop, electric department, engine and adjusting departments, each in charge of an expert in his respective line.

A good shop is the most important branch of any automobile business. Without the latest tools, automatic machinery and expert workmen, prompt, efficient service would be impossible. The Buick Motor Co. have spent years of study to perfect a shop organization capable of keeping their customers' cars in perfect condition and without any exception the shop of the Atlanta Branch is one of the largest and best equipped in the entire south.

Athens City Hall—The big electric flag on this building will be unveiled at 8:30 p. m. on Flag Day.

APRIL

NEVER in the history of the United States has there been exhibited by her people so much of the loyal and patriotic spirit as is now sweeping over the country. In practically every city, village and hamlet of our great country citizens are preaching and teaching the doctrine of patriotism and preparedness.

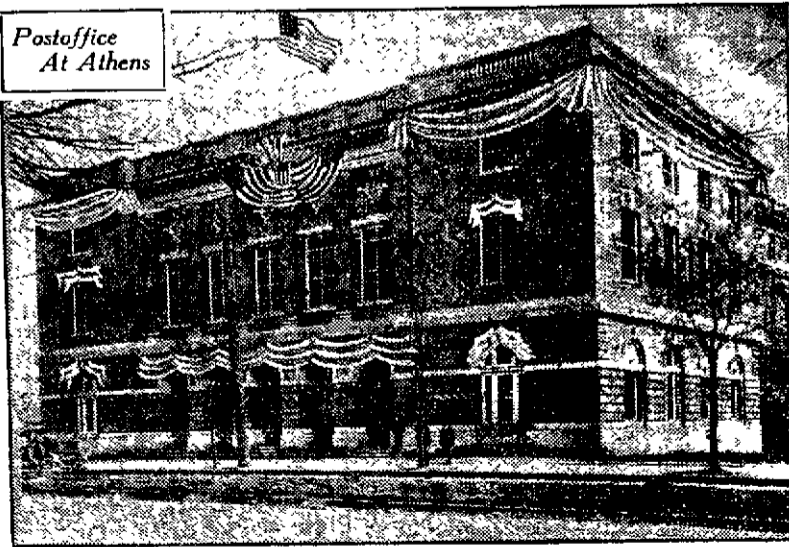

In line with this enthusiastic and loyal spirit, Athens, Georgia; the classic and cultured city of the South, is the first to announce a "Flag Day."

On Tuesday, April 11, handsomely decorated with American colors, with streamers and flags flying from her public buildings, with many homes showing the colors of "Old Glory," she invites and is preparing to welcome her thousands of friends into her borders, there to witness a most inspiring sight.

It will be a gala event, yet so impressive and inspiring that the day will be fraught with great value to those who witness and take part in its proceedings—the crowning event of which will be the unveiling of a large and handsome electric flag erected on the roof of the City Hall.

This Flag—more than 12 feet square, floating from an electric pole, 20 feet in length, and with its myriad of brilliant colored lights, showing in dazzling and waving effect the colors of Our National Emblem, as it loftily waves over the building—has been installed by the Athens Railway and Electric company. It has been purchased by the Athens Chamber of Commerce, and in the future will be kept lighted at night by the city fathers, who have accepted it as a gift from the chamber.

In addition, a number of other buildings in the city will have similar electric flags installed, all ready to make beautiful and perfectly brilliant the closing hours of Athens' big Flag Day.

HERE are some of the events scheduled for Athens' Flag Day, April 11, which has been declared a holiday for the city, and in which every loyal citizen is taking a part:

In the morning there is to be a monster parade of Athens' pupils—5,000 military boys and school children taking part. There will be the Cadets from the University, the attendants at the Normal School, the High School Students, and practically the entire enrollment of the public schools. Every participant will be bedecked with the American colors. This marching assembly promises to eclipse in beauty and splendor, and in its inspiring effect, any parade ever witnessed in the United States.

Following in the wake of the school children will appear a half-dozen large representations from secret orders, many of the marchers being visitors from distant cities.

Then will come the handsome floral parade, in which numbers of automobiles will take part. Beautiful and valuable prizes have been offered for the most beautiful and novel decorations.

A half-dozen bands have been engaged for the occasion, and the welkin will ring with appropriate airs throughout the entire day.

During the day, and as an interesting part of the program, the cornerstone of the handsome new Y. M. C. A. building will be laid. Dr. L. G. Broughton will deliver the address at the exercises.

In the afternoon, on Sanford Field, the baseball teams of Georgia University and of Michigan University will furnish a contest that will interest thousands.

At 8:30 in the evening comes the unveiling of the handsome American flag on the City Hall, with speakers as shown below.

Through the courtesy of Marcus Loew, of New York, one of the largest and best-known film companies of the United States, will make a moving picture of the events of the day. This will be shown in all the prominent cities of the country.

Winnie Davis Hall, State Normal School

Evening Program

3:00 p. m.—Baseball. University of Georgia vs. University of Michigan.

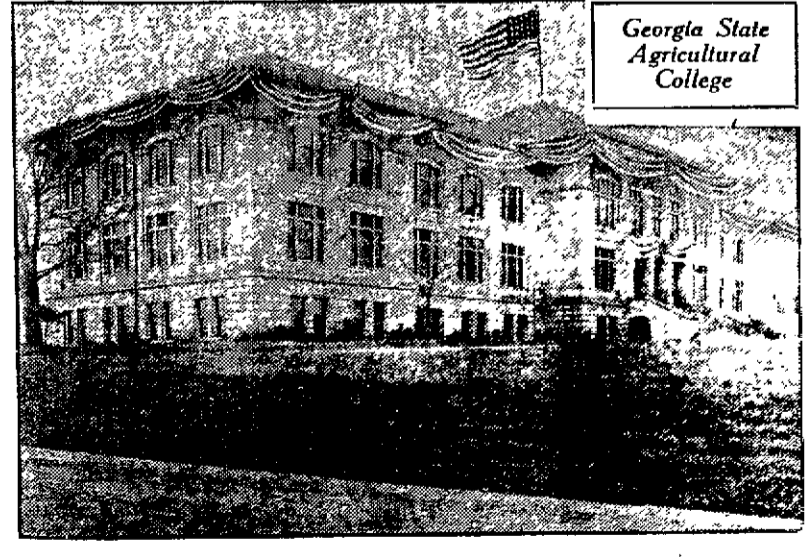

8:30 p. m.—Exercises of unveiling large electric flag over city building, presided over by C. D. Flanigen, master of ceremonies.

Presentation of flag on part of the Chamber of Commerce. Judge John J. Strickland.

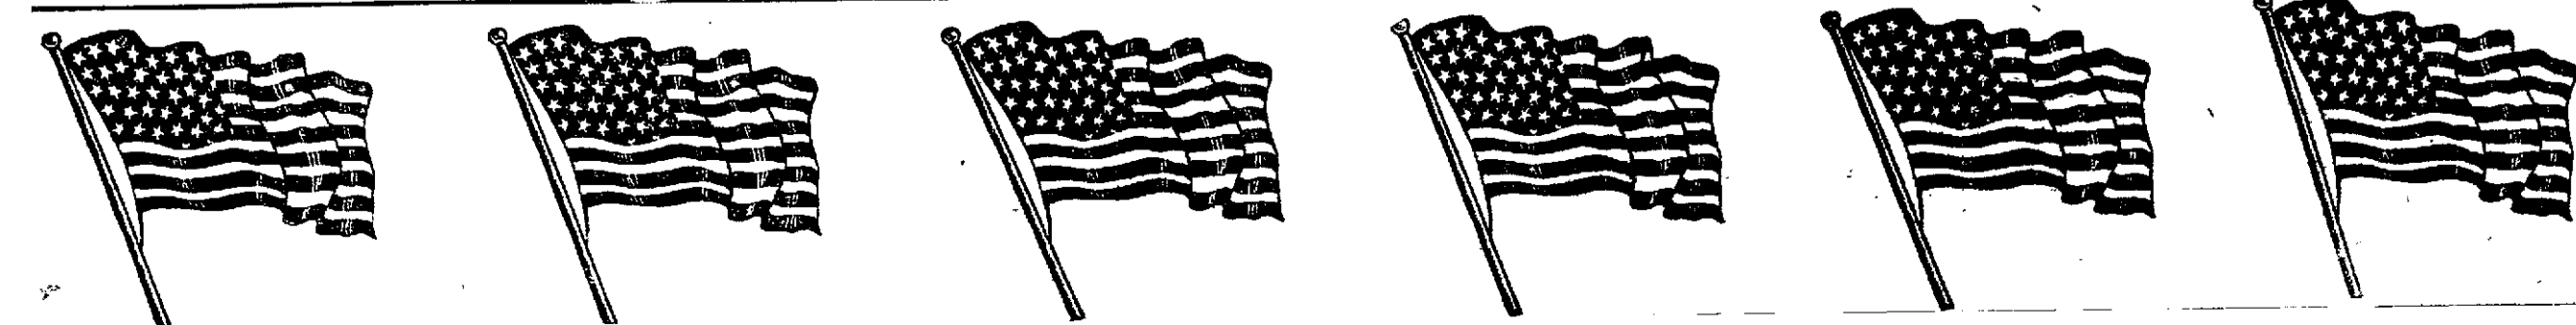

Acceptance of flag on part of the city. Mayor R. O. Arnold.

Wonderful Progress in Road Construction Shown by Two Auto Tours Through Georgia

By Ned McIntosh.

The recent tour of the officials and directors of the Dixie Highway association for the selection of the eastern route of the Dixie highway between Macon and Jacksonville, the press covered exactly the same route used by the first good roads tour in Georgia, which was organized and conducted by The Constitution eight years ago.

This route was from Atlanta to Jacksonville via Macon and Waycross. Compared with the road conditions which The Constitution tour found eight years ago the tour of a week ago seemed more like a triumphal march than a tour of inspection, so great and impressive has been the improvement in roads in Georgia since The Constitution first began to advocate good roads construction.

On that first tour C. W. Parker, of Waycross, now representative in the house of representatives from Ware county, was the only automobile owner in the city of Waycross. Mr. Parker piloted the first tour from Waycross into Jacksonville.

Mr. Parker's account of that first trip, which he told to a member of the recent touring party, brings out in striking contrast the improvement which has been made on the Waycross route.

GEORGIA'S FIRST GOOD ROADS TOUR.

It is almost impossible to conceive of the tremendous improvement that has been made in Georgia's roads during the last eight or ten years," said Mr. Parker. "This great improvement was brought most forcibly to my mind when the directors and officials of the Dixie Highway association passed through Waycross, upon their tour of inspection of the two proposed eastern branches of the Dixie highway between Macon and Jacksonville.

"It was my pleasure—and experience—to act as pilot for the first Constitution tour some eight years ago, which tour was the pioneer movement in the matter of creating a sentiment for good roads which has been so productive of results in recent years.

"When The Constitution's tour started from Atlanta to Jacksonville that year, such was the condition of roads that there were but few motorists who had the temerity to undertake to make the trip.

"When, after many hardships, The Constitution's tour finally got into Waycross, they were in need of a pilot. That shows just what sort of roads we had then. Not only was the road from Waycross to Jacksonville not graded, but it was so little used that it was actually dim, so to speak. It was a mere trail leading through the pine woods and wire grass, three little worn streaks in the grass—one in the middle where the horse walked and on each side the wheel tracks. It was not infrequent that the grass grew up or the sand blew over this trail and it almost took a compass to find one's way.

WAYCROSS' FIRST AUTO.

"At that time I was the proud possessor of the only automobile in Waycross—a little old red, one-cylinder Reo. It was a good day's run from Waycross to Jacksonville then. The run was made today very easily in 3 1/2 hours.

"I agreed to pilot the tour from Waycross to Jacksonville. We started out with nothing but a trail—not a grade—anywhere. Every few hundred yards we would have to pull out of the 'road' in order to get around stumps which had been left where a tree had been cut down in the midst of the trail. Then we would get stuck in the sand.

"Three or four times on that memorable first tour we had to call on farmers to pull us out of small streams with their plows. Today all these streams have been bridged with the exception, of course, of the St. Marys river, which is crossed by ferry. I am glad to say, however, that in a very short time we are going to have a fine bridge over this stream and the trip from Atlanta to Jacksonville can be made over this route without a single ferry. We have the money yet for the construction of the bridge just as soon as congress takes action making it unnecessary for us to build a drawbridge. We will start work this year, whether congress acts or not.

"Within one year's time it will be possible to make the run from Atlanta to Jacksonville over the Waycross route in one day's time.

"After we finally got through to Jacksonville we went out to Atlantic Beach, where the first good roads convention in this part of the country was held. Hon. Duncan U. Fletcher, now United States senator from Florida, presided over that meeting. The meeting had plenty of enthusiasm, and we all thought we were going to accomplish a road but I hardly thought that as much progress would have been made in so short a time.

"I do not mean to say that the work is by any means completed. There remains plenty yet to be done, but there is not the remotest question now that it will be accomplished and that immediately."

ATLANTA TO "JAX" IN ONE DAY.

Nothing, perhaps, tells more forcibly of the tremendous strides in road building that Georgia has made since the first tour instituted by The Constitution than the statement of Mr. Parker that within a year's time it will Almost everyone takes S. S. S. in the Spring because there are few systems which do not require a tonic at this season, and no other medicine is so valuable for building up the constitution.

We all feel badly in the Spring. Some have no particular sickness, but are debilitated, run-down and weak, and their systems are in a state of general disorder. Others are troubled with poor appetite, imperfect digestion, nervousness, etc. These symptoms show that the body is not receiving a sufficient amount of nourishment from the blood; that the thin, watery circulation is unable to meet the demands of the system.

This is a condition which should not be neglected. If the impure blood is not purified and strengthened, the foundation may be laid for more serious physical disorders or diseases later on. Health is our most valuable possession, and its preservation is a matter which vitally concerns everyone.

The healthful botanical ingredients of which S. S. S. is composed, and the method of combining and preparing them, make it the best of all Spring tonics. S. S. S. is nature's medicine, free from strong minerals or any harmful drug. It is made entirely of roots, herbs and barks; a safe and pleasant tonic for everyone.

The value of S. S. S. as a tonic and blood purifier is universally recognized. It builds up the depleted system in the natural way, by purifying the blood and supplying an increased amount of nourishment to every portion of the body. S. S. S. tones up the stomach and digestion, rids one of that tired, worn-out feeling, improves the appetite and in every way contributes to the upbuilding of the entire system.

S. S. S. has been known as the greatest of all tonics for fifty years. Each year sees an increase in the number of persons using and recommending it, until now almost everyone takes S. S. S. in the Spring. Don't feel badly and "mope around" this Spring; take S. S. S. and enjoy perfect health. S. S. S. is sold at drug stores everywhere.

be possible to make the entire trip by automobile from Atlanta to Jacksonville in one day's run.

The directors of the Dixie Highway association met in Macon for the purpose of making an inspection of the proposed eastern routes of the highway between Macon and Jacksonville. One of these routes, known as the short route, leads from Macon by way of Fitzgerald and Waycross directly to Jacksonville. The other, known as the Old Capitol route, leads from Macon by way of Milledgeville, Louisville, Savannah and Brunswick to Jacksonville.

After their tour of inspection the directors decided to accept both routes, making the Savannah route the official eastern route, and designating the Waycross route as the central route.

FOUR ROUTES TO FLORIDA.

This gives four splendid routes from Georgia to Florida points.

One of these is the western branch of the Dixie highway, leading from Macon down by Fort Valley, Monticello, Albany and Thomasville to Tampa or Jacksonville. At the time of the first Constitution tour this route, by way of Albany and Thomasville, was practically the only really travelable road to Florida.

The second Dixie highway is the central route by way of Waycross.

The third is the eastern route, by way of Milledgeville and Savannah to Jacksonville. This is the National highway, leading down by way of Fort Valley, Perry, Cordele, Ashburn, Nashville and Valdosta to Jacksonville and other Florida points.

To the people along both the central route and the eastern route belongs great credit for the magnificent work they have done in building roads as well as for the plans which they have made and are actively carrying out for further road and bridge building.

This story, however, is not to be one altogether of bouquet-throwing.

On the recent run of the Dixie highway a number of friendly bricks were collected here and yonder and reserved for this particular occasion.

They will be dealt out with as discerning an eye as possible and with the hope that some good may spring up where they land.

A FEW FRIENDLY BRICKS.

To begin close to home, be it said that some of the worst stretches of road between Atlanta and Jacksonville lie on the most traveled road between Atlanta and Macon.

One of the worst stretches of road on any link of the Dixie highway is the stretch between Atlanta and Macon. This stretch of road around Jonesboro has for a long while been the bane of the motorist. To the people around the stretch, all of which has apparently aroused the citizens of Clayton county to do no undue exertion to the best of their ability to improve the condition of the road.

As a matter of fact, there is not a great deal that the citizens of Clayton county can do to improve the stretch of the Dixie highway. Every inch of the road is graded, but as the road is so narrow, the work appears to have ceased.

With surfacing this could be converted into a splendid highway, and with the big end of the work already done, this could be accomplished with no great amount of time or expense.

It is a pity that the good economy on the part of Clayton county to make this improvement.

HERE'S ONE FOR GRIFFIN.

The roads in excellent condition in this county, excellent in the city of Griffin. Griffin is a city of known civic pride, yet she appears to have neglected the roads within the city limits and to have left the folks of the county put up with a road which is a disgrace to them for improvement in this particular and another chance for Griffin to add something else to a list of achievements of which she has a just right to be proud.

From Griffin to the Bibb county line the road is in excellent condition. A great deal of work in grading has been done along this stretch in the last year or so and the road is now in a shape where they can really be improved to the high standard needed.

Just north of the Bibb county line, between Macon and Forsyth, however, there is a stretch which would bear extraordinary attention.

Some road between Atlanta and Macon is soon going to develop into the main highway between these two cities which means the trunk road which will be used by practically every motorist going either north or south through Georgia.

The conditions of certain stretches of the road by Jonesboro, Ga., Forsyth is such that this road cannot lay claim to monopoly, although this has been designated as a connecting link of the Dixie highway between Atlanta and Macon.

SOMETHING MAY HAPPEN.

There is a fine opening for the eastern route of the Dixie highway, to stop in and surprise some folks. The eastern route of the Dixie highway, between Atlanta and Macon, is practically no disposition so far to make such a move. Not only this, but there has not been a bridge over the stream which apparently to put the designated eastern branch between Atlanta and Macon into that condition in which a branch of the Dixie highway demands.

It is not the most impossible thing in the world that the Dixie highway be built up in this condition of affairs, also. It is by no means too late for the Dixie Highway association to take from the Dixie highway branch, between Atlanta and Macon, its credentials and establish the eastern route of the Dixie highway between Atlanta and Macon.

One does not have to go over the Waycross route or the Savannah route but once and see the splendid organized spirit of the people along these two routes to realize that there is something radically wrong between Atlanta and Macon, and that somebody needs to wake up!

FINE ROAD TO WAYCROSS.

The roads of Bibb county are models in grading and surfacing. No finer roads exist than the boulevards leading out of Macon.

From Macon to Waycross, too, the road is graded with such splendid skill that the tracks of a railroad could be laid on it and it would be as smooth as a floor all the way.

From the progressive community spirit.

That the road is in such splendid condition is due largely to the work of the Short Route association, which worked so energetically and so successfully to get the approval of the Dixie highway officials and directors, and to put the road into the condition in which it is now.

Great credit is due the people of the central stretch of road, and the officials of the highway expressed many times their appreciation of the spirit and expense shown by such road work as this.

From Macon across southward by Folkston to the Georgia line, the road has been recently graded and the work is practically finished. The road is sandy, but passable. Work has been in progress upon this link but for about two months.

TO BRIDGE ST. MARYS RIVER.

On the Florida side of the line there is a stretch of very sandy and ungraded road which is a hindrance to the Dixie roads of Duval county. Every assurance is given the Dixie Highway association to meet the end of the year in the road from Waycross to Jacksonville will be just as good as the road from Jacksonville to Macon.

In addition to improving this stretch of road, the Short Route association has promised the Dixie Highway association that they will replace Koler's ferry, across St. Marys river, at Folkston, with a fine bridge. This bridge is already on hand, it is stated, and the only thing in the way of beginning the work is the action of congress to declare this point the head of navigation on the St. Marys river.

