ORPET LODGED IN JAIL ON CHARGE OF MURDER

Accused Student Describes His Last Meeting With Betrayed Girl and How She Begged Him Not to Desert Her for Another—Her Plea Spurred, She Drank Poison

Chicago, February 12.—William H. Orpet, University of Wisconsin junior who is said to have left Marian Lambert whom he had jilted to die of poison in Helms woods at Lake Forest a suburb was charged with murder today and held in the Waukegan jail without bail.

Orpet, who is 20 years old is said by Ralph J. Daly states attorney at Waukegan to have admitted to him that he had been intimate with the girl who was but 18 years old. He said he had stated further that Miss Lambert had feared for four months that she was to become a mother despite drugs that Orpet purchased for her and which made her ill.

Orpet is charged made a secret trip from Madison to Lake Forest last Tuesday night. It is said he called the girl on the telephone and made an appointment which was kept in the woods next morning. At this interview Orpet said that he told her he was to marry a Miss Celestia Youker.

It is said that she then took a quick