It is promised, however, that if this is done, the bridge will be ready to construct a drawbridge at this point. It is promised, however, that if this is done, the bridge will be ready to construct a drawbridge at this point.

GOOD WORK ON SAVANNAH ROUTE.

Going northward from Jacksonville over the old eastern route of the Dixie highway there is a fine shell road all the way from Jacksonville for a distance of 25 miles to Yulea, within a few miles of the Landing ferry, over the St. Marys river.

At present, this river must be crossed by the old-fashioned slow and laborious ferry method. Just as between Folkston and Jacksonville, however, the Dixie Highway association has promised also to build a bridge over the river, thus eliminating the ferry.

On the Georgia side of the river again the roads are good all the way to Savannah.

A special comment should be made upon the roads of Glynn county. The roads of Glynn, which not infrequently require considerable engineering skill in the marshes, are substantially built, shell-surfaced and as smooth as marble. All streams are bridged, and there is nothing lacking to make the roads of Glynn everything that they should be.

Before reaching Brunswick, however, there is another river which at present has to be ferried. This is the Satilla river. There are now two ferries in operation, one of them being Woodbine ferry and the other Owen's ferry. Assurance has been given that the Satilla river will be bridged in the near future.

This then will leave only the Altamaha river, which is a barrier provided for by the use of the railroad bridge, five miles long. To cross the delta an arrangement is made with the writer, whereby it takes automobiles across on flat cars drawn by an engine. A night and day service is to be inaugurated on this large route that motorists may be able to cross at any hour.

ROAD-BUILDING IN BRYAN COUNTY.

It has also been suggested that the delay of loading and unloading automobiles on the cars be discontinued by placing a board runway across the railroad bridge and allowing automobiles to cross the bridge under their own power.

A very remarkable piece of engineering is being done in Bryan county. This is the construction of a splendid road along a causeway through the swamp Chatham county is doing this work, and it took a special act of the legislature when Chatham had to put the road of her neighboring county into the same splendid condition which prevails in Chatham. Tracks are laid along this causeway and a train is used to haul the material, an arrangement no short of the magnitude necessary for actual railroad construction.

From Savannah all the way to Jones county the road of the eastern route is well graded and well surfaced. In a number of the counties, notably Burke, recent work has been done on the roads, making them equal to any roads in the state.

Leaving Baldwin county, however, and going to the Elbert county line, is a stretch of road which is in miserable condition. Practically every inch of the road through Jones county shows the marks of a bad condition.

SHIPPERS GET NOTICE OF DEMURRAGE CHANGE

Carriers of United States Increase Charges to $2 Per Day, Effective April 1.

F. M. Hardin, manager of the Southern Demurrage Bureau, has called the attention of the public and shippers in the territory covered by his organization to the fact that carriers throughout the United States either have filed or will file early as practicable, supplements to tariffs increasing the demurrage rate to $2 a day, beginning with the fourth day after the expiration of the free period.

That is to say, the rate for the first three days after the expiration of the free period will be $1 per car per day and thereafter $2 per car per day.

These changes became effective April 1, and have been agreed upon, Mr. Hardin points out, between the committee on relations between railroads of the American railway association, representing carriers, and the National Industrial Traffic League, representing shippers, and have been approved by the interstate commerce commission, which has authorized carriers to file tariffs covering the changes effective after one day's notice.

It is the hope of carriers, expressed in the notice, that their patron will by prompt release of cars avoid the payment of the extra charge, the purpose being to stimulate the release of equipment rather than to increase revenues from demurrage collections.

PLANT OF THE H. G. HASTINGS CO.

INTERIOR OF THE H. G. HASTINGS COMPANY CITY RETAIL SEED STORE

Established 26 Years Ago With One Man and a Boy—Now Employs Nearly 200 People.

From a small beginning twenty-six years ago when only one man and a boy were needed to handle its business—to the largest and best seed concern today in the entire south, is the remarkable record of the H. G. Hastings company, with its big plant and city retail store on Mitchell street, in Atlanta.

The one man of twenty-six years ago was then, and is now, the president and general director of the company. The boy of a quarter of a century ago was H. W. Brown, now vice president of the company. The force has grown to between 150 and 200 employees who serve a half million customers. In fact the company employs more people, serves more customers, and occupies more floor space than any seed house in the south that deals exclusively in seeds.

This great business has grown up here in the heart of the southeast without any great flourish of trumpets. It has been a steady year-by-year growth by the secret of its success being summed up largely in the fact that "no business has a right to exist that does not serve its customers to the profit of the customer as well as to the profit of the business."

In 1889 when Mr. Hastings established the business, there were no seed houses of importance in the south, all seed supply coming either directly or indirectly from northern seedsmen. It was Mr. Hastings' ambition and determination to build in the south a great seed business, equal to, if not superior, any seed house in the north. That he has succeeded, and that his ambition has been more than realized, is amply proven by a trip through the big Hastings plant and a study of the enormous business done by his company.

While actively engaged in the business for more than 25 years, devoting his time to directing generally the policies of his house, and to traveling thousands of miles annually, inspecting the seed crops grown for his company, Mr. Hastings is still a comparatively young man and believes that the Hastings seed business has only gotten a good start, and that its greatest growth is yet to come.

Studying carefully the needs of the south in the way of seed supply has been one of the hobbies of Mr. Hastings. He has traveled tens of thousands of miles in a little that the other day, to see the conditions under which our best wheat, corn, and other crops are raised. We have gone to the farthest point south in Florida, we have traversed Texas from east to west, from north to south. We have made observations from the Atlantic coast of the Carolinas to the Pacific coast of southern California. There is not a state that we do not do business in to any considerable extent—and that means a great majority of them in the United States. We have made a study of its soil and climatic conditions. This gives us expert knowledge at first hand of the needs of all these sections, and enables us to give that seed service to which we believe our customers are entitled.

Added to this, different members of our firm spend much time and travel thousands of miles in actual field inspection of the growing seed crops to ascertain beyond any question of a doubt that the quality is at all times being kept up to the high standard of seed quality we have set—a standard never lowered, but more often raised.

Officers of the Company and Department Managers

H. G. Hastings, president, established the business 26 years ago. He directs the general policies of the house, and travels thousands of miles annually in personal inspection of the seed crops grown for his house.

H. W. Brown, vice president, has been with the house since its establishment. He is in direct charge of the variety test work on the Hastings farm of 2,500 acres in Troup county, Ga.

R. F. Lyon, secretary, office boy 22 years ago, has worked his way up to his present position. He handles the general correspondence and exercises general supervision over all departments except accounting and advertising.

J. W. Bedford, manager of shipping department, in close touch with the traffic department, filling the orders from the storage rooms, and hurrying it along to the various depots or express office.

ment will tell you what your seeds will cost here and what the freight or express charges will be when delivered at your station—any point in the world.

T. L. Durfee, manager order filling department, where all of the half million letters or orders can be found at a moment's notice. These are kept for two years before being thrown out.

W. R. Hastings, manager advertising department, is the eldest son of H. G. Hastings. He was "born" in the seed business, and is making a great success in the manner in which he handles catalogues, pamphlets and newspaper and magazine work for the company.

John N. McDonald, manager of traffic department, whose department routes 75,000 freight and express shipments each year. His department also handles all claims for overcharges, secures the money and returns it to customers.

R. G. Lyon, manager special sales department, a department maintained by no other seed firm. This department of these men passes every order, inquiry, letter or postal card that comes addressed to the Hastings firm, and it is due to their faithful work and cooperation for the many years that the H. G. Hastings Co. stands today among the leaders in the seed trade of America.

Through the hands of one or more of these men passes every order, inquiry, letter or postal card that comes addressed to the Hastings firm, and it is due to their faithful work and cooperation for the many years that the H. Larger Quarters - Built for the H. G. Hastings Co.

During the past summer, in order to meet the growing demand for larger and better facilities for handling its business, the Hastings Co. erected another section to its already large establishment. With this enlarged quarters the company has, without any exception, the largest and best capacity for handling its seed business of any similar house in the country. Its ability to handle 6,000 orders per day attests this.

These buildings, shown in the left-hand corner, would occupy nearly two acres of ground if they were spread out, and contain 57,000 square feet of floor space. They begin immediately in the rear of the city retail store, on Mitchell street, and extend entirely through the block to Trinity avenue, on the south. They are constructed so that teams and trucks can drive directly inside the buildings and unload the seed going to the upper floors, being unloaded directly onto large electric elevators which carry them to the desired floor.

"These buildings were necessary," remarked Mr. Hastings, with a ring of sincerity, "because the people of the south have been and are loyal to a seed firm that was building up a great seed business to supply the needs of the south. We appreciate this loyalty and support, and have tried in the past to deserve it fully. With the increased facilities in our buildings we can now serve our patrons far better than ever before."

ONE DAY'S EXPRESS SHIPMENT WAITING TO GO OUT

ONE DAY'S EXPRESS SHIPMENT WAITING TO GO OUT

A SCENE IN THE PACKING ROOM

Wrapping and Weighing, Ready for the Mails

One of the busiest sections of the great Atlanta seed house is that shown in the three illustrations here given. It is this force—or at least a part of the force—is shown—that handles the 5,000 to 6,000 orders a day that go out by mail and express during the active shipping season. In the picture above is shown the express packages ready for one day's shipment.

We saw expert employees—numbers of them—corraling together the orders, which are made out in large sheets. These are placed in trays, and then passed over to the wrappers. They are then passed on to the special computing scales that tell the exact postage to carry it to its particular zone, then stamped, thrown into the mail bags, and ready to go to the post-office. A regular employe of "Uncle Sam" is kept on the floor all the time, and sometimes he has to have assistance, to check these thousands of packages every day.

These packages go into almost every country of the world, the company having customers in China, Japan, Hungary, South America, Mexico, Africa, Alaska, Cuba, and all other countries, though perhaps the bulk of its business is done from Virginia to Texas, having more than 100,000 customers alone in the latter state.

The Hastings Co. spends more than $60,000 per year in postage.

WEIGHING AND CHECKING MAIL—AN EVERY-DAY SCENE

Retail Store of The H. G. Hastings Co., a Busy Place—1,000 to 1,500 Customers Per Day.

With a busy force waiting on its 1,000 to 1,500 customers per day—and its varieties of 200 garden seeds and vegetable plants and 200 or more kinds of flower seeds, bulbs and plants, the retail store of the H. G. Hastings at 16 West Mitchell street, furnishes one of the busiest indoor scenes in the city these days.

The store is one of the best arranged and most modern in the south. Every variety of seed has its place, and with their trained knowledge every one of the nine employees in the retail store can wait on his customer without a moment's delay.

Ever since the establishment of the Hastings Co. it has maintained a retail department, which has naturally kept up in its retail distribution with the enormous growth of the mail order department of the house.

The chief attraction of the Hastings retail store, and what has made it so popular with the seed buying public in this local territory, lies in the fact that with the wonderful business the company has built up—with its growing and buying ability in the seed world—with the advantages it has over the ordinary retail seed house in securing not only all kinds of garden lawn and flower seed, but in getting just the quality so desired by patrons, retail customers are given the benefit of this buying ability and of the excellent quality of seeds which has made the Hastings Company the south's leader.

Two Ford automobiles, making two trips each per day, are required to take care of the Atlanta trade at the retail store. The manager of the house is W. H. Lector, the salesmen are Paul Hamilton, Fred Harrison, J. P. Laird, Thomas Thompson, Ralph Moore, Charles Harwell, W. O. Lindsey and Charlie Oakley.

would open the eyes of any one. When a Constitution man was escorted through the various floors he was astounded. Piled high on each other were tens of thousands of sacks of seed from various sections of the United States.

On each floor were scores of employes, busy as bees, some at clerical work, some filling orders, some wrapping packages, some addressing and stamping them, some at filling cases—all moving with systematic well-trained step, that showed their familiarity with the work.

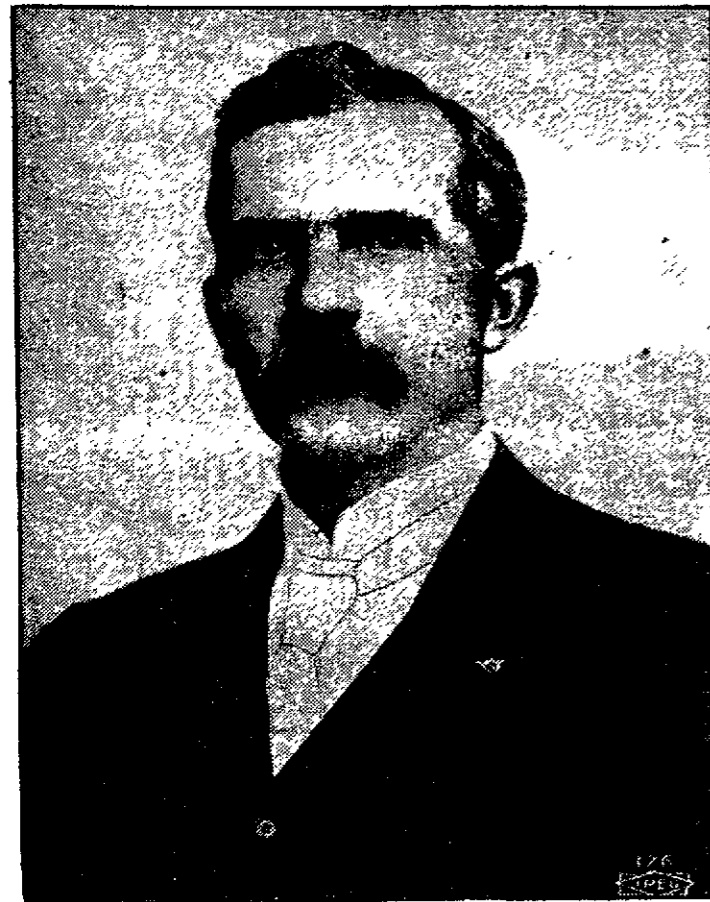

In one section the wonderful packet filling machines were at work—machines that measure exactly the amount of seed, open the packet, drop the seeds in, paste the flap, turn it over, seal it, then count it, filling them complete at the rate of 3,500 to 4,000 per hour. Millions of these packets are put up in advance of the active seed selling season.

On another floor was shown the recleaning machines in operation, showing just how much trash, weed seed and dirt can come from out of what looks to be a fine looking lot of seed as it comes from the farm. All the seed handled by the Hastings Co. goes through these recleaners—if it is necessary to put them in better condition than when received.

Great fireproof vaults stand on the floors where over half a million names are stored away alphabetically, and a customer has bought from the seed company within the past three years his or her name can be almost instantly produced.

If it was a most interesting sight, and the great seed house extends a most cordial invitation to visitors to spend a half hour with them at any time. "We have nothing in the house that we wish to conceal from any visitor or customer," said Mr. Hastings, "and they are not only welcome to call at any time, but we invite them."

Entry List for County Candidates Closed Saturday--Simmons Opposes Merry for School Superintendent

The closing of the entry list Saturday at noon rounded up the twenty or more candidates who will have opposition in the coming county primary, to be held April 27.

One of the surprises of the day was when J. W. Simmons, head of the science department of the Boys' High school, at the last moment almost, paid his entry fee as a candidate against E. C. Merry for county school superintendent.

Professor Merry has held the post, which pays $1,700 per year, without opposition for several years.

More than ordinary interest is being shown in the primary this year because the county officers elected at this primary will hold their offices four years, the terms having been doubled by the legislature.

The race for coroner holds the record for the largest number of entrants, five candidates seeking the one position. There are six candidates for two vacancies on the board of county commissioners.

The coroner's race is also interesting because two of the candidates, Paul Donohoo and Fred M. Powers, are blind men.

Unopposed Officials.

The following county officials have no opposition for re-election: Arnold Broyles, clerk of courts; A. P. Stewart, tax collector; H. M. Reid, judge of the city court, civil division; Andrew Calhoun, judge of the city court, criminal division; H. L. Culbertson, treasurer; Thomas H. Jeffries, ordinary; C. S. Robert, county surveyor.

The races are as follows: For county commissioners (two places), W. J. Stoddard, William M. Poole, Charles G. Turner, Frank A. Pittman, J. Lee Barnes, C. D. Knight.

For sheriff, C. W. Mangum and J. I. Lowry.

For solicitor of the city court, Lowry Arnold and J. V. Poole.

For county school commissioner, E. C. Merry and J. W. Simmons.

For tax receiver, H. M. Wood, T. M. Armistead and A. A. Owen.

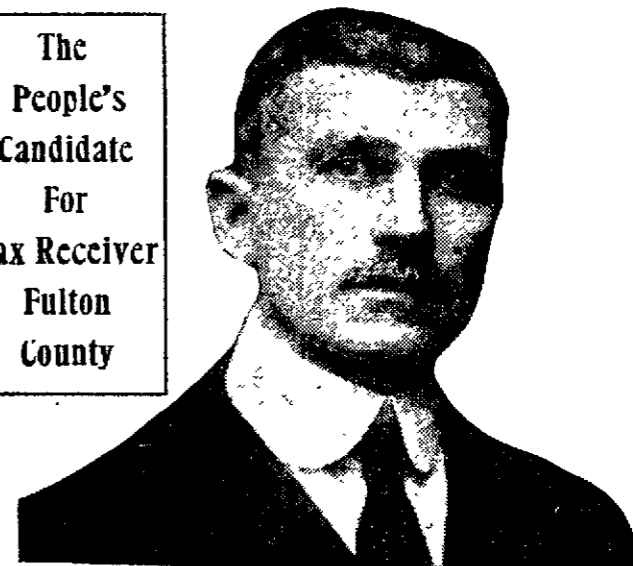

For coroner, Paul Donohoo, Fred Powers, F. M. Leathers, V. M. Barrett and J. O. Kemp.

The following is the list of candidates for places on the democratic executive committee, who are unopposed:

Charles I. Brann, J. M. George, F. J. Paxton, G. C. Boden, J. A. Fischer, James A. Massey, B. Lee Smith, A. D. Thomson, J. W. Maddox, C. A. Pitts, Louis Gholston, George M. Hope, W. P. Anderson, E. Smith, A. C. Burdett, Howell Cloud and J. W. McWilliams.

J. O. Cochran, secretary of the committee, collected $3,310 from the candidates. If all of the amount is not consumed by the expenses of the election, the committee has the right to devote it to the state primary in August or prorate the residue back to the candidates.

German U Boat Activity Again Diverts Attention From Stocks

General Liquidation Did Not Develop Because the Street Has Become Accustomed to Meaningless Wrangles Between President and Kaiser.

New York, April 1.—(Special)—The stock market turned dull and easier during the past week as a result of the latest activities of German submarines even though there has been a general disposition in financial circles to believe that there will not be any serious difficulties in the present situation. It is pointed out that serious questions are being raised through small sized panics too often in the past when American lives have been lost with all of the fears which could be based on such a course now. As a result, there has not been general selling, but only a few stocks have been sold. When ever there has been a liquidation on the cover it has been found that it was not easy to get a stock back. POLICE PERSONALS

CAPTAIN L. S. DOBBS

ing his badge. Again when Captain Mayo became chief of the Atlanta police department Captain Dobbs succeeded him, taking his captain's badge. Captain Dobbs has in the eight months that he has been captain established a record for efficiency which is second to none.

The board of police commissioners recently went on record complimenting Captain Dobbs for his high standards as an officer and praising the way in which he has conducted his office and handled the men on the evening watch.

Kind-hearted, almost to a fault, Captain Dobbs would do anything in his power not only to help his brother officers but also to help a prisoner or one in his care.

When "Abbas Jimmy Valentine" was staged by the three reporters of the three Atlanta newspapers, Captain Dobbs took an active part in aiding the reporters in their work, and it was largely through the efforts of the two other captives, Poole and Fry, that the performance was a success.

At the Cemetery. Supernumerary Chaffin was assigned to the cemetery on the morning watch by Captain A. L. Poole several nights ago. The next day reports came into headquarters about someone leaving the cemetery about 2 o'clock that morning, and cemetery officials complained of a gate being broken where someone had pried it open in too big a hurry to fasten the gate.

Sick List. The following patrolmen have been announced on the sick list by the Police Relief association: J. B. McCarty, G. C. Garner, J. E. Hudson, J. T. Kilpatrick, W. C. Tribble, J. R. Black, E. J. Fain, A. Ford, S. J. Williams, J. C. Steerman and F. O. Hannah.

The Flying Squadron. Chief Mayo has been praised by the public for the work of Captain A. L. Poole's flying squadron. The team of Walter McWilliams and Jack Malcom, with Chief Poole, is known as the fastest and most efficient burglar catcher squad on the force.

No matter how far off the call, McWilliams as driver can guarantee any frightened Atlanta driver there in eight minutes at the longest.

Melton on Speeders. Officer J. B. Melton has been named the speed fiend. This motorcycle officer has been contributing substantially to the city treasury by arresting speed and automobile ordinance violations during the past several days.

Turner vs. Opossum. Officer W. D. Turner caught an opossum while on duty on Forsyth street one morning last week. Turner was examining the doors in the rear of Poole's flying squadron. The team of Walter McWilliams and Jack Malcom, with Chief Poole, is known as the fastest and most efficient burglar catcher squad on the force.

No matter how far off the call, McWilliams as driver can guarantee any frightened Atlanta driver there in eight minutes at the longest.

Examinations. Applicants for appointment to the police force at the end of the supernumerary list will be given physical examinations the latter part of this week. The mental examinations will be held the last of next week, according to Secretary W. T. Morris, in charge of the examinations.

John Wood's Car. Call Officer John D. Wood, on the evening watch, bought an automobile last Tuesday. He had been looking for a good one that all he had to do to start it was to put a little gasoline and oil into it, although it had been standing out in the weather for over two years. Wood says he is going to build a racer out of the car, just to show Officer Pearson, who owns a "Blitzen" that there is class in the evening watch. Pearson is on the morning shift.

Jim Palmer's "Blitzen." Although it was sadly bent following an encounter with a large bull dog near the stockade, several weeks ago, Jim Palmer states that his "Blitzen" is once more in service. "I'm going to paint the darned thing red," said Jim, "and then these bull dogs better look out."

Chief Lanford Ill. Chief of Detectives Newport A. Lanford has been confined to his home seriously ill for the past several days. In the absence of the chief, Detective Sergeant Bob Warriner has been in command of the detective department.

Officer Morris. Secretary W. T. Morris, Chief Mayo's right side, has been named Officer Morris, and for capturing two alleged automobile thieves recently. He and his partner were charged with stealing a car in Athens and bringing it to Atlanta. He was highly praised.

Mr. Morris was en route to East Point one day recently, when he noticed an automobile bearing a number which had been read out at headquarters. An Athenian nud also covered the car, and before the two men knew it they were behind the bars at headquarters awaiting the arrival of officers from Athens.

The officials of that city were so grateful to Mr. Morris that they are going to pay his way to and from the trial of the case, and also a handsome reward for his services.

Detective Black. Detective John Black has been critically ill for the past two weeks, and grave concern has been felt by his brother officers over his condition. It was announced late Saturday night that he was slightly improved.

Censoring Motion Pictures

From the standpoint of public protection some form of control is being generally recognized as necessary for motion pictures. Censorship has been a term used to describe the voluntary effort of theaters and newspapers to clean themselves up from within, as in the title of the National Board of Motion Pictures Censorship, or to describe any form of police oversight of newspapers, theaters or public art.

Such censorship is necessary and desirable, but clubwomen have decreed that the word "censorship" be given a very different meaning. The World's Almanac gives 16,000 motion picture theaters in the United States. Each day something like 7,000,000 people attend moving picture shows, an average of more than 20 shows a year for each person of the 100,000,000 population. More than one-seventh of this tremendous audience is children.

Given these figures you may estimate the influence of the movies for good or bad, and judge the responsibility that rests with the censors. Both the general and our Georgia federations have taken decided action upon this matter. Pursuant of a resolution from the Rome Woman's club, passed upon favorably at the Savannah convention, we are working for cleaner, better pictures.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick stressed this important educational matter in her annual message and the result of her agitation and indorsement, together with the federation committee work is being shown in the number of towns like Columbus, that report more careful censorship of pictures and especially selected pictures for children.

Mrs. George Zimmerman, chairman of the civic department of the general federation says this subject is vital with all thinking women throughout the country and they are searching for a wise solution. The subject is to be discussed at the biennial in May in New York, and that each delegate may come informed, both of the need and of the method of solution, the civic department has sent out plans under consideration that are constructive and deserving support.

These plans concern young people and the film. In the last 10 years motion pictures have grown to be the chief theatrical entertainment for children, because of their inexpensiveness and because they can be seen in the daytime. But the pictures shown in the ordinary motion picture theater are made primarily for adults with no thought of what children like or need. Often they present themes and suggestions which you, as mothers, have every reason to think may have a harmful effect on your children.

Boys and girls enjoy clean fun and lively stories, with plenty of thrill and action. Their imaginations are keen, their fancies alert, their ideals high. Who is responsible for the kind of pictures children have to see? We the parents and friends of children and nobody else. We are responsible, because we have not taken the trouble to realize that all pictures are not suitable for all ages. The adult and child should be treated separately when their needs are considered.

Producers are in the business to give the public what it wants. Some of them have lost a great deal of money trying to provide special pictures for children. They now feel that there must be a special demand, and the women of your club and community can help in bringing about a change of sentiment which will result in satisfactory films for children.

It is your responsibility to create the demand and to make it felt. That demand has already begun to grow. The national board has seen a very definite tendency to discriminate between pictures suited to adults and pictures suited to children. It has studied the tastes and needs of the average American boy and girl. It suggests live and entertaining themes to manufacturers.

All motion pictures are now circulated with little reference to the special local demand. They pass through a complicated system of exchanges, book ing etc. Your community gets its pictures from a branch exchange and probably has to take what is sent to it. You can change this a good deal by making your wishes known to the theater managers. If you want the exhibitors in your town to show the kind of pictures you want your child to see, recognize their difficulties in getting regular lists of pictures for young people, and co-operate with them in urging manufacturers to set aside pictures for selected programs. Use the newspapers and other forms of publicity when good films are to be shown. Insist on the showing of good programs for boys and girls on selected days.

Do not demand merely educational pictures. Help the exhibitor to gain audiences. Work to develop public opinion, and be diligent while it changes. Understand the problem and discuss it with the fathers and mothers of your city. If the exhibitor is not willing to co-operate with you, write to the nearest large city and change. Arbitrary censorship will never meet the need, because the only voice which can absolutely govern picture producers is the voice of public demand.

The best and fairest way to control this great industry—now rated as the fourth industry in this country—is through the influence of mothers, fathers, civic workers and others who are interested solely in the wholesome effect of pictures. This volunteer service is the work of the national board with which the civic department of the general federation wishes to acquaint you. It is now composed of 225 volunteer workers who receive no compensation, and none of whom have any connection whatever with the motion picture industry.

There are 87 members of the general or governing committee, all the highest type of public servants. They control the entire organization and review questionable pictures. There are 188 members of the censorship committee divided into 20 groups, who serve for one morning or afternoon each week. These make the first review of 99 per cent of the pictures now shown in the United States.

The national board has among these volunteers those who segregate films for children from the mass of pictures so that those interested in providing programs for children may select from these lists the pictures specially suited to the particular group of children who are to see them. This organization was founded in March, 1909, after investigation of the picture houses in New York city at the request of the photo-play exhibitors by Charles Sprague Smith and John Collier of the People's Institute, with representatives from civic and social organizations.

Each manufacturer, whose pictures are reviewed, agreed to accept as final the decisions of the public as voiced by the national board. In 1915 the national board passed upon 470 pictures for complete revision 69 entire dramas, condemned or returned for complete revision 118 reels of film. The national board asks you to assist it to raise the standards so that its power to suppress the bad and to promote the good in the picture world will be increased.

TWO CLUBS ORGANIZED AT WOODBERRY HALL

The Sextette Club and the Glee Club Plan Many Pleasures.

All constant readers of The Constitution school page have stopped asking the one banal question: "What was the story?" but instead have begun asking: "What has become of Woodberry and his news?"

Well, if you promise to listen right good all about it. For several months Woodberry's constitution correspondent has been quizzed and abused for his school. Other correspondents had their papers to write for—consequently all Constitution news readers have suffered the consequences and forget for the time being that Woodberry ever existed. But she existed all the time just the same.

Now changing the tense of my writing, I would like to tell you the good and if nothing unforeseen happens I'm here to stay. I dread to tell you all of the glorious news that you have missed but I'm going to try my best to tell you all that has happened.

Two great clubs have been organized. The sextette club the members being Misses: Kay, Martha Hicks, Thelma Malone and Marian Malone. This club is enjoying life to its greatest extent.

ATLANTA'S REAL DISEASE

We have brought the ablest municipal experts of the United States perhaps of the world here to tell us what is the matter with Atlanta. They have come and surveyed and told us. One of them Allen D. Albert, of Minnesota has just been with us. It is remarkable how the opinions and suggestions of these experts after even brief inquiry accord with that of the public generally.

But notwithstanding our own views and notwithstanding that experts tell us we are right in our opinions as to the real trouble, it is nothing short of astounding that the rank and file of business professional and abiding men continue to lie supinely on their backs and do nothing to remedy and unscrupulous evils that unquestionably beset the city.

We plan a great Southeastern fair. Everybody is full of enthusiasm and the money is raised. Success is in sight as with everything else of this class which Atlanta undertakes.

We bring the Metropolitan grand opera stars here season after season and almost to a man get out our dress suits and high hats, and shout. Look at Atlanta doing something no other southern city could even undertake.

We get together go out and canvass the town and raise a quarter of a million dollars one year for Oglethorpe and almost the very next year $700,000 for Greater Emory. We slap ourselves on the back and cry out "Great! Only Atlanta could have done it."

But when it comes to the fundamentals, when it is a matter of getting down to real brass tacks regarding the city's constructive needs we seem to remain indifferent and apathetic.

Atlanta's real disease and everybody recognizes it is a weak and inadequate system of municipal administration.

Until we accept this diagnosis and apply the real remedy constructively we cannot hope to get very far.

Already the awakening has begun, but as yet it is a slow process. Once the people realize just how badly things are out of whack it is not to be questioned that the awakening will be a vigorous one.

More than 350 American cities have met the crisis courageously brought about revision in municipal government, and are so gratified over the change that they would under no circumstances go back to the old system.

When does Atlanta propose to face the music? Her citizens have got to do it if they would keep abreast the times preserve the Atlanta spirit and maintain her proverbial constructive record.

The thing is on us now has been for many months. Why wait?

BETWEEN BATTLES

There seems to be plenty of good feeling among enemies in the fighting ranks at the war fronts. According to some of the war correspondents, whatever dark shadows of hate there may be are relieved by light. For instance, the French raise a tune, the Germans join in, and the chorus rings along the lines of opposing trenches and a "Jolly good time they have of it until the guns roar again and the butchery begins!" The homesick men are partial to songs of home, with memories of mothers, wives and sweethearts left behind. "Such songs," writes a correspondent, "seem to make friends of enemies. There's the brotherhood of humanity in them."

The gossip between battles is on the line of "After the war—when we get home again!"

There is no talk of carrying alleged war hatreds beyond the war—at least, among the fighting men themselves.

As to England and Germany, where the greatest hatreds are presumed to exist, it is freely predicted that it will not be very long after peace comes until both countries are on friendly speaking and trading terms. Business will be business then, as heretofore, and while war memories will linger, they will not be at the expense of business in the rebuilding period when they will wonder at it all and "what they fought each other for!"

At least that is the optimistic forecast.

WAITING ON A FEW

The Dixie highway through Georgia from Chattanooga to two points on the Florida line is waiting for its ultimate perfection as a travelable road in all weathers and seasons upon the action of a few delinquents.

The result of the good roads movement, which has shaken this state from one end to the other will be within one or two years the completion of paved highways from the Tennessee to the Florida line. Two of these routes between Chattanooga to Atlanta are nearing completion.

Enthusiastic good roads industry in the southern section of the state promises four splendid well-surfaced highways from Macon south to Florida. Three of these are the eastern central and western divisions of the Dixie highway while the fourth is the National highway, extending from Macon south through Cordele, Tifton and Nashville to Valdosta and Florida points. The western division of the Dixie highway together with the National highway will be used chiefly by those touring to the west coast of Florida. The central and eastern divisions of the Dixie highway will be the routes followed by those seeking the east coast of the peninsular state. The average tourist will travel south by one of these routes and return north by the other.

No tourist who makes this trip, traveling from the north or west into Florida can afford to miss the marvelous beauties of the Savannah route which he will find duplicated in none of his travels between the Great Lakes and the gulf. Remarkable development upon this route with the exception of a few short links yet to be completed as outlined in Mr. McIntosh's story in The Constitution today has made it already almost a year-round travelable highway whose marvelous beauties are uncanceled anywhere in the 2,000 miles from Chicago to Miami.

Unfortunately upon this eastern division there is one bad link that through Jones county. Unless the people of Jones county give some evidence of a purpose to improve and build the required road with reasonable promptness the eastern division of the Dixie highway will in time probably be transferred to the old capital route from Milledgeville through Eatonton and Covington to Atlanta, reducing its length to Savannah by some thirty miles. Already the people of Putnam, Jasper and Newton counties are moving, and the old capital route, which was one of The Constitution's original lines of highway travel through Georgia, even now threatens to come into its own as the most prominent and most desirable road for travel southward to Savannah.

Another forceful argument in favor of the old capital route is the apparent utter indifference on the part of some of the counties upon the two routes between Macon and Atlanta. The road through Jonesboro, Griffin, Barnesville and Forsyth is well graded but except in Spalding has never been surfaced. Some of it is good but parts of it are as rough as corduroy. The road through Clayton county a distance of thirty miles, is at times intolerable and impassable. The eastern route through McDonough, Jackson and Indian Springs has never yet been opened up much less graded and surfaced. What do the counties between Atlanta and Macon propose to do about this situation? They cannot hope to be idle and expect travel to negotiate knee-deep mud and impassable ditches.

Georgia roads generally are in fairly good shape but here are instances that need attention, and need it quickly. Speaking generally of the Georgia highway situation, H. B. Hanger, of Kentucky one of the Dixie highway commissioners and one of the most eminent engineering contractors in America who built the most difficult and expensive part of the Catskill viaduct to New York city, makes the statement that in five years' time, with the wonderful system of road building in Georgia and the use of the convicts upon the roads, this state should and will have the best system of public roads of any state in the union. Georgia, he says, is setting a splendid example for the whole country, and he is never more amazed than at the splendid progress he witnessed during his official tour of the Georgia portions of the Dixie highway.

It is a genuine pity that any break in the splendid system promised, or any obstacle to its completion throughout the entire length and breadth of Georgia, should come about as a result of the apathetic or indifferent attitude of any single community.

Let us hope that these few communities which are backward in the necessary improvement of their most important roads will awaken to an early realization of their own best interests, and join heartily in that movement which means far more to them than it can possibly mean to all the rest of the state or anybody else.

SHOULD NAME THE PAPERS.

As a matter of justice to the many patriotic newspapers which have devoted their utmost effort toward the prevention of that sort of intervention in Mexico which would bring about useless and disastrous war, President Wilson should not hesitate to carry out his recently expressed threat to put his finger upon and name those newspapers of the "yellow" journal class which are doing their utmost to embroil us in a bushwhacking fight.

The president has charged that there are certain newspapers in the United States, of the so-called "yellow" class, which are making every effort to bring about such intervention on the part of this government in the Mexican situation as would result in prolonged warfare of the ambush type.

While there would be no question as to the outcome of a contest between this country and Mexico, it would be more than foolhardy for us to embark in an unnecessary warfare, the result of which would be disastrous to the United States regardless of the result.

We do not want Mexico. We have no earthly use for it, and we have made that very clear to the Mexican people. In fact, President Wilson has made it so clear that thus far no material objection has been offered to the entrance of United States troops into that country, in pursuit of an assassin who crossed the border and slaughtered innocent women and children. Our only purpose there is to get this man and administer to him and his following such punishment as is merited. This purpose has been undertaken and can be carried out with the consent of the Mexican authorities, and without involving the two governments in a struggle which at best would mean the loss of many American lives, the demoralization of business the country over, and an undertaking which would involve in the aggregate an expenditure of hundreds of millions, and perhaps billions of dollars before the work was completed.

It is as incomprehensible as it is unfortunate that there should be any one in this country newspaper or otherwise, who for personal or any other reason should seek to bring about a struggle which might result in the loss of some thousands of American lives not to speak of its tremendous cost.

If there are newspapers as President Wilson has charged which are seeking to bring this sort of bloodshed and destruction upon their own country, it is the president's duty to expose them and let the country know just what are the influences back of this apparently treasonable conspiracy. If publicity will prevent this catastrophe by all means let us have it.

"TOO LATE" IN THE AIR

The London Mail recently had a "vision" of trouble in the air with Zeppelins thick as clouds in a thunderstorm. So far they have not done much damage according to English estimates but the coming great raid of the air monsters over vast territory is the thought with a thrill in it for England, for one day or night there will come a hundred at a time. Of that day, or that darkness the cry goes that England may yet again be too late.

After all these months of preparation England's air defense is inadequate. This is evident by the ease and boldness with which the German air raiders come and go. It is stated that a German aeroplane has been seen flying up the Thames almost in sight of London, in broad daylight, and that German aeroplanes are now housed some 45 minutes only from the English coast.

It seems that the known lack of experts in the air business on the part of England has emboldened the enemy for at this late day there is talk in London of waiting until those appointed to manage the air defense learn the business!

There is a preparedness lesson in that which is enough to stir those in authority to instant action but it seems that the nation is to wait while Lord Curzon learns.

And in the meantime the enemy of the air is ready for the great raid when he will come a hundred at a time.

Though the price of paper is higher than the hopes of certain would be national candidates tons of it will be used in telling us how they're going to save the country for themselves.

Anyway, Villa beats our army airships flying.

New England is talking of spring. Probably Dixie sent her what she could spare of it.

Thrift. See Success—for it spells that.

Latest picture of Villa shows him in the act of galloping clear off of his 2 cent paper dollars.

To place a censor in Mexico is to make him "reckless what he does to spite the world."

Wouldn't blame the censor for slashing "Hurrahchieba."

Thrift makes for prosperity and prosperity does the rest.

The Home Call

BY FRANK L. STANTON

I THEY face afar by sun and star— As far as east from west. Hail beckoning hands Of the stranger lands, But it's Home at last, for Rest For a Spirit follows the feet that roam And stars and world winds sing of Home

II THE battle strife of life for life And red blades breast to breast But the lightning gleam Slays not the dream— The dream of Home and Rest They sleep not in shadows of Night's despair For the arms of Home are round them there

III A SPIRIT steals to their star watched sleep Where the battle thunders cease And the low laid brow Is holy now With Home's last kiss of Peace And from hills of the mighty and lowliest sod They take that kiss to Heaven and God

IV O STRIFE of Life, with the red thorns rife— O, storms that strike to slay! We pass from Night To the Shores of Light— To the Everlasting Day Peace, when the strife of the storm is past And the Lights in the windows of Home at last

He is the author of "Sylvan Lyrics" and other poems that have appeared in the leading American magazines. In the collaboration which had so many Augusta hearts in 1914, he left no valuable manuscript with the library of treasured books. His poem is offered with the spirit of the people of Augusta in which above their recent misfortune)

II The homeless and hungry she mothers With the warmth of her own bleeding breast— In the ruins of the fire that smothered She is climbing and meeting the test With an undaunted heart she is grateful To the friends who have offered her aid Yet stands in an hour so fateful Self reliant, serene, unafraid

ENTHUSIASM

By GEORGE FITZ Author of "At Good Old Swank"

Enthusiasm is to a man what gasoline is to a motor. Till a man with enthusiasm touch him off and he will revolve about an idea for years without stopping. Enthusiasm keeps more cranks in motion than steam does. It can get twice as much work out of a man as ambition can. Ambition will make a man burn midnight oil in his study, but enthusiasm will make a man fill a torch with kerosene and carry it for fourteen miles in a new suit on a cold October night. Enterprises are conducted by brains money and work but most of them were started by enthusiasm. There is always a wild-eyed enthusiast ready to help every new scheme into the world and on either to sit beside it and try to fan it into a long life after it is dead.

An enthusiast is a concentrated optimist. He can sit down on the coldest day in January and raise 1,100 bushels of potatoes on a sand plot in Idaho. He can take a personal friend by the arm on a cold windy corner and talk to him about a new airship line or an invention for tying shoestrings until that friend climbs a telephone pole to get away. If it were not for enthusiasts very few fraternal societies or subscription campaigns or patent furnaces would have a chance for life in this cruel world. No matter how unpromising a plan may be it is sure to ignite at least one enthusiast who will get up meetings and head subscriptions. If a project to put a red white and blue sash around Washington's monument were to be launched, it would find several supporters who would stop work for a week and come down town nights to attend mass meetings in its interest.

Some men not only have enthusiasm but are subject to it on the slightest provocation. They are in a continual state of enthusiasm but not on the same subject. These men are interesting but not useful. Tell one of these men that you have a project and he will cry "Hurrah for it! What is it?" Then he will leap to your aid and take your plan and add to it embellish it, put balconies and wings on it transform it into a project to rebuild the universe and then forget all about it because he has become interested in electing Hans Wagner president. Enthusiasm is as useful as the horse—but only when it is harnessed and has learned what "Whoa" means.

SUPERFLUOUS WORDS

Bill Jinks can't say. It's a pleasant day in just that many words. He has to talk clear around the clock till he saves wits till he goes way back to the almanac of the year when Adam died to find a day that was bright and gay like the one that is it today. He'll talk nine hours to describe the show that fell on the ninth of June and to prove to you that all rains talk three weeks. It's his swollen cranks and his lumpy clips a cog to show that wet will destroy the wheat that snow is but frozen fog. Now you and I as we testify can say. It's a pleasant morn and we will not stop to discuss the crop the pumpkins and oats and corn. But of Bill Jinks he is full of kinks and he simply can't be brief and his tongue must cluck till the welkers crack and he causes lots of grief. It grieves Bill Jinks that the whole world sprinkles with pain from his danc and song and he wonders why all the night sky whenever he comes along.

PAYING BILLS

There's nothing more to be said in paying your bills that paying a bill at the time when they're due it sends through your heart most enjoyable. The bill is a thing that has nothng to do with you. You're making the wheels of a village go round your're giving the workers the best kind of aid when you dig from your wallet the shilling and pound and pay up your bills in the palace of trade. You're firing the soul of the in a bank with a little jiggling the banker's key to give more your hanging new wreaths on a family tree when you pay up your bills at the doorman's store. That man is a hindrance and hurt to his town a brake on the wheels of his own neighborhood who views the collector with withering eye who does not pay up when the paying is good.

The Holland Letter

Paul Warburg member of the federal reserve board at Washington spoke for himself and for his fellow members when he said in an address delivered some weeks ago that it was deemed highly important that the United States be so situated that it will be possible to keep in this country the gold which has been received since the European war broke out and such consignments of gold as may come while the war lasts.

Within a day or two intimations have come from Washington that the federal reserve board is still such anxious that measures be taken whereby we can protect this gold. Presumably the most important of these measures will be consequent upon the entrance into membership of the federal reserve system of state chartered banks and trust companies.

The persistence with which the adoption of protective measures is urged is indicated as showing that the federal reserve board does not differ from those who are leaders in financial matters who believe that as soon as the European war is ended the United States will be flooded with a multitude of manufactured articles of low quality and put upon our market at low prices as will be certain to command a price. However either do not take the view that the danger of the import of such articles is very great. They say that if we continue to export American commodities exclusive of war munitions—for instance cotton wheat meat copper and manufactures—it is hard to see where such an export measure of trade can be established as would make it possible to demand gold in settlement of balances. In addition to that the United States is certain to become a creditor (through perhaps not for a long term of years) of England, France and Italy. It is likely Italy these creditor obligations representing loans made by the United States.

Copper and Foreign Trade. Some who have been studying the copper industry and who regard its recent development as one of the most important of our industrial life created a new outlook upon the European war. They are persuaded that those who are inclined to believe that immediately after the war our markets will be flooded with an immense quantity of copper other nations is not to take into account the relation which our copper industry is to have to our export trade.

The increase in the production of copper in 1915 is so great and so sudden a matter of fact that the copper industry has been convinced that the United States will produce this year two billion pounds of copper. One of those who are in a high authority respecting the copper situation on our way to the Pacific coast having pronounced that the United States will produce 2,000,000,000 pounds of copper in 1916. He went on to predict that Alaska will produce in 1916 25,000,000 pounds of copper. It is more than 100,000,000 pounds of copper that the United States will produce in 1916.

Some Copper Phenomena

The battle of Shiloh, April 6, 1862, was the greatest battle that up to that date had ever been fought on American soil.

The aggregate of the Confederate forces engaged was 33,000 men. At the close of the battle of April 6 Grant had been brought to the verge of ruin...

HISTORY OF THE WORK FOR SHILOH MONUMENT

The United States government in 1894 established the Shiloh National Park to carry out the will of an act of Congress which provided for the establishment of a national park in the southwest which served in the civil war like the comrades of other states.
The Shiloh National Park in Tennessee was established in 1894 and organized at that time by the act of Congress with Colonel Cornelius Cadie, of Cincinnati, Ohio, as chairman.
In the twenty-one years since that time the park has been created and every movement of the two days' battle recorded on tablets which will be placed in the park. More than one hundred monuments have been placed in this park in memory of the fallen soldiers of the Confederate army...

Southern Jobber is Educating Southern Buyers, Says Miss Caroline Thomas

"It has always been a mystery to me why some merchants in this section of the south persist in buying their merchandise from firms in the east, when they can get just as square a deal and just as good treatment from the other manufacturer and manufacturer's agent right at home," said Miss Caroline Thomas, advertising manager for the McClure Ten Cent company, yesterday.

"No better proof of this can be had than by comparing the spring and Easter catalogue—which we will have mailed out to all our customers by the middle of the coming week—with the first catalogue gotten out by the McClure Ten Cent company about six years ago. This was a small affair, about five by seven inches, and was printed entirely on the milligraph, no illustrations being used. It contained practically the entire line handled by the firm, and was issued only once a year.

"Our spring and Easter catalogue contains about forty pages, illustrating the goods most in demand for spring and early summer, including ladies' and children's millinery, spring ribbons, hosiery and the class of merchandise most in demand at this season of the year, and is only one of the number we now issue each year, showing the line of goods in season at the time of issue.

"BLUE BLOOD AND RED" AT STRAND MONDAY

New Fox Photoplay Full of Realistic Western Scenes.

A new western drama, Blue Blood and Red, from the studio of William Fox and starring George Walsh and Doris Law, is the opening attraction at the Strand theater and a picture of love and adventure that will no doubt go 'big' with picture lovers in Atlanta. It is filled with new ideas that are said to make it go with a jump. Realistic western scenes are shown with real cowboys and cowgirls and an actual cattle round up. Blue Blood and Red will be at the Strand two days—Monday and Tuesday.

A red-headed aristocrat himself is George Walsh, who is the hero. Fox fans will remember him as the lover in the 'Serpent' who with the strength of a wrestler fessed men about as so many matches.

Walsh young, handsome and strong is a Jarretown university man, and a crack amateur athlete and automobile racer. He acts his parts with that wholesomeness which comes of education and athletic training.

On Wednesday and Thursday B. S. Moss presents 'The Salamander,' a five-part production which is a Johnson's greatest novel. It is the story of a young girl's battle against the wolves of the city and the picture which will appeal to both those who have read the story and to those who like a thrilling film. 'Blue Bird' features will be shown on Friday. It presents Hobart Bosworth supported by a brilliant cast in a remarkable photoplay. The title 'The Yagud' indicates its Indian background. The scenes showing the religious rites and ceremonies of the Indians are most truthfully portrayed, and the location of the production was taken on the border line between the United States and Mexico.

Piedmont Orchestra
To Be Directed by
Mortimer Wilson

In an announcement that Mortimer Wilson is to be the director of the Atlanta Symphony orchestra, and one of the most masterly musicians who ever played here, is returning to Atlanta to direct the music of the new Piedmont theater at Forsyth and Luckie streets in good news to every music lover of the city.

Mr. Wilson is himself one of the greatest artists who ever came to the city. He is a native of the Georgia coast and is himself an instructor in the art of piano and has few equals in the south.

His direction of the Atlanta Symphony orchestra is a new organization was well proud of while it lasted. Recently he left the city to accept a position on the faculty of the Brenau Conservatory of Music.

By selecting a man to conduct the orchestra, the Piedmont Theater has secured the services of one of the most distinguished artists who compose the Piedmont's ten-piece orchestra.

Mr. Wilson is already in the city rehearsing his orchestra, which will make its debut Monday when the Piedmont theater opens. An entire program will be given the entire week.

GEORGE ALLISON HAS NEW FILM SERVICE

The International Film Service is a newcomer to Atlanta and has selected this particular location as its southern distributing point and its first job is a permanent connection with the city that it will be offered by George Allison, who for several years past is here to do the best of his work. He has here and brought them to a state of efficiency.

With the organization will have no announcements to make in the future that will have a pertinent bearing on the film situation in Atlanta. They are content for the present to offer Howard Estabrook and an Southern in a Wharton production for several story titled 'The Mysteries of Myra,' the film copy of which has been masterfully handled.

NEW SEEBURG ORGAN AT PIEDMONT THEATER

Hundreds of exhibitors who came to Atlanta to attend the exposition of motion picture trades made their headquarters at the Piedmont theater. The Player Piano company in the Chamber of Commerce building on Pryor street, Eugene Wilder, the president of the company, sent out an invitation to the trade to make the store their home during the week, and many of the exhibitors had their mail and programs sent to the Wilder place, and the Piedmont theater just as they would at home.

The entire staff of the company was brought to Atlanta to assist in entering the exhibition. Mr. Wilder spent hours demonstrating the several types of instruments on the floor of the Chamber of Commerce. The Piedmont theater in addition Mr. Larsen rendered concerts on the Seeburg instrument at the exposition and will during the week demonstrate at the Piedmont theater when Mr. Wilder has installed one of the newest types of Seeburg pipe organ.

MOVIE NOTES.

James Young, the latest addition to the Lasky staff of directors, will begin work on the picturization of the famous Belasco play, 'Sweet Kitty Bellairs,' in which Mae Murray will play the title role. It will be shown in Paramount theaters this spring.

After having played ragamuffins, dope fiends and anarchists for the past five months, Blanche Sweet will have an opportunity to wear evening gowns and fine clothes in the Lasky production of 'The Sowers,' a Paramount picture.

In sharp contrast to her newly acquired title as a motion picture magnate, gained by her admission to partnership in the Famous Players-Mary Pickford company, Mary Pickford will shortly appear in a factory story in which she is seen as the downtrodden little child laborer. It almost seems ironical that the highest paid actress in the world should in this Paramount picture portray the lowest paid child in the world—but it is all in the days' work.

Paul Dickey, the Lasky director, has already begun rehearsals for the production of the Clee Ridgely-Wallace play, 'Under the Mask,' a Paramount picture.

Pauline Frederick is very much elated over the fact that she played the unsophisticated girl as well as the spring mother in 'The Spider.' In the opinion of the Famous Players-Paramount staff of directors, will begin work on the picturization of the famous Belasco play, 'Sweet Kitty Bellairs,' a Paramount picture in which Mae Murray will play the title role.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG AT VICTORIA MONDAY

'The Yellow Passport' Affords Star Splendid Photoplay Vehicle.

Clara Kimball Young, often spoken of as the handsomest woman on the screen, has been booked by the management of the Victoria theater for one day Monday, in one of its greatest successes, and also the last one in which she has starred. 'The Yellow Passport' is a picture which tells a story of a young girl who is pitted against the grim power of the entire secret Russian police and the sinister Black Hundred. It is a powerful story well told.

There is a wealth of gripping heart interest in 'Sealed Lips,' the Quintana's great five-part photoplay which is coming to the Victoria theater on Tuesday. While William Courtney is the star of the piece, the principals are not to be overlooked as they shine by their own lustre. Dean Matland, the impulsive reckless and somewhat selfish ministerial student who suffers mental tortures which later cause his death, has a realistic exponent in Arthur Ashley, and weak and suffering Alma Lee, as portrayed by Mary Charleson, is a character which will appeal to all those who realize that human nature is prone to err but can only bear so much in the way of suffering of the mind.

Florence Reed in 'The Cowardly Way' is the attraction on Wednesday and on Thursday the Metro Pictures corporation presents the eminent stage star Edmund Breeze in 'The Lure of Heart's Desire,' a photoplay of vital human interest.

Friday Pathe presents Jackie Saunders, William Conklin and Paul Linnors in 'The Shrine of Happiness,' a five-part Gold Rooster play and produced by Balboa.

Can you read Chinese? Hazel Dawn, the Famous Players-Paramount star, has received a long pale blue silk scroll from a wealthy Chinese merchant which is covered with wild weird gods, splashes and cross-crosses resembling composite photograph of shorthand symbols after an all-night jamboree through the Famous Players-Paramount.

Though she has every confidence in the good intentions of the donor, feminine curiosity demands that she learn just what the fantastic characters mean. So if you are a student of Chinese, please raise your right hand.

BUSHMAN AS SOLDIER AT ALAMO 2 TUESDAY

Popular Metro Star in 'The Wall Between' Portrays Dashing Officer.

The unpardonable sin to Julia Lan dis was drink. And it was the one vice of Walter Norman, the man who loved her. The gripping story of their struggle for happiness is vividly set forth in 'The Unpardonable Sin,' the World Film drama at the Alamo Monday.

In the role of Norman the habitual moderate fighting for what is dearer than life to him, is Holbrook Blinn opposite him plays Lila Hayward Chester a native of Richmond, and a true beauty.

Francis Bushman and Beverly Bayne are back again! They come to the Alamo Tuesday in a brand new Metro wonderplay, 'The Wall Between,' an army play in which Bushman takes the role of a dashing officer. Many of the scenes for this stirring picture were taken in Savannah Ga., where the two stars, Bushman and Beverly Bayne were until a few weeks ago.

In order to give all the movie fans a chance to see Bushman and Beverly Bayne in 'The Wall Between,' and Miss Mayo, too the management has arranged to open the doors of the theater as early as 9 o'clock Tuesday morning.

The devil and the angel, who fight for the possession of the soul of every man, furnished the title for the Equitable feature at the Alamo No. 2 Thursday. 'Miss and the Angel' starring Jane Grey the girl actress who has had a remarkable career since her debut in the movies.

Kitty Gordon's famous back, the gleaming white shoulders that everybody remembers who saw her at the Forsyth last winter will be on the screen at the Alamo No. 2 Friday in the World production 'As in Looking Glass,' a society drama in which Kitty wears the most daring and stunning gowns that ever were moulded around her shapely figure.

Miss Gordon takes the role of a fascinating adventuress who enslaves every man she meets by her siren charms.

Charles Stallings, formerly of the 'American' in Santa Barbara, is now connected with the Famous Players-Paramount force as property man for Director Frank Lloyd co operating with Director Bill Daly.

STAR STORIES & MOVIES

Behind the Screens WITH BRITT CRAIG

We don't care how much glamor there is to the mercury lamps and scenic tinsel and camera batteries of the moving picture studio, the quickest way of forming an acute distaste for such an establishment is to have someone send you a photograph of your best girl being put through a scene by a stern-faced, shirt-sleeved director and a haughty camera man with a cigar stub in his face.

"The film's fattest, Roscoe Arbuckle, of the Keystone, saw the Hippodrome show Monday of last week. After the performance he visited his mother-in-law at Los Angeles to leave immediately. She must not miss it, she left at once, according to information for New York.

Variety Note. There is also, perhaps an answer to this. Roscoe must have been planning to go to Los Angeles.

Stardust News From California. Romaine Flying drove over in his big car last week. Coast Picture News. Eddie Dillon is making a motor trip. Variety News. Marie Empress motored down to the beach Thursday. Film flashes. The Woman Who Gives. Coming Feature. Here's to woman. Who gives and forgives. Here to man. Who takes and forgets.

Quilcha Kiddie, Alan. It is very comforting, says Alan Dale in his "Among Other Things" column, to know that vampires are going out of fashion. We've had such an awful dose of 'em lately, but they do pull. As soon as a woman is known as attractive pretty and alluring she is called a vampire. Surely there could be fat, ugly and vulgar vampires. It isn't fair to vampireize all the nice girls. No, Alan Dale, you know that nobody would get close enough to a fat, ugly vampire to get bitten.

Immediate and skilled medical attention given all sufferers from vampire bites. Positive cure guaranteed—money back if fails. Prices within reach of all patients. PATENT INSTITUTION.

Think Up Your Own Head for This. Geraldine might as well devote all of her time to the movies if this is the sort of music grand opera she is going to give the world. We quote from a prominent New York paper in which "Sams Gene," at the Metropolitan was reviewed.

"She raised her skirts knee high when Leo, put on her slippers, and when her dancing master, Despreux, tried to lead her to court, she fell on one knee and then raised her court dress fully, then hit and rubbed the injured surface sympathetically—and in full view."

RIPPLING REVIEWS By Vera Womanly

Most Bridegroom. In the last bridegroom scene some clever acting in the picture has plenty of a reason. A fall from a high chair proved most amusing. Katherine Harris is very pretty on the screen. She was an evening of black and white with a bodice of jet. A lace and chiffon negligee was worn over a brocade nightgown. In the wedding scene the bride was crowned in lace with a long bodice of satin.

Charles Richman takes himself too seriously in pictures, with the result he seldom smiles. He is the hero of "Submarine D" Eleanor Woodruff, playing opposite him, plays in pretty style, but dresses poorly. Only once did she look well, and that in a white evening cloak with a bow for collar.

"The Woman's Law." There isn't a better screen player of our time than Florence Reed. In the feature "The Woman's Law" her costume were beautiful. One negligee was exceptionally handsome. It was of white chiffon made in long flowing lines. The neck and sleeves had fringing. A house gown had a long-waisted skirt in chiffon with a border of brocade. An evening frock of tulle was cut in points and had bands of satin. There was a dress of charmeuse, made with wide pannels. The bodice was of velvet, very short and tight-fitting. The picture can't be very clear to those who haven't read the story, but it is splendid. Margaret Clark, the Paramount star, is responsible for the announcement that as soon as she can find an adequate speaking play she is going to abandon the movies for the legitimate.

names under the circumstances, but I said as it was the first time, the best thing to do was to say nothing till she had a lawyer to do the talking for her.

"Whom was the note she gave you addressed to?"

The question seems to surprise her. "Why, you know," she stammers, then laughs. "See, I forgot. I'll tell you the court. The note was addressed to Mr. Philip Langdon."

Three New Witnesses In the 11th Episode, "Case of Mary Page"

The next film episode in "The Strange Case of Mary Page" shows three newcomers among the witnesses in the now famous trial. Philip Langdon, in introducing these new witnesses, thus addresses the court:

Your honor, and Gentlemen of the Jury: Ever since the beginning of this trial one point has remained a mystery. The state has admitted the ability to offer evidence on this most important subject, and therefore, I crave the sentence of the court to direct proceedings this morning to show you where and how Mary Page spent the hours between the death of David Pollock and her surrender to the law on the following morning. I shall call as my witnesses, Kate O'Neill.

"And the man, he laughs," Kate testifies. "So that's what's come of you. Well, forget it. My Gawd, you ain't guilty just because you was in the hotel. They can't connect it up with you. I give you my word. Oh, thank God; thank God," she whispers, and begins to cry in order than ever, and the man shook her again. "Cut out the waterworks," he says, angrily, "and get into this seat, unless you beat the bulls to pull you in."

The next witness is Dennie Gallagher, a private investigator. He verifies all that the buxom cook had already told. The next man with the hard, tired, gleaming eyes was Agnes Keenan.

"I am sorry, Miss Keenan," Langdon says, "to have to ask you such a question, but were you not an occupant of a cell in the Fifteenth Street police station on the night of the raid of Barker's gambling rooms?"

"I was."

"Had you a cell to yourself?"

"Well, at first I thought it was a private room, but a little later they showed a girl in."

"Was that girl the defendant—Mary Page?"

But she looked some different then. She was all dolled up in an evening gown, and hadn't worn a cloak. I wondered who she was and tried to make her talk, but she seemed looney. I thought it was the girl's at first, but when I found out, she was plain batty. I got scared and called the guard. After a bit she began to talk. It was incoherent at first, about Dave, and the big house, and she wasn't Sadie or Maggie. Then she seemed to come to herself and asked who I was and where she was.

"Did you ask her name?"

"No. It ain't etiquette to ask

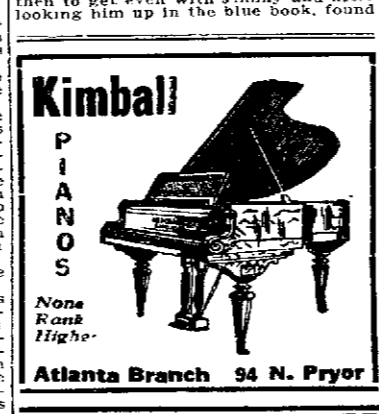

"The Social Pirates" Expose Male Wolf In Second Story

In the second story of the new Kalem series, "The Social Pirates," by George Bronson Howard, and being shown at the Grand theater every Tuesday, Marion Sais and Ollie Kirby play with undiminished ardor and aptitude the parts of Mona and Mary in another exciting episode, entitled "The Corsican Sisters."

Mona and Mary, while one day sitting in the park, waiting and hoping for something exciting to turn up, were taken by surprise when a taxicab stops near them, a young man jumping out, plunges across the lawn and through the bushes as if trying to escape observation. He, however, was not quick enough for from a pursuing taxicab a woman, following, called him by name "Jimmy, Jimmy." The young man seeing himself cornered, turned and met his fair pursuer. She then led him to a bench and, although invisible to Mona and Mary, they could hear every word of their conversation. It was an impassioned plea of the woman to the man not to hit her, as she could not hit without him. Mona and Mary learned from the conversation that the young man's name was Jimmy Hazard, and made a note of this fact for future reference. After the young woman had become hysterical, Hazard called a policeman and with calm brutality asked him to protect him from the fair pursuer. She then led him to get away from her.

Mona and Mary determined there and then to get even with Jimmy and after looking him up in the blue book, found that he was well connected, was a man of wealth and belonged to several of the city's most exclusive clubs. They found out a little more about Hazard before it seemed safe to evolve a plan for collecting any part of their bill against society from him. What they found out was both encouraging and the reverse. He was susceptible to women, but not as Reynolds and Holbrook had been. He was spoiled, Mona said. Resistance angered him to the point of making him lose interest.

"I shouldn't wonder," said Mona. "What he needs is a woman of real character."

"Yes—and I think a woman of that sort could have been very easily any time, if she'd been interested enough in him to take the trouble to do it. Mona—I begin to see a way. Do you remember that beauty doctor you were talking about a few weeks ago? The one who guaranteed to change your whole appearance?"

No one who had known Mona before her transformation would have been likely to recognize her when, one afternoon, she drove in a taxicab to a spot about half a block from the Empire club—the one of his city clubs, as she knew, which he usually frequented at this time of day. She had a little while to wait, but at last she saw him come down the steps. She alighted at once, paid her driver, and saw him go off. Then walking slowly, she advanced toward Hazard, quite elaborately unconscious of his presence.

Mona succeeds in becoming acquainted with him and declares that she is a Corsican issue with her younger sister. Hazard calls on Mona and his fickle affections lead him into the trap of showing too much attention to Mary. A number of thrilling events keep Hazard in a maze of excitement between the two girls, who, as temperamental Corsicans, are intense in love and hate.

Finally Hazard plans to flee with Mary and arranges to meet her at 10 o'clock at his apartment. At 10 o'clock the bell rings—and Mona appears. She is closely followed by a detective, who forces from her a confession that she has killed Mary in her jealous rage. Hazard has barely turned the corner in his panic-stricken flight when Mona and the detective—who was really an accomplice—join in a hearty laugh and in a few moments Mary arrives to add to the rejoicing over the success of the plan to humiliate the conceited heart-breaker.

Atlanta hostesses many of them are making out their opera week programs for these programs must be made ahead to avoid the confusion which arises in the complexities of the social side of the artistic feast. As usual Atlanta social clubs will move than do their part opera week. The evenings of Monday Wednesday Friday and Saturday the Capital City club will have table d'hotel suppers following the opera, guests are asked to make their reservations as far ahead of the time as possible. There will be dancing also, the ball room to be opened and an orchestra of music provided.

The opera scheduled for the premiere is Samson and Delilah this the first presentation of the opera in Atlanta. It is decidedly a Caruso night in that in no other opera is the great tenor given better opportunity for the expression of his genius. The opera is a long one and begins promptly at 8 o'clock. Hostesses are entertaining that evening at dinner previous to the opera will no doubt arrange a simple repast, with supper afterward in view. The rule will be strictly enforced, declare the directors of the Music Festival association which will require that no one enter the Auditorium after the act begins until the act ends.

THE TUESDAY PROGRAM.
The operatic event of Tuesday is the matinee. Madame Butterfly with Geraldine Farrar singing. The matinee begins promptly at 2 o'clock which would admit of only the informal luncheon or dejeuner preceding. All the clubs will have provision for tea following the matinee. That evening the Piedmont Driving club gives its dinner and ball of opera week with out if the weather permits will be used for the entertainment of guests. Reservations will have to be made ahead for even with the fullest facilities of the club only a limited number of people can be adequately served. At this time the directors of the Metropolitan Opera company and distinguished visitors will be guests of honor.

THE OPERA BARBECUE
The incongruous as opera and barbecue may seem in the minds of those who do not know there was no entertainment provided for the opera visitors last year which gave more pleasure than the barbecue at the Druid Hills club. The barbecue will be repeated this year on Wednesday of opera week and arrangements are being made to assure the enjoyment of the occasion. The club will be thrown open for dancing afterwards and the tea dance of the beautiful La Sonambula is the featured opera of Wednesday. A limited number of seats will be reserved for the opera and sung here thirty years ago by Emma Abbott. It has proven one of the greatest successes of opera this season and will have a wonderful patronage here.

'AIDA' ON THURSDAY
No more brilliant presentation of opera has ever been given in Atlanta than Aida in which Caruso, Homer and Gadski were the stars. Aida is the Thursday matinee performance which will introduce a galaxy of stars, and it is predicted, draw one of the largest houses of the season. After the opera there will be tea served at all the clubs, and Thursday night will be the opera dinner dance at the Druid Hills club. It will be recalled that the dinner dance of last year at that club was a notably brilliant occasion. Guests are reminded to make their reservations for that occasion as early as possible.

THE PERFORMANCE OF 'MARTHA'
Friday evening is the presentation of 'Martha' comes another Caruso night with all the brilliancy which the opera has won in New York this season. The music of the opera because of its beauty is well known in its beautiful arias. There are a number of private entertainments being planned for that day—luncheons and teas—and there will be the usual supper part as after the performance at the Capital City club.

THE LAST PERFORMANCES
In the matinee performance of Saturday the Meistersinger comes the occasion of the one German opera, with a cast of the most gifted people in the Metropolitan company. The evening performance is La Tosca, bringing Geraldine Farrar in one of her greatest roles in the minds of many her greatest. The social end will come in supper parties at the Capital City club, all the clubs keeping open house that evening. The hotels of the city show reservations for opera far exceeding those of any previous year in Atlanta's history of grand opera.

RAILROAD FACILITIES
Through Mr Joseph R. Davidson chairman of the Southeastern Passenger association, a schedule of round trip rates have been arranged at a reduction for opera visitors. The schedule announced follows:
The special round trip from Augusta Ga is $2.50 as against $3.55 the regular cost the round trip rate from Macon is $3 as against $4.40 the round trip rate from Savannah is $4.15 as against $5.50 the round trip rate from Jacksonville is $10.30, as against $11.70. These cities are merely picked out at random to show the average reductions which are granted from all points. The reduction in every case it will be found amounts to approximately 35 per cent.

A RULE TO BE ENFORCED
A rule to be enforced at the performances of opera this season is that prohibiting the departure from their seats of opera patrons before the end of the last act. Each year this abuse has directly interfered with the enjoyment of the most beautiful part of the music. The stars themselves complain of the noise and music lovers generally are disturbed by it.

OPERA VISITORS

Atlanta Children Rehearsing For Shakespearean Pageant

The occasion of Shakespeare's death anniversary offers a rare opportunity for Atlanta to have a first outdoor pageant of large dimensions and plans which are now well under way by a committee from the local center of the Drama League indicate that the city will maintain its reputation for doing big things in a big way well in praise of the master writer of all time. Atlanta will present an impressive spectacle of the best known characters from his plays on a scale which was never paralleled in his own times when masques and revels were held by royal command and for royal sport. When it is realized that approximately one thousand characters will be employed over seventy five of which are speaking parts on two immense open-air stages, or above the other and that there will be a great scene with three star ty professionals, eight dances, three choruses and numerous songs it will become apparent that the pageant is destined to be the most stupendous undertaking in the city's artistic and educational history in addition to the people appearing on the stage there will also be an orchestra of large proportions a chorus of five hundred voices and a vast number of school children in costume. The performance will be made as

The Diamond Is April's Birthstone

The pretty custom of giving birthstones is the outgrowth of the ancient tradition that the destinies of individuals are governed by certain gems which influence the different months.

The birthmonth stone for April is the Diamond. The Diamond is the emblem of innocence.

This custom is a happy one, and is to be commended for the stones are imperishable, and the sentiments ascribed to them represent the accumulated traditions of many ages, races and peoples.

"She who from April dates her years
Diamonds shall wear, lest bitter tears
For vain repentance flow, this stone
Emblem of Innocence, is known"

See the special display of new Easter jewelry shown in our south window.

A postal request will bring you our large 1916 illustrated catalogue and diamond booklet.

FROHSIN'S

Society

East Atlanta Membership.

One of the most enthusiastic meetings held in East Atlanta was the membership contest of the Parent-Teacher association on Tuesday, March 28. Mrs. Ed Fischer and Mrs. Bert Niall were the captains, with the assistance of twenty ladies and one month to work. Mrs. Niall and her assistants gained College Park Club.

The College Park Woman's club will meet on Wednesday afternoon, April 3, at 3 o'clock, in the High school auditorium, with the president, Mrs. B. D. Gray, in the chair. Mrs. T. L. Proctor, chairman of junior civics, is in charge of the afternoon's program. With the generous co-operation of Miss Mary Gray, principal, and the remaining teachers of the three College Park schools, she has arranged a program most inspirational. The music has been arranged by Miss Annie Thornton; a trio of special charm to be featured. The meeting is to be an open one and a cordial invitation is extended to all interested.

Silver Tea.

One of the most enjoyable entertainments of the season was the silver tea given by the Young People's Missionary society of Wesley Memorial church last Friday evening. Music, contests, games, recitations and a debate were rendered by the Inman Park Dramatic club. A silver offering was made for Korea, and the Bennett Memorial in Kentucky. The society is deeply indebted to the Inman Park Dramatic club which furnished the entertainments for the evening.

For Miss Rauschenberg.

Mrs. Samuel Watkins entertained Miss Marie Rauschenberg at a handkerchief shower Thursday afternoon. The color scheme was chosen in pink and white. The apartments were beautifully decorated in pink roses and Easter lilies. Little M. G. G. Watkins presented the bride-to-be with a dainty pink and white parasol filled with hand-made handkerchiefs. Miss Bell Roy and Miss Elois McWhorter served punch. There were twenty guests. Miss Rauschenberg was dressed in blue Georgette crepe and wore a large picture hat.

Baptist Rally.

The second quarterly rally of the Young Woman's Auxiliary of the Atlanta Baptist association will be held in the West End Baptist church Friday, April 7, at 3:30 p. m. Mission study demonstrations will be the principal feature of this rally. The meeting will be presided over by Miss Ida V. Rhoad, one of the Y. W. A. secretaries. It is hoped that every Y. W. A. in the association will be represented at this meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to every one interested in the work of the Young Woman's Auxiliary.

Y. W. C. A. News.

At a joint meeting of the Clover and S. I. S. clubs Monday evening, Miss Sarah Converse, chairman of the physical committee, presented a plan for the summer camp that was received with the greatest enthusiasm by the club members. Last year through the generosity of Mrs. George Harrington, the association had the use of her ten house near Vinings for week-end parties of business young women. In this way the club tried out the summer camp plan and found that it could be made a feature of the greatest value to the association. This year it is planned to take a larger house and to extend the privileges of the camp to any group of association members. For week-ends or entire weeks, arrangements being made in advance with the physical committee.

The announcement that Miss Betzner, physical director, is preparing a festival to be given later in April, has been met with the greatest interest by the many friends of the association who have enjoyed the highly artistic quality of her work and who have been astonished to find anything so finished in amateur gymnasium work. The festival this year will be of somewhat different character from those given before, the theme being the acceptance of the Christian ideal over the Greek ideal beauty. The story is that of a boy who has the vision that he is to be a great poet, and that to attain this he must find "The heart of the world." His search for the heart of the world constitutes the action of the pantomime and makes a beautiful and inspiring appeal to the noblest motives of human action. In Miss Betzner's original work the physical is always the leading motif, and this, together with the artistic detail work made the success of all her presentations, satisfying, as they do, the heart's longing for the true and the beautiful. Two hundred of Miss Betzner's pupils will be used in the festival, and very general interest is being taken in the preparations for its presentation.

The Shakespeare class for business women led by Miss Wingo, will meet Monday evening at 7 o'clock, the play being "The Winter's Tale." On Thursday evening, Miss Wingo gave by special request at the Jean Witham club an account of "Some Ramblings in Italy," emphasizing particularly visits to the homes of the graves of certain well beloved English poets who have been dwellers in this land of art and beauty.

The board of directors will meet on Friday, the 7th. Mrs. Witham, president, calls attention to the change from the second to the first Friday for the month of April.

Silver Tea.

The Soldiers Home committee of the Atlanta chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, will give a large silver tea on Thursday evening, April 6, from 4 to 5 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. A. C. McHan, 54 E. Fourteenth street. A very delightful program has been arranged and all daughters, friends and those interested will receive a cordial welcome.

Shantung and Linen The Sports Dress for Spring

Sports are spreading their influence—once it covered suits and coats, now skirts and even dresses know the atmosphere.

Summer is the Dress season: Summer is the outdoor season. The logical thing is the Sport dress. Shantung is the rich, artistic material that combines in gay colors—broad stripes are used in every sense—crosswise and bias.

Sport Skirts The favor for separate Skirts increases with the season. Blouse styles were never prettier, and the popularity of silk sweaters and sports coats generally has created a wider need than ever before for the separate skirt. The new sport skirt is cleverly designed in broad stripes, many crosswise or bias, all highly colored; belted, pocket and button trimmed. Shantung, wool and wash skirts.

Protective Measures Proposed By Merchants of Atlanta

The more one reads after the campaign being directed by the Retail Merchants' Association of Atlanta to establish certain rules regarding returnable purchases, the more one is convinced that the measures are more protective than exacting, and that it has been unduly lax of merchants to have allowed the abuses on the part of whimsical customers as they have. To state that the majority of women abuse the privileges which Atlanta retail merchants have accorded their customers longer than the merchants of any other city Atlanta's size would be unjust, for the majority of women do not abuse the privileges, but the merchants have records to prove that there are enough women who do abuse the privileges to cause a direct percentage loss to merchants, with a reactionary effect upon employees and upon customers themselves.

The Sanitary Side.
Aside from this more business phase of the movement and just provision as the time limit for a returnable purchase there is the sanitary phase of the question which would place a direct obligation upon merchants in the matter of protecting the conscientious purchaser.

Try This If You Have Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon, apply it at night when retiring, use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

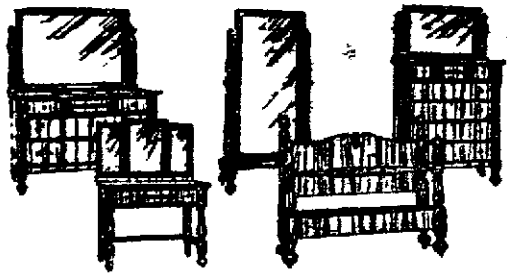

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

IN THE THEATERS :-:

Keith Vaudeville.

(At the Forsyth)

Sophie Tucker whose title of Queen of Ragtime is undisputed and whose prowess as a singer of new songs is unequalled in Atlanta this week to top the Keith vaudeville bill Manager George Hickman offers at the Forsyth. She heads a program of seven big acts including such features as the lavishly staged "A Night in the Park" in which Lillian Bruce and the Mecca Four are featured the Modern Vaudeville Follies of Sylvia Clark and Al Gerard a snappy musical comedy and a variety of additional offerings in which upward of a dozen artists appear.

Sophie Tucker holds the distinction of being the most up to the minute of singers. Her singing Sophie Tucker sings in the latest unless it be an occasional old favorite that everybody waits. The consequence is she knows more songs than the average music publisher.

She is one of the most well known artists in the world and for a long time already are here in Atlanta. Her originality is such that she has created a new style of singing and drop in a new or a better one. Her popularity is such that she is a different person for her almost every week.

"The Prince Chap"

next week for New York where they begin an indefinite engagement in the Plaza theater one of Manhattan's most exclusive playhouses.

The Prince Chap was written by Edward Peeples and ran for an entire season in New York. Mr Peeples is also a thor of such successes as "The Little Rebel" "The Call of the Chick" "The Love Route" "The Silver Girl" and "Richard the Brazen".

The story is a beautiful romance dealing with an artist's love for an adopted daughter William Peyton a young American sculptor is in love with Alice Travers an American girl who goes abroad to study that he might attain fame and wealth and the hand of the sweethearts.

Three years elapse and Claudia now eight has become one of the big influences in the artist's life. Alice has fiancee visits London and arranges the child call him daddy. Growing suspicious the sweetheart later accuses him of being the father.

She demands that he make plain his innocence by marrying her. He declines she breaks her betrothal vows and subsequently marries another.

Eight years pass Claudia is now eighteen. She is a beautiful girl and comes to her father's studio.

realize the propriety of an elderly housekeeper. Employing one she meets the resentment of Claudia.

Jack Rodney, chum of Peyton, proposes to Claudia, and when she refuses it is then he learns that she has cherished a secret—her love for her foster father. Rodney learns that Peyton too has a similar secret. He buries the two together.

The Bunting cast is unusually effort in the portrayal of "The Prince Chap" having produced it frequently before they are well versed in lines and stage business.

The same commendable cast that has been supporting Miss Bunting in her past successful offerings through the long engagement and which includes George Whitaker, Rollin P. Holden, Edward Menzies, Henry Sherwood, Margaret Lee, Margaret Ryan, Eva Sargent and Albert Vees will support her in this week's production.

GREET PLAYERS HERE THURSDAY AFTERNOON

Much Interest Is Shown in Their Appearance Here This Week.

The Henkle company has seen of the guitar and mandolin club of Georgia. They are to play an overture and entracte for their performance of "A Comedy of Errors" on the Tech campus Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The open air players are here for two appearances of the same play the other being at Agnes Scott Wednesday afternoon.

Atlantans have always shown a keen interest in the productions of this company since its first appearance here in 1907. They have established a deserved reputation of being faithful interpreters of Shakespeare and their coming is awaited with unusual interest.

There is, too, an added local interest on account of Miss Ila Del Frost an Atlanta girl who will play one of the leading roles. Miss Frost's parents live in the city and she has a large circle of friends who will look forward to seeing her as an interpreter of Shakespeare.

Miss Herndon Kearns, one of the strikingly gifted actresses with this company has a nation wide reputation for her well known work in the English class at Wellesley College.

Others with the company which is composed of college graduates for the most part are George Somers, Jeanette Newcomb, Cameron Mathews, Violet Hecroft and George Hare.

The company will arrive Tuesday evening. Miss Kearns will be the guest of Miss Frost at the latter's home.

POSTAL RECEIPTS HIGHEST FOR MARCH IN CITY'S HISTORY

March 1916 was the greatest March in the history of Atlanta so far as postal receipts go.

Figures tabulated by Postmaster Polking Jones and his cashier yesterday covering the month show that $175,618.89 was received at the Atlanta post office a gain of $10,195.74 or 6.1 per cent over the total receipts of $165,423.15 during March, 1915.

There have been months in the history of the Atlanta office during the holiday season that have shown higher total receipts for the month, but never since the office was established has a March come up to the standard of that of the current year.

HOT WATER?

That's a modern need easily satisfied—
Get a Gas Water Heater and be comfortable

If you've been depending on a furnace, your supply ends the minute the furnace goes out. An Automatic Gas Water Heater serves the same purpose the whole year 'round, with unlimited HOT water instantly at any faucet. No home of plenty is complete without this service.

Now Is the Time to Equip Your Home With Real Hot Water Service

For purposes less exacting than those filled by the Automatic Instantaneous Gas Water Heater, the Circulating Gas Water Heater serves admirably. It is attached to the tank. After lighting the heater you can draw HOT water for a bath or any similar need about as soon as you're ready.

Our minimum price on these circulating heaters has been $15. On May 1 it will go up to $17, cost of materials having forced the increase.

For this month only we offer them at $12.75 On easy terms, $2 down, $2 a month Connected free

We want every home in Atlanta that lacks and should have one of these Circulating Gas Water Heaters to get one before the price goes up. Therefore the temporary reduction. Your chance ends with this month—April, 1916.

"THE PRINCE CHAP"

Little Emma as Claudia from Childhood to Sweet Sixteen.

Final Week Miss Bunting and her company opens Plaza Theater, New York City, Easter Monday.

Capital City club, and Mrs. Inman, also the officers and directors of the club and their wives, will compose the receiving party. Assisting them will be the newly appointed board for the country club, which includes a house committee and golf committee.

The house committee is under the chairmanship of Joseph Brown, Conally, the members being Epps Brown and Jack Lewis. John S. Cohen is chairman of the golf committee, assisted by Ernest Otisley and Cobb Caldwell.

While the two clubs have the same board of officers and directors, Mr. Inman has wisely appointed a board of two special committees to manage the activities of the country club, which has the same membership as the town home of the club.

Improvements Made.
The improvements which will be especially noted at the formal opening begin at the very entrance of the club (recreation and cover every inch of the now wonderful golf course of eight-hundred holes. Turning into the driveway leading to the club, there is on each side the symmetrical boundary of the Lowland, extending both to the right and to the left of them a landscape which carries the eye on to the most beautiful sites in the country.

The entrance to the club is in the dignity of its architecture, a perfect type of country club house, with porches on each side and terraces between the entrance and the main building. The entrance is wide and impressive, one with a hospitable atmosphere, even before the music is heard or the guests within in seen. Once within in the living room or entrance hall of the club, there is the suggestion of openness about the interior architecture which in one of the advantages of the club, and which especially adapts it to summer entertaining. The windows are deep and reach the floor, and the two apartments composing the lower floor may be turned into one, with ample space for the seating and comfortable service of several hundred people. Added to this are the large side porches, while from the rear porch is commanded one of the club's most beautiful views. Beyond is the picturesque golf course, while at the base of the terraced gardens in the rear of the club is the lake. For the lake are planned many water sports during the summer, to include regattas, swimming, croquet, etc. The boat house has been enlarged, and special bath house built for ladies.

The Ball Room.
The ball room is on the top floor of the club house, and is enclosed in glass. The windows opening on porches to be used as a promenade. The dimensions of the ball room make it ample for the entertainment of even the largest number of the club on any occasion, and the general arrangement and decoration have received artistic consideration.

The first floor decorations and furnishings are new, and the ground floor has increased facilities in lockers, showers, etc., to accommodate both men and women patrons of the club. An excellent cuisine will be established under expert management, and the members are assured ready service at all times. There will be a series of dinner-dances during the summer, and other entertainments in the nature of orchestra concerts at the hour of tea, or at the conclusion of the series of golf tournaments are being planned. Tennis courts will be established at the club. No out-of-door sport, which the members desire, which will not be given them.

Even before the formal opening of the club in April, each afternoon finds the club and porches filled with interested members looking over the improvements and enjoying their tea and watching the expert management.

The enlarging and improvement of the country club of the Capital City club gives a country club to nearly every section of suburban Atlanta. There is the East Lake Athletic club, Mr. Ass G. Candler, Jr., president; the Druid Hills club, Mr. H. M. Atkinson, president; the Piedmont Driving club,

Mr. J. H. Nunnally, president while in course of building is the country club of the Standard club, which promises to be one of the most beautiful country clubs in the South. Mr. Lewis Newlet, the president.

KEYSTONE FOUNDRY BUYS THE PRINTERS' SUPPLY COMPANY

The Keystone Type Foundry has purchased the Southern Printers' Supply Company and will merge the business of that concern with that of the Keystone branch in their present location on Forsyth street.

C. H. Johnson, president of the Southern Printers' Supply company, is also president of the Dodson Printers' Supply company. In disposing of his interest in the type and material business handled by the Southern Printers' Supply company, it enables him to devote his entire time and attention to recently added new lines and further important additions and expansions contemplated by the Dodson company.

The Keystone Type Foundry opened a branch house in Atlanta several years ago, and was then, and it is today, the only type foundry branch house in all the southern states east of Texas. Their faith in the future of the South is fully evidenced by their greater investment at this time. Mr. Rowley, of the general offices in Philadelphia, is here arranging the transfer, and in an interview says:

"There is nothing unusual about the transaction. The Keystone and the Southern Printers' Supply company have been friendly competitors and the best move is usually agreeable, as it permits the Keystone to give southern printers better service than ever before and enables Mr. Johnson to devote his entire time to the management and supervision of his other business, which he has spent his life in developing. As a branch house city, Atlanta was originally selected by us not only because we like the city and the enterprise of its citizens, but because we had complete confidence in the development of the South and in Atlanta being the logical distributing

Quicker Long Distance Service

At Reduced Rates From Atlanta to Many Points

Quicker long distance service at reduced rates is now offered Bell Telephone users between Atlanta and certain points within a radius of fifty miles, under the new two-number method of operating.

In using this service you simply tell the exchange operator the name of the town and the telephone number just as though making a local call. (For instance, Griffin-500.) You hold the line until the telephone answers or the operator makes report. Your station is immediately connected with the distant station and the charge is made if the distant station answers. Under this method no particular party is secured and calls cannot be reversed on the called station.

Do not call Long Distance when making a two-number call.

If you wish a particular party, the call should be made by calling Long Distance and telling her the name of the party, location, etc., in the usual manner. The regular rates will be charged for particular party service.

Upon request the Manager's office will furnish you a list of telephone numbers of subscribers in these cities whom you call frequently. The Information operator will give you telephone numbers not on your list.

Two-number rates to these points and the particular party rates are as follows:

The Spring Bride

A Bridal Bouquet.

The New Season's Glimpses of Bridal Fashions

How the Newer Skirt Form Is Adapted to the Later Bridal Gowns.

One of the Popular Veils.

AFTER all, if one of the brides of the romantic past were to return to a modern ceremonial, she would not find the occasion itself so greatly different in its forms as the space of time might suggest. So much of what is ancient has survived the centuries that march and pomp and solemnity might all seem much as they were in the days of yore. But when it came to the gowns the girl of the misty past would have occasion to open her eyes. Especially if she had been told that fashionable weddings were now very "simple." The simplicity of 1916 is, indeed, elaborate enough. The bridal robes of tulle and silver is exquisitely complicated, the embodiment of charm and daintiness. To be sure, it is short. That may be the foundation for the notion of simplicity. But the loss of the train has not robbed the costume of elaborateness or of beauty. The other day when Miss Kathleen Tennant, niece of the Earl of Glenconner, married that dashing young officer, the Marquis of Granby, heir of the Duke of Rutland, at St. Margaret's Church in London, her page carried a train of mediaeval length. But, then, this was a military wedding and the quaintness of the bride's gown was a feature of a deliberately mediaeval ceremony.

Wedding of Kathleen Tennant, Niece of the Earl of Glenconner, to the Marquis of Granby.

SIXTH EPISODE.

The Spotted Warning.

ENOCH GOLDEN had never formed the habit of taking others into his confidence. And when events came into his life which seemed to leave him more and more dependent on his immediate associates he betrayed an occasional tendency to focus his nebulous resentment against that situation on the exasperatingly imperturbable figure of David Manley.

"Young man," he said, fixing his secretary with a steady eye, "I came to this section twenty long years ago, and nothing is going to change it. That woman was sent from my home and she will never enter it again."

Manley, looking down at the note still in his hand, thought of the trouble dand tear-stained face of the girl who had so recently clung to his arm and asked him to plead her cause. And the memory of Margory Golden brought fresh courage to him.

"But this woman who was once your own wife is only asking for a glimpse of her own daylight again." Surely that is asking little enough. Surely that is sharp enough. Surely that is sharp enough. I have saved my daughter from the dangers that woman's wrong surrounded her with. I have saved her from—"

"Have you?" interrupted Manley, his heavily meeting the older man's stare.

"My report the older man was about to utter remained unspoken, for at that moment a soft-treading footman entered the room and crossed to the desk with a sack full of mail in his hand. Manley, looking up, eyed that servant resentfully, and with a touch of suspicion. This intruder, he promptly surmised, was a new figure in the household retinue.

"Be so good as to knock when you enter this room," was the young secretary's first remark.

"Very good, sir," answered the new footman scarcely raising his eyes.

"H'm," Golden scoffed, looking up from the letter which he had just opened. "Since you're so ready to visit upon me, here's another friend to ask them for. Here's the captain of the circle you're so ready to champion! But, instead of asking favors, you see, he demands them!"

He tossed the folded sheet angrily across the desk top. Manley took it up and read it.

guess the sooner you get out there the better!"

"But where are you sending me?" asked the girl, instead of watching her father, however, her eyes were on Manley's face as she spoke.

"I'm going to send you out to your Aunt Agatha's on Long Island!" was his curt response as he swung about to his secretary. "And while Margory's getting her things together, Manley, you send Train to the chauffeur, here to me for his instructions."

Manley, promptly crossing to the door, was startled to find the figure of the new footman standing close beside it as it was swung open.

"Ten minutes later, when Manley returned to the library with Train at his heels, he found Enoch Golden staring down at a sheet of paper lying on his desk. At the center of this paper stood a large black blot.

"It's the Spotted Warning," said Golden, his heavy face furrowed with a frown deeper than he was willing to admit. "But how, in God's name, did it get here?"

Manley, after staring at the strangely spotted sheet, stared even more intently at the ceiling directly above the point where the paper lay on the desk top. A momentary bolt of lightning struck the ceiling, and Golden turned to him with a crisp command to precede Margory to Cedar-ton and there explain both the reasons for her visit and the precautions to be exercised during that visit.

"And as for you, Train," continued the gray-eyed old millionaire, turning to his secretary, "I want you to take my daughter out to Cedar-ton as quickly as your car and the speed laws will let you carry her. There are special reasons for this, remember! And from the moment you leave this house don't let anything or anybody stop you."

"Thirty minutes later Margory Golden, surrounded by her bags, sat back in the swaying automobile, puzzled in the tide of events. And as mile by mile swam by beneath the hurrying wheels the keen-eyed man in the driving seat found a load lifted from his own shoulders.

SYNOPSIS

ENOCH GOLDEN lives with his wife and daughter in a modern Eden until their home on "Windward Island" is invaded by Dr. Ludovic Pallidori. Pallidori, by threats, compromises the wife in his effort to steal the secret of the island. Golden discovers them, drives the wife from him, and not only crushes Pallidori's hand that caressed her but brands his face. Pallidori in revenge opens the flood gates of the island and brands Margory, the child. Golden and his wife narrowly escape.

Twelve years later Margory has grown into beautiful young womanhood. Golden is a hardened millionaire. Pallidori, or as he now calls himself, Legar, turns the girl over to Casavant, the "Lenderloin" princeling, but she is rescued by a mysterious stranger who wears a lawning mask. He tells her he is the "Hammer of God."

The girl is taken to Golden's home by this stranger and thrust into Golden's study. But just as he discovers who she is she is spirited away again. Manley, his frivolous young secretary, traces her to the "Owl's Nest," where Legar and his evil companion Hoce. She is rescued from there by the mysterious stranger by the remarkable expedient of encasing her in a brandy cask and driving off with her.

Legar then threatens Golden with robbery, and after setting off an explosion under the Third National Bank calmly walks away with $50,000 under the guise of a forged letter. He escapes with the money.

Manley is kidnaped from Golden's home to the Owl's Nest by Legar. He escapes. In the meantime Margory has been locked in the big vault at Golden's home by Legar, who escapes with the missing half of the chart indicating the treasure on Windward Island. The Laughing Mask, hiding in Legar's limousine, matches this from his hands, however, and escapes. Manley returns to the house and, with the aid of Margory's trained parrot, who repeats the safe combination, releases Margory—alive, but unconscious.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

reared on. "I'm going to stop for nothing this side of hell!"

Yet that valiant boast was little more than the articulation of mortal pride so often precluding mortal disaster. For, hearing down on them along that lonely stretch of roadway they could already see a second car. The point about this car that worried Train was that it was not approaching them as a well-behaved car should approach a comrade vehicle, but verminously from one side of the road to the other. Even Margory, as she leaned forward, puzzling over these strange movements, realized that peril was involved in passing a vehicle so uncertain of its course. At the same time, too, she could hear from far behind her the prolonged and warning cry of an auto horn, walling disturbingly through the quiet air of the late afternoon.

There was a crash of metal and glass, a rending of honey-comb radiators and coppered fenders. Human bodies erupted from seats, rolled in vertebrae on the tarmac road, lay stunned and motionless in the clouded afternoon sunlight. Among the first to sit up and stare dazedly about was Margory Golden, with road dust ground into her sunny hair, with the shoulder of her motor coat torn completely away, and with the dull ache of countless bruises on her numbed and throbbing body.

What happened after that for all time remained strangely like a dream to her. She remembered seeing Train lying close beside his wrecked car, with the blood trickling from his wrist and staining his whip-cord uniform. She remembered seeing other figures, even more helpless looking. But most of all she remembered how one of these figures, pulling himself together, had slowly risen to his feet. As he did so he turned half-stupidly about and stared down at Golden. At that moment she saw that pallid yet triumphant face she knew that it was Legar. She knew that he was confronting her, that he was slowly but determinedly making his way toward her. And she knew that in another moment she would have been their prisoner again had not a sudden and unlooked-for interruption taken place.

This interruption came in the form of a flying roadster, with a masked figure leaning low out from its running board as it swept down on them. She remembered the sudden clutch of the strong hand as it caught at her while the roadster swept by, the equally sudden pain through her bruised body as she was swung safely into the seat of the onward-sweeping car. She remembered a quiet, weak and panting, as they danced and speeded on along that lonely road. She remembered turning in through a stone gate, wending along an orderly gravel driveway, stopping before a vine-bowered bungalow. She remembered, as the masked man at her side helped her in through an ivory-white door, turning dazedly to him and asking who he was. And she remembered the smile that showed just beneath the fringe of the yellow domino as he shook his head and the sense of deprivation that swept through her as she found herself once more alone. Then from the same door through which the laughing mask had stepped, she remembered she had seen a quiet-eyed woman come out, a quiet-eyed woman who had crept to her, with tears welling from her eyes and a smile of pitying tenderness about her lips.

"Margory, don't you know me? Don't you remember your own mother?" that quiet-eyed woman had asked as she had taken her in her arms. And as she stared up into that motherly face, bent so close over her own, she had said, with a gasp of bewilderment, "Are you—you the Laughing Mask?" But her mother, she remembered, had smiled, almost want your daughter to live, want her sent back to you, take that chart to the twenty-fourth floor of the Central Tower Building, within the next hour, and hand it to the man in the black ulster who will be waiting there. No trickery can succeed. And this is your last chance!"

JULES LEGAR.

Silently the beaten man stared down at this strange missive. Slowly as he did so, the last of his once iron will melted away. He realized, as never before, the diabolical resourcefulness, the fanatic and sinister tenacity of this old-time enemy who had worsted him in a long fight and a bitter one. And the thought of that fragile girl, held as a hostage in hands so ruthless, brought about his heart a sickening twinge of horror, a nauseating surge of dread. The safety of Margory was not to be imperiled for a mere scrap of yellowed paper.

He rose heavily from his chair and crossed to the vault. From this vault he took the map, the time yellowed square of manila about which so many of the sorrows and troubles of all his life seemed to revolve. Then calling for his hat and coat and ordering a car, he promptly made ready for his midnight visit of capitulation to the Central Tower Building.

While these events were taking place, however, there was one member of the Golden household who remained far from inactive. When David Manley so abruptly left a tranquil bungalow at Cedar-ton and so stealthily pushed his way through the shrubbery surrounding that bungalow, it was because he had made the sudden discovery that Legar himself was in the neighborhood. Nor was it hard for him to guess the reason for that master-criminal's invasion of those sequestered grounds. And Manley, promptly deciding to stalk the stalker himself, was rewarded by overhearing enough of Legar's plans, as the latter hurriedly issued his instructions to two of his confederates near the roadside, to realize the necessity of at once getting in touch with Enoch Golden. Whatever happened, he felt, it was his duty to warn Margory's father that Legar himself had acknowledged his ignorance of the girl's whereabouts and had expressed his intention of tricking the chart out of its present owner's hands.

Ten minutes of frantic efforts at a telephone booth in the near-by village, however, convinced Manley of the impossibility of getting in touch with Golden by wire. Every effort to reach the house by that means proved fruitless. And time was precious.

Manley's first thought, in his dilemma, was to commandeer some near-by car. Yet nothing but a racer, he remembered as he snatched on his watch, could get him to the Central Tower Building in time. And racers, he bitterly remembered, did not grow on bushes.

His next thought, however, took him tearing down the village street like a madman. For the name of "Cedar-ton" had brought into his mind yet another name, the name of "Bobby Ewart." And Bobby Ewart, who had his workshop and hangar on the southern outskirts of that village. He had been an early volunteer for the federal air scouts and at San Diego had twice broken his own altitude record, established at Pensacola, and was now immersed in the mysterious task of fashioning a stabilizer for monoplanes—a stabilizer. Manley remembered, which was receiving sympathetic attention from certain navy officials in Washington. And the intrepid Bobby, he also remembered, seemed the one person who could still save the day for him.

situation which brought a brighter light into the latter's boyish eyes.

"The point is," cried Manley, "could you get me there? Could you make a landing at night?"

"They were already on their feet again, running for the hangar. "Yes, I can get you there! But what have we got to make a landing on?"

"The main building of the Central Tower stops at the eighteenth story. That gives us a flat roof of several hundred yards. Could you make it on that?"

"Not unless it was lighted!" explained Ewart, shouting for his mechanic as he rounded the gloomy corner of the hangar itself.

"It gets the light from the tower itself, and the whole cornice line is strung with electric, the same as the Singer Building!"

Ewart's finger, touching a button, threw a white flood across the vaulted roof of the building. A touch on another button sent the great doors swinging open. Manley looked at his watch. Then he shook his head.

"It's too late," he proclaimed. But Ewart and his mechanic were already at work on the wide-winged monostrosity nestled under its metal roof like a pterodactyl in a cave.

through a network of wooden struts and steel piano wire stays and cross guys. He was vaguely conscious of Ewart calling out that everything was all right, that there was no damage which a half hour's work couldn't patch up.

But Manley, in truth, was thinking little of either Ewart or his flyer. All his thoughts, as he climbed frantically up through the broken tower, were his revolving about the problem as to whether or not he was too late. And that all-vital question still obsessed him as he mounted the iron treads of the stairway leading to the tower top, pausing up flight after flight until his lungs seemed bursting for want of air, and his over-driven heart beat drumlike against its rib-cage. And as he reached the top and flung out through the narrow door opening on the campanile-like balcony crowning that sky-scraping structure, he knew even as he saw two figures standing there before him, that he was too late.

That much he knew, even before he caught at enough breath to call out a warning to Enoch Golden or swing about and spring for the second figure, already shrinking back in the shadow of that many-columned cupola. For in the hand of the second figure, Manley already had caught sight of a tell-tale sheet of paper. It was a yellowed and time-worn scrap of paper, and little more, but to Manley it had become the emblem and pannon of a desperate cause.

And Manley, as he clinched with Legar's stairway adversary, fought for that paper when Legar's confederate caught sight of it, broke from Manley's grasp and dove bodily for where it lay. Manley, a second later, followed him. There, half astride the balustrade of coppered wood painted to look like marble, the fight was renewed.

Then a second breath of night breeze, sighing through the tower top, carried the paper slowly along the cornice edge. It was Legar's man who saw it as it moved. He wrenched away, twisted about, and caught at it as it fell. But already he was too late. It flitted with the wind, drifted and added slowly about in the moonlight, and floated swaying down into the darker canyon of Broadway, where it was soon lost to sight.

Golden himself was already reaching for that paper when Legar's confederate caught sight of it, broke from Manley's grasp and dove bodily for where it lay. Manley, a second later, followed him. There, half astride the balustrade of coppered wood painted to look like marble, the fight was renewed.

Then a second breath of night breeze, sighing through the tower top, carried the paper slowly along the cornice edge. It was Legar's man who saw it as it moved. He wrenched away, twisted about, and caught at it as it fell. But already he was too late. It flitted with the wind, drifted and added slowly about in the moonlight, and floated swaying down into the darker canyon of Broadway, where it was soon lost to sight.

But neither Manley nor his enemy saw that descent, for Legar's man as he lurched suddenly forward threw all his weight on the outstanding copper cornice, painted white to look like marble. And it was a cornice made only for ornamentation, and not for support. For its fastenings surrendered to the strain of that suddenly imposed weight and the buckling segment of copper swayed outward as the desperately clinging fingers clutched at its edges.

Manley, hanging to the balustrade with one arm, reached for the strip that buckling strip of metal to which a helpless man was hanging sheer over space. He caught at it, even as Golden caught at his straining shoulders to hold him steady.

But a law, stronger than the will of man, seemed to suck the metal slowly, heavily, out of the clutch of his tired fingers. Then the last fastenings gave, the strained and twisted sheet-metal tore slowly away, and the black shadow of a man fell like a plummet to the iron and stone of Broadway, 200 feet below.

What Makes the Animated Movie Ads Move? How the "Go-Fans" Go on a Picture Screen

By Britt Craig.

The purpose of this story is to carry its readers behind the screens and reveal how the stage directors put through all branches of drama the letters of the alphabet, cut-out figures, cartoons and paper dolls, as well as the thousand-and-one other characters on the dramatic personae of the animated ad.

The animated ad is peculiarly an Atlanta industry. It has sprung up within the past two years. Making phenomenal strides across the commercial paths of the country, it holds fair promise of becoming one of the advertising art's most conspicuous innovations.

Since Carl Rowntree, of the Scenic Film company first tried out his animated idea in his little studio in the Alfriend building during the middle of 1914, there have been at least a half dozen animated ad studios to appear in Atlanta and other parts of the nation.

At that, it is still in the safety pin age of development. What the future holds is even more than its inventor will guess.

AN INDUSTRY PLUS AN ART.

The animated ad is more than an industry. It is an industry plus an art. You have seen it—if you're a picture play-goer—queer little cartoon-like characters that perform all manner of intricate antics on the screen in exploitation of the merits of this trade-shop or that.

Animated advertising is commercial

HOME. There's No Place Like Home, When It Is Furnished by the Forthehome Furniture Co.

The script, together with a photograph of the Forthehome building is sent into the general manager for approval. Then it is turned over to the chief artist, who distributes various parts of it among his illustrators. This script will require able craftsmen, as it must be an animated series of sketches. The figures cannot be operated like the usual jumping-jack character, but must be drawn in the manner of a living cartoon.

So many different figures and piccountered in dramatic studios, where it usually requires the aid of half the directing staff and a full-grown onion to bring tears to the eyes of the emotional leading woman in a weepy "close-up."

In this fashion the animated ad director has blown the breath of life into the alphabet, translated Hank the Hermit and Dolly Dimples from the lifeless comic supplement to animation upon the picture screen. Habbreath Harry now performs mobile villainy, and Hank the Hermit leads across a living vista a troop of life-like barnyard possessions.

The animated cartoon has been successful in exploiting virtually every manner of public commodity. It has even been used to sermonize. Picture patrons are now well-acquainted with the "Go-fans," a series of animated sermons employed by The Constitution to spread the gospel of the morning newspaper.

Effervescent letters, nervous border decorations, sprightly figures of all descriptions are used in the "Go-Fan" model, also an idea conceived and projected in Atlanta.

The animated ad plant requires an organization equally as complex as the dramatic studio.

There is even a booking department where booking clerks supply the theaters on the circuit with fresh ad-dramas, keep track of the hundreds of reels that are at work, and which dramatics. The dramas are staged with casts composed of letters from the alphabet, paper dolls and all fashion of how-gigs and whatnots.

Whether it be a sermon or a laugh they design to convey, they never fail to deliver it. That is, if their stage director be on the job.

To produce animated ads in the volume that the public demand now necessitates, a capacious producing plant is required. It is on the same order of the studios of the north and east, where the screen dramas are turned out, except, of course, on a smaller scale.

The animated ad studio requires a staff of attaches as big as the dramatic concern.

If the payroll of the animated ad studio included its acting staff, it would resemble the Recording Angel's itemization of her score against Villis.

One of the most important departments of the plant is the art room, where a dozen or more skilled illustrators bend over their desks creating with brush and pencil the actors that perform upon your screens in the interest of trade and commerce.

When the figures are sketched upon the cardboard, they are cut out in the fashion of paper dolls, sometimes strung up-like jumping jacks, and often attached to mechanisms for the purpose of animation.

A SCENARIO EDITOR IS NECESSARY.

In a room adjoining the art room is the scenario editor, one of the main creative factors of the plant.

tures will have to be drawn that it will take the entire day of at least two artists to complete the art material.

WORK IS TEDIOUS AND PAINSTAKING.

Each time a figure is called upon to move, a new figure, and often a new background, must be drawn. The work is tedious, painstaking.

When the work is finished in the art room, the script goes into the producing rooms accompanied by a huge outlay of characters and sketches.

The producing room is a glass enclosed compartment flooded with light from the dazzling mercury lamps that furnish radiance even brighter than the sun's rays.

Nobody is allowed within the space, but the stage directors and camera man. It is the one sacred temple of the institution.

The three stages—which is the number used by the well-equipped studio—are about the size of the ordinary flat topped desk. The camera, instead of standing upon tripods, sets on uprights and situated directly above the stage, shoots downward.

The camera man is aloft. Two and sometimes three directors are needed to the production of each script. The work is intricate, painstaking—the jeweler's task is no more delicate.

Say, for instance, the Forthehome script is being turned out. First, the drawn background of the apartment is stretched upon the stage, furnishing covers a territory that extends to many parts of the nation.

ORDERS CAME ALL WAY FROM CANADA.

Many points in Canada have taken animated ad bookings from Atlanta, showing the amazing growth of the industry.

The bulk of the animated activities, however, is confined to the south where there is hardly a theater in hamlet or metropolis that does not book them.

Carl Rowntree, originator of the animated ad, and president of the Scenic Film Co., the largest concern of its kind in the country, as well as the first to produce animals.

Rowntree was piddling about in the old Scenic Film studios in the Alfriend building a little more than two years ago, doing odd photographic jobs, and sometimes making "trick titles" for local theaters.

The trick title had just then come into popularity. It was being widely used at the time in many big feature pictures of the day.

Rowntree experimented with the trick idea, evolving leather characters with detachable limbs jointed together by pins or brads. Using these in conjunction with jumble letters he managed to stage—every once-in-a-while—a comedy shadowgraph.

It was months before he discovered its advertising possibilities.

The Scenic's plant is now in the Hirsch building on Marietta street.

He passes upon scripts that have been submitted by others, but the large part of his work consists of the creation of his own ad dramas.

If, say, a downtown furniture concern gives an order for an ad the matter is presented to the scenario editor. He studies up on details of the furniture business, then studies the possibilities of making the most emphatic appeal to the public mind in behalf of furniture or other household equipment.

Likely he concludes that the "home fireside" theme will strike deeper in the public mind and heart. It is a safe wager that nine tenths of humanity is concerned with a home either anticipating one reorganizing one, constructing one or enjoying one.

And he constructs a scenario very probably something like this:

FORTHEHOME FURN. CO.

—Act One—
Couple—man and woman—in cramped apartment. He moves about room impatiently. Goes over to bed, presses button and bed folds into cabinet. He reaches under cabinet for small chair, which he places in space for-the scenic setting. The camera man above is signaled and he cranks his machine, turning an inch or so of film. Then the characters—the man and wife—mere paper dolls, are put upon the stage. The camera man cranks another inch of film.

The characters are now exchanged for different figures but of the same man and wife. Their expressions are slightly changed, however denoting a growing dissatisfaction with the cramped apartment described in the script. The camera man cranks again in this manner, after thirty minutes of tedious labor, the stage directors have managed to "register" complete rebellion of the husband and wife against their inadequate home.

IT'S A HARD JOB TO MAKE A FROWN

In this time the husband has folded up the bed taken out the chair and sat down in the grasp of depression. His wife too has had the bright idea, and they are preparing to leave the scene. More than one hundred figures perhaps have been exchanged in this process. Frequently it takes half the afternoon to bring a convincing frown on the face of a cut out character.

Yet this same difficulty is oft en-where Rowntree is associated with J. A. Burdette, vice president and sales manager of the Scenic, and H. S. Rowland, secretary and treasurer.

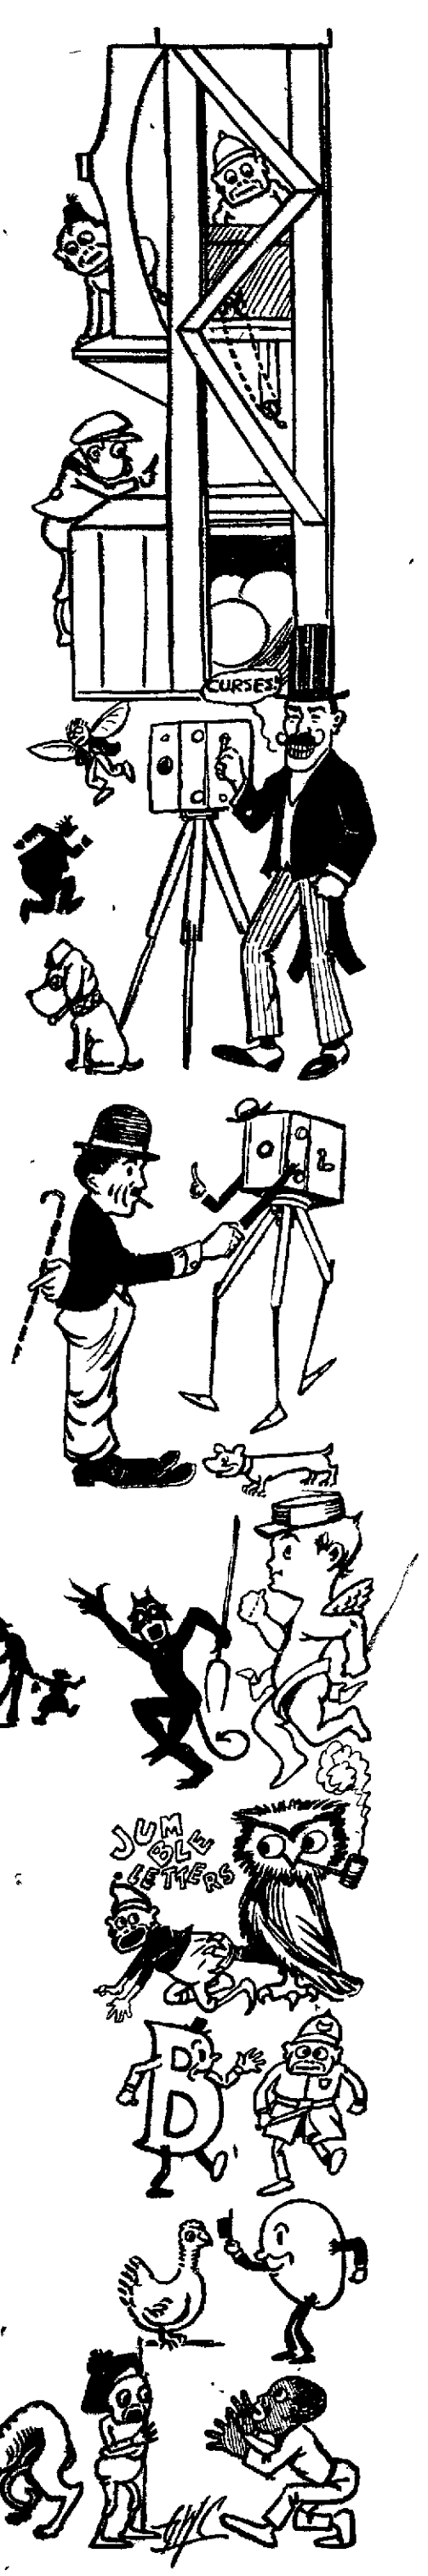

Our ultimate ambition is to inaugurate a dramatic producing department," says Mr. Rowntree. "We are now outfitting an adequate studio on the roof of our plant with the view of bringing a permanent stock company of picture players to the city."

Atlanta can, he made one of the best producing centers in the south. It provides all the necessary facilities, and the climatic advantages are ideal. Our studio will be as ample as any in the south, and the company we engage will be composed of high-salaried artists.

The Scenic proposes to start upon the dramatic venture with the production of comedies alone. The first picture will probably be produced within the next two months.

Just as Mr. Rowntree, himself, puts it:

Once established that Atlanta can afford splendid facilities for the production of pictures, the city promises to become one of the country's film producing centers. Just as it now stands the south's foremost distribution center.

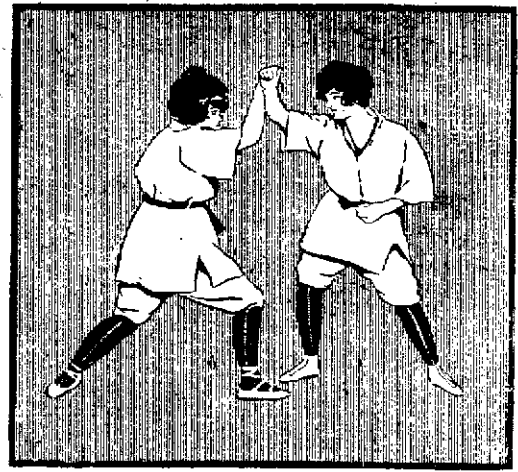

Teaching Women Practical Self-Protection

How the Girls of Barnard College Are Setting An Example of Personal Preparedness by the Systematic Study of Jiu-Jitsu, Which Furnishes a Fragile Woman a Real Method of Defence.

"A broken arm or a dislocated shoulder may be the price paid by one who seeks to offend a woman who knows how to protect herself by this new method."

into the simple feat, and what damage may result from it. A broken arm or a dislocated shoulder may be the price paid by one who seeks to offend a woman who knows how to protect herself by this new method. There are said to be more than 1000 different movements in this science. Any adept may vary them and intermingle them at will. The development of attack and defence is absolutely unlimited, the hundreds of different movements bringing into action all parts of the body from the toes to the ears. Modern man has no mother to dip him in a protecting water. Where Achilles possessed but one vulnerable spot the ordinary person has scores of them. Jiu-jitsu seeks to find the weakest spot and to provide simple methods for utilizing the information.

NO matter how much may transpire as to heroines in Europe who enlist as soldiers, in masquerade or otherwise, and who do actual fighting in the field, the average woman will not be likely to believe that she is fit for the rough work of conflict.

Jiu-jitsu Ochello might not have been mourned as an untimely and penitent widower, but one of Shakespeare's finest plays would have lacked its tragic note. While there are as many as 25 "death blows" in the art of this form of self-defence without weapons, it is not the purpose of the Barnard physical instructor to make "deadly terrors" of her students, but to teach them how successfully to cope with any assailant, no matter how desperate, who may endanger their personal safety or even life. With a knowledge of jiu-jitsu any woman can amply protect herself against any street rough. The "hold-up man," or the burglar who thrusts a revolver into your face and gruffly demands "Your money or your life," will see the tables turned when he finds that his supposedly defenceless victim understands how effectively to protect herself by this wonderful system.

Nevertheless the same average woman, because she feels unfit for combat, is not averse to the suggestion that self-defence that does not imply great physical strength would be worth undertaking. For this reason jiu-jitsu has always fascinated women, and in an era when the world is distraught by the turbulences of war it need not be surprising that a revival of interest in this marvellous art has shown itself in many quarters. If the boys' colleges are taking up military training it is, perhaps, inevitable that girls' colleges should consider the physical advantages of an art that would give the woman who understands it a real protective power without implying any revolutionary physical specialization. Just this has been undertaken by the young women of Barnard College in New York. The "Barnard girls" are studying methodically the system of personal preparedness that gives the fragile a real chance in any encounter. If Desdemona had been versed in

How a Violent "Throw" May Be Accomplished in Jiu-Jitsu by Falling Backward and Pulling an Unprepared Antagonist to a Position Where a Motion of the Foot Forces Him to Pitch Himself Over on His Own Back.

The head of the physical instruction department of Barnard College took a long and thorough course under a professional trainer. She worked day after day with one of the most powerful men now engaged in physical training until she could meet him on equal terms in a contest of skill and quickness. Under her instruction the students are being taught how to take care of themselves in case of a physical encounter with a person of superior strength; how to evade an attack; how to seize the attacking person, and how to "hand him" the medicine meant for his taming without calling the police or waiting for a big brother.

In the days when the science was crude, it was discovered that a sudden or unexpected blow, however slight, over the shiu would make big and strong men double forward in pain, and that by striking the antagonist under the nose with the edge of the open hand he could be made to bend backward. A simple twist of a little finger given without warning was another of the early tricks. By pursuing a line of study which followed a chart of the muscles, bones and nerves an elaborate system was evolved whereby it was possible to ascertain the exact location of any weak spot in any section of the human anatomy. Following the exact science that has developed from the Japanese jiu-jitsu, plus the amplifications that have come, hand in hand with the development of osteopathic research, a regular series of practice exercises has been evolved, first to strengthen the muscles which will be brought into play, and then to take in all forms of physical attack that are possible.

One of the most elementary feat-

A Bank That Pays Its Depositor's Bills.

A NEW JERSEY bank has introduced a system which is destined to revolutionize the method of paying monthly household accounts. Instead of writing from 15 to 25 or more monthly checks, addressing an equal number of envelopes and spending half a dollar or more on postage in paying the regular monthly bills, the customer of the bank simply writes one check voucher a month to cover the total of his or her bills and mails or sends it to the bank, which will take care of all details, pay each item separately, and at the end of the month the original check voucher is returned to the customer by the bank, properly indorsed and canceled, thus furnishing the customer with a complete record and receipt for all payments made that month. The multiple payment check has printed upon it a list of all the principal business houses in the town. The customer writes opposite each name the amount to be paid and fills in the check for the total amount.

On the stub portion, for her own convenience, the housewife writes the names of each party to whom payment is made and thus in one transaction gets a complete and detailed record of all her payments for the month. The use of the multiple check plan does not in any way interfere with the customer of the bank making use of a regular checking account for the payment of items which, for any reason, he or she may desire to take care of personally.

Novelties in Entertaining

By DAME CURTSEY
Lenten Suggestion

DURING these weeks of Lent it might be a new thought to some to adopt the plan of a charming young hostess who says she always endeavors to change the character of her entertaining during Lent. She seeks out those from whom she can expect no return, those who are lonely, often neglected, those for whom life is a solid grind, with little or no variety.

For instance, this week the stenographer in her husband's office will receive two tickets to the matinee with a note saying that two seats have been reserved at a downtown tearoom for such an hour, and the note says: "Please ask the one you want to come this afternoon with you."

On Saturday a charity kindergarten will be the object of her sweet intentions. A couple of dear little boys have been her guests. A special treat was collected in foreign lands, and they are talking about it. This is a time for some of the best of it to follow her example.

Showers for an Easter Bride. So often I have only space to give suggestions that are echoes that float in from far and near. For in advance a light shower to be arranged for a dear little Easter bride who loves dainty belongings and has only herself to depend upon in preparing a most modest trousseau. Eight of her girl friends are to have a humble party, and this is what they are going to do: Make just the dearest negligee of white albatross lined with pink silk and a boudoir cap with pink roses and pink bows all to be enclosed in a big rose paper-covered handbox and presented at the table when refreshments are served. The centerpiece is to be a big basket filled with spring flowers and the favors are the dearest hat box or boxes you can possibly imagine. The place cards are but shaped and all done in water colors with flower tracings.

An April Luncheon

April showers bring May flowers, so for the centerpiece have a small-sized Japanese umbrella, or a doll's parasol, underneath put a low mound of spring blossoms, such as crocus, trailing arbutus or tulips. Tiny umbrellas, opened at each place may have the name written on a card tied to the handle. If the house has electric lights, open a good-sized Japanese umbrella and tie it to the gas or light fixture that is over the table, then to each rib fasten a very small electric light when the room is darkened and the lights turned on the effect is most pleasing.

Serve either a fruit mixture of oranges, pineapple and bananas, in glasses, or clam bouillon, a good brand of the canned bouillon will be found satisfactory. Sweetbreads or chicken with peas and potatoes in some form come next, then a lettuce and tomato salad with cheese wafers and a frozen dessert. If coffee has not been served with the repast it is a pretty English custom to serve it in the drawing-room, the tray being brought in and the hostess pouring. Small cups are used. This luncheon could precede a card party or an afternoon musicale.

Windows in the Sick Room

THE sick room is an important room in the house. It is well to have it in readiness where the family is large and the number of children are plentiful. All the bedrooms in a home should be planned for health and hygiene, but this is especially important in case of sickness.

In planning or making over a room of this kind windows are all important. In a good size chamber it is well to have two or three large windows if you find that you are unable to get plenty of air and light. If there are certain hours of the day when the sun shines too bright, buy or make an awning to shade the window, which is close to the patient's bed. By making the awning so it can be raised or lowered you can regulate the amount of sunshine wanted with little difficulty.

Must Have Air and Sun.

There are many instances when the room should have as much fresh air as sunlight. At other times some of the windows must be shut and then a ventilator at top or bottom of a window is of good use. To make a ventilator either at top or bottom of a window take a half-inch board eight inches wide and an inch shorter than the space inside the window frame.

Screw small brass eyes into the ends of the board three inches from the edge. Put corresponding hooks in the window frames, a little way inside the sash. If air is needed either raise or lower a sash six inches, then set a board over the opening. The eyes fitting over the hooks will hold it flat and the pushing air gives it a slight forward slant. Thus no direct draught will be possible, though the fresh air comes in plentifully.

To soften or change light, in case of long sickness, is to have a light frame the size of the window hinged to one side of the casing.

Use Light Texture Curtains

Fill the frame with any light texture of restful colors, as light green, light blue, pale gray, pearl or creamy pink. When the light is strongest the screen can be swung over the window, wholly changing the aspect of the room, then when the light is less strong, it can be admitted unobscured. Deep green screens with soft white drapery are especially restful to the eyes.

Why Your Baby May Not Gain in Weight or Strength

Dorothy Prohove of 1543 South Superior avenue, Chicago, one of the prize winning youngsters of Baby Week.

By Gertrude Myers Myers.

THE chief reason why infants waste is because their food is improper in composition or because it is not administered in the proper way, or else does not meet with the particular requirements of the infant. A food to be usable by an individual must be of such a nature that, first, it can be properly digested and split up into relatively simple particles which in turn can be rebuilt into the particular combinations which the system or various organs and tissues of the body can use for their own up building.

Digestion Task Great

The new born infant is not provided with the necessary apparatus for splitting up and rebuilding foreign food. Nature has given the infant the power to accept and use mother's milk. Therefore to direct cow's milk is a greater task than most infants are prepared for.

The passing of the food through the digestive tract and its splitting up and rebuilding constitutes a long and delicate chain of procedures. Therefore trouble with any one link of the whole chain may disturb the entire process, resulting in malnutrition and waste. From this we see that the first step in treating babies who are not getting on well is to find the exact link in the chain which is defective and to build it up. However the great majority of cases are due to a more or less common cause.

Dosed With Oil

This great cause is improper feeding of the infant immediately after birth. The usual history is that the baby has been given a dose of castor oil which has unfortunately sweetened the ricinicum from the bowels.

The result of this is a peristaltic stimulation because there was no natural material left in the bowels to make a natural movement. During the first few days the child is not receiving anything but colostrum from the breasts, and this is not sufficient in quantity to make a movement.

The result of this is that the wall of the bowels is dry and not lubricated, so that each contraction produces friction, causing the so-called colicky pain commonly thought to be due to gas in the bowels. I shall this condition is thought to call for more castor oil, or its equivalent with the result that the entire bowel action is stymied to an alarming extent.

Often Loses Weight

Very often when a child has reached two years the inference is that the mother's milk does not agree with the baby so that an elaborate mixture of cow's milk or some prepared milk is substituted, with the result that not only has the gastro-intestinal function been seriously disturbed but foreign indigestible food has been added to complicate the condition. The natural result of this is the baby quickly develops diarrhea, often vomits, and naturally loses weight.

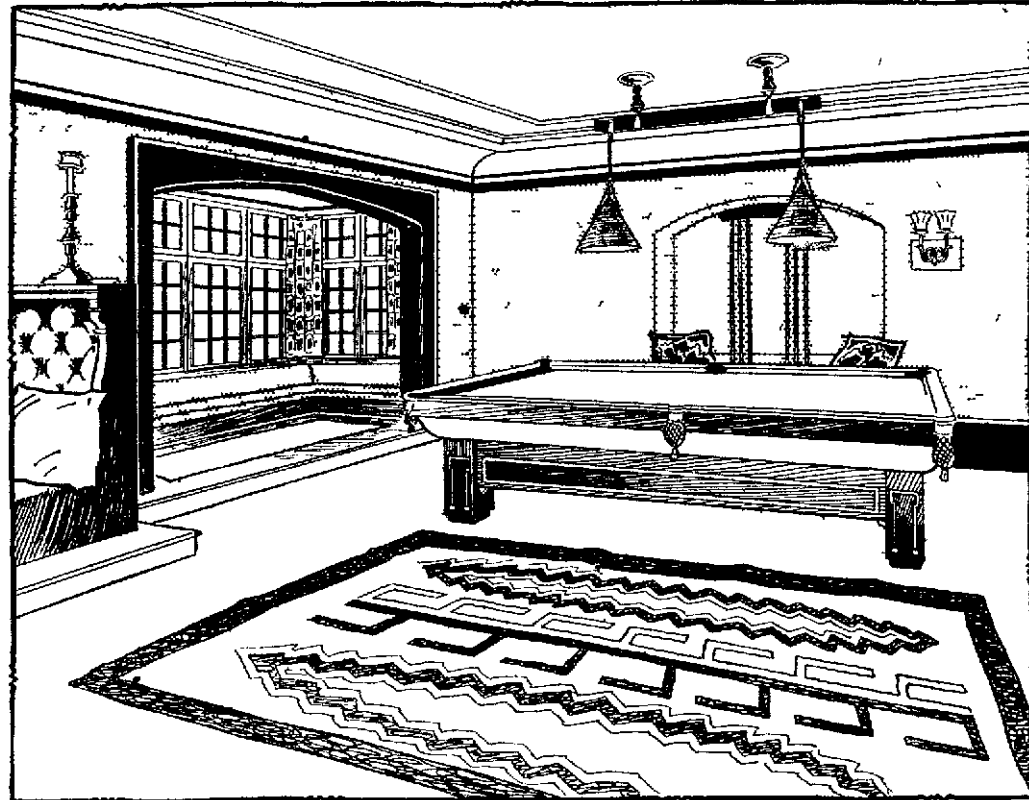

A New Bureau Set In Crocheted Linen

FILET crochet makes very attractive bureau sets. The cover may all be of the filet or a linen center or runner be used with crochet edging all the way round the edge, or perhaps just a wide band at either end, with the linen hemstitched all around the four sides. In either case the pattern of the lace may be copied for the cushion top, doilies and cases for talcum powder boxes, cologne bottles and the like.

For the bottles the cases are held tight at the neck by running ribbon through the lace and fastening with a bow on one side.

HOW DO YOU KEEP YOUR BOY AT HOME?

Madame Maison gives a charming design for a billiard-room that not only will hold your growing son's interest but make your house a factor for good in the youthful community.

Madame Maison's design for a home billiard-room.

By MADAME MAISON

AMONG the things that a growing son would like best is a billiard room. I told my recently that the best investment she had made was to install a billiard table in an unused room on what is called the attic floor. This room she had done over and permitted the young lad to call it his very own. That led me to think what a wise woman she was to foresee in time to add such attractions to her home that would not only hold her boy but draw many other lads into safe quarters. I heard her extending a most cordial invitation to the girls "to come, too," that she just loved billiards and pool, and "Ted's room was ready for them any time." Let me add that this boy is still in grammar school.

Of course, a room devoted to this splendid sport is really a man's place and should be devoid of any but the necessary furnishings, no frills, no lavish ornamentation, just the best and if the space permits have a raised platform around to hold seats for those who look on. The floor may be left bare or if one has an Indian or Mexican rug here is a good place for it.

Plain walls done with calico or a light neutral paper are best. Perhaps a creamy yellow is most satisfactory, with an ivory ceiling. Maybe this room is not plastered. Then the roof supports and rafters may be stained brown or green. There are many opportunities to buy pool and billiard tables second-hand which will give an excellent service, and if there is no third floor space available I have known of several instances where very attractive rooms have been fitted up in the basement.

Perhaps a group of boys can get together, pool their money and form a little neighborhood club, with meetings on Friday or Saturday night. At any rate, such a room is well worth having, and many new houses are adding it along with sun parlors and sleeping porches, so with the demand comes the special furnishings, which should be kept simple in every respect, but with good coloring and equally good fixtures. Best of all, billiards and pool are games for girls and women just as much as for boys and men.

A gray or brown stain is excellent for the woodwork, and there should be no curtains at the windows to exclude light. If necessary very thin ones of net may be used, or just side drapes of a gay figured linen or cretonne or of yellow silk.

This Summer IT WILL BE the GIRL ROOKIES!

WOULD you tip your hat or salute in military style if you met a girl captain, or even a girl lieutenant, on the parade ground? That may be a vexing question confronting army men around the national capital when they encounter some of Uncle Sam's girl soldiers—What? You haven't heard? Well, that's what war does to a country—mystery, secrecy, war censors and all that sort of thing! Yes, they used to say that women couldn't vote because they couldn't fight—but, thank goodness, that's all dead and gone now. Mothers may change the well-known tune soon—"I didn't raise my girl to be a lady soldier; I didn't bring my Mary up to go to war!" Perhaps she didn't. But these are advanced times, and women are doing wonderful things every day. To be a "lady" soldier is a new ambition for patriotic American girls. Preparedness for women!

Of course, they're not actually going to fight. But they are enlisting—not in a United States lady's army, but in the National Service School of the Woman's Section of the Navy League. Girls and young women are going to be trained just like their brothers were at Plattsburg, N. Y., last summer.

They will be lady "rookies." They will have a regular military camp on the outskirts of Washington. It is going to open May 1, and will continue four weeks, perhaps longer. For, if the experiment proves successful, other camps will be established in various cities throughout the country where women are enthusiastically taking up preparedness—not as a fad, but as a serious proposition of national defense.

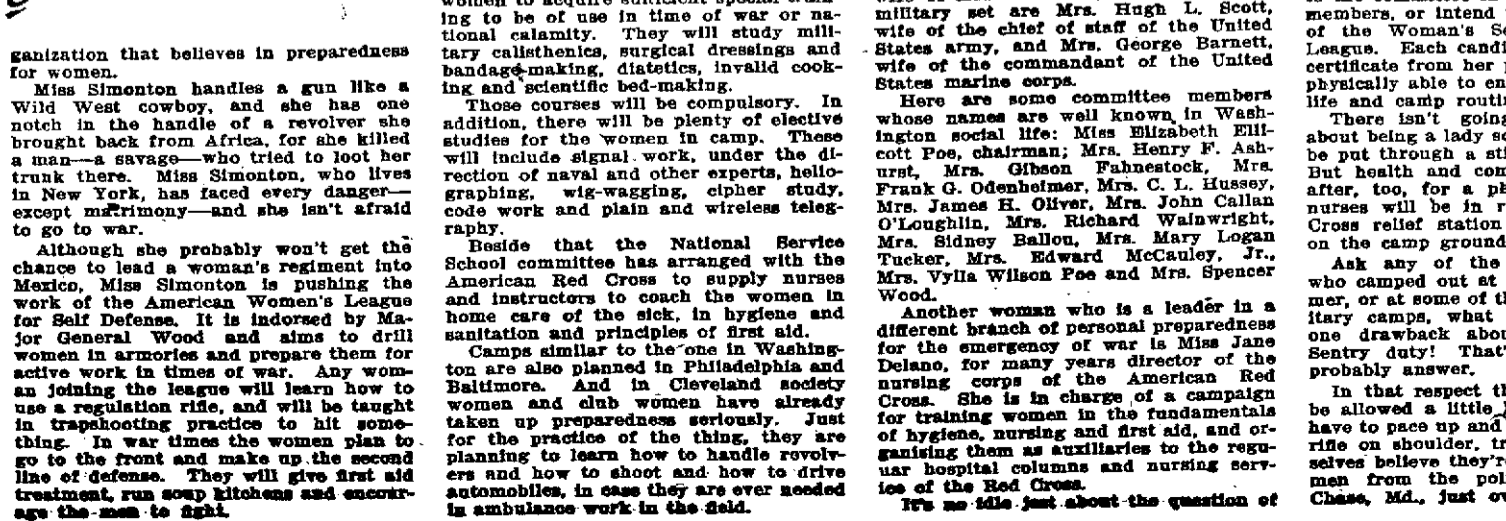

The lady soldiers will wear military uniforms—Oh, heavens, not! The uniforms will be skirts—the common-sense kind—with blouses and jackets, all cut military style. But the uniforms will be of inexpensive and practical material. They are being designed now by the committee in charge of the encampment plans.

As to fighting: Mothers may rest assured on that score. Their daughters will not actually shoulder rifles or fire machine guns or throw hand grenades. Molly Pitcher may have swabbed out the smoky old cannon that time—let's see, when was it?—and she proved herself a real soldier, as histories faithfully relate.

But the Molly Pitchers of this modern day, of preparedness vs. pacifism, will be women who will mobilize for other forms of warfare except the killing end. That's what the camp at Washington is to be for—to train women how to carry their share of the burden in war times.

Now, that is the way society women of Washington figured out woman's sphere in the war game. Then along came the Mexican crisis and it gave such an impetus to preparedness for women that the head of another woman's organization became so fired with patriotic zeal that she wanted to start right out and organize a regiment of 300 women, armed with honest-to-goodness rifles, and march into Mexico to show men how to capture Francisco Villa, the bandit.

Along a little different line will be the preparation given the women who enlist in the camp at Washington. The main object of the National Service School of the Woman's Section of the Navy League is to give an opportunity to American women to acquire sufficient special training to be of use in time of war or national calamity. They will study military callisthenics, surgical dressings and bandage-making, dietetics, invalid cooking and scientific bed-making.

Those courses will be compulsory. In addition, there will be plenty of elective studies for the women in camp. These will include signal work, under the direction of naval and other experts, heliographing, wig-wagging, cipher study, code work and plain and wireless telegraphy.

Beside that the National Service School committee has arranged with the American Red Cross to supply nurses and instructors to coach the women in home care of the sick, in hygiene and sanitation and principles of first aid. Camps similar to the one in Washington are also planned in Philadelphia and Baltimore. And in Cleveland society women and club women have already taken up preparedness seriously. Just for the practice of the thing, they are planning to learn how to handle revolvers and how to shoot and how to drive automobiles, in case they are ever needed in ambulance work in the field.

Two months before the time set for the opening of the Washington camp for women there had been 150 enrollments. The recruits included the daughters of prominent officials, young women of the army and navy contingent, society girls—and also girls who will shut up their typewriters to spend their fortnight's vacation under military discipline.

The lady soldiers have a brilliant list of sponsors who are members of the committee. One is Mrs. George Dewey, wife of Admiral Dewey. Two from the military set are Mrs. Hugh L. Scott, wife of the chief of staff of the United States Army, and Mrs. George Barnett, wife of the commandant of the United States marine corps.

Here are some committee members whose names are well known in Washington social life: Miss Elizabeth Elliott Poe, chairman; Mrs. Henry F. Ashurst, Mrs. Gibson Farnestock, Mrs. Frank G. Odenheimer, Mrs. C. I. Hussey, Mrs. James H. Oliver, Mrs. John Callan O'Loughlin, Mrs. Richard Walnwright, Mrs. Sidney Ballou, Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker, Mrs. Edward McCauley, Jr., Mrs. Vylla Wilson Poe and Mrs. Spencer Wood.

Another woman who is a leader in a different branch of personal preparedness for the emergency of war is Miss Jane Delano, for many years director of the nursing corps of the American Red Cross. She is in charge of a campaign for training women in the fundamentals of hygiene, nursing and first aid, and organizing them as auxiliaries to the regular hospital columns and nursing service of the Red Cross.

It's no idle just about the question of the District of Columbia, where the camp will be located, will do sentry duty at night.

But the resident "rookies" will be required to do guard and inspection duty in the daytime. Officers of the day will be in direct charge of the school and camp. Experts will coach them in the drafting of regulations, which must be obeyed with military promptness.

Here is the program of the day at the ladies' military camp:
6:30 a. m.—Reveille.
7 to 7:30 a. m.—Military callisthenics.
7:30 a. m.—Breakfast.
8:30 a. m. to 12 m.—Classes.
12 m.—Dinner.
2 to 4 p. m.—Lectures and conference sessions.
4 to 6 p. m.—Recreation and town leave.

6 to 6:15 p. m.—Retreat.
6:15 p. m.—Supper.
9 p. m.—Roll call.
10 p. m.—Taps.
Lady soldiers out of camp after 9 o'clock at night will be required to have special passes from the officers of the day. At 10 o'clock lights will have to go out, with quiet ensuing in camp.

These women will "go to war in a suitcase." For everything is to be very, very military, and experts say a soldier cannot be efficient if he—or she—has to carry a lot of excess baggage. Therefore, no superfluous gear will be permitted in camp. Personal baggage will be limited to a handbag and a suitcase. Valuables may not be taken into camp and the authorities will disclaim responsibility for any losses.

It will be the simple life for the lady "rookies" who camp out on the ten-acre tract at Chevy Chase. The ground has been donated for the use of the Woman's Section of the Navy League by Senator Francis Newlands, of Nevada. It is accessible to the street car lines and also within easy reach of Washington by automobile. The property is improved, with sewage, water and lighting, and all that is necessary is for the tents to be pitched.

Army tents have been requisitioned for the use of the resident pupils. It will be up to each "rookie" to do her share in taking care of the tent she occupies. They will be inspected daily—and everybody knows what happens to the soldier whose quarters are not in shipshape order.

The guard house? Well, so far nothing has been said about establishing a guard house at the camp.

Some of the European countries may be ahead of the United States in military matters. War correspondents have sent over some thrilling stories about patriotic women in the warring countries who actually went out with the soldiers and did their share of the fighting. But the United States is ahead, at least, in training women for war that might come.

This will be the first school of its kind in the world, and it is hoped it will inspire the founding of other schools where women may fit themselves for the part they must play in the national service of good citizenship and patriotism. To this end delegates will be sent from the different states to make a study of the camp.

Conferences will be held during the afternoon hours and the delegates will have access to lectures which will be given the "rookies" by noted men and women. These lectures will be on topics of national defense, food conservation, American history and the Americanization of foreign-born people. Only regularly enrolled students will be allowed to attend the classes to be held during the mornings, but each afternoon delegates from the various states and the general public will be admitted to the conferences and lectures.

a proper salute for a lady captain or a lady lieutenant, because there will be lady officers at the camp. The lady "rookies" are called students, and 500 of them will be accommodated at the camp. No student will be enrolled for less than two weeks, and plans are being made to have 200 resident students and 800 day pupils each fortnight.

Discipline will be strict, and rigidly military. The "rookies" will be divided into ten companies of fifty each, a captain and lieutenant to be chosen to command each company.

The camp school will be open to all native-born women over eighteen years of age, whose applications are acceptable to the committee in charge and who are members, or intend to become members, of the Woman's Section of the Navy League. Each candidate must present a certificate from her physician that she is physically able to endure the out-of-door life and camp routine.

There isn't going to be much play about being a lady soldier. Recruits will be put through a stiff round of routine. But health and comfort will be looked after, too, for a physician and trained nurses will be in residence and a Red Cross relief station will be established on the camp ground.

Ask any of the gentleman soldiers who camped out at Plattsburg last summer, or at some of the other civilian military camps, what they considered the one drawback about being a soldier. Sentry duty! That's what they would probably answer.

In that respect the lady soldiers will be allowed a little leeway. They won't have to pace up and down a beaten path, rifle on shoulder, trying to make themselves believe they're not afraid. Picked men from the police force of Chevy Chase, Md., just over the border from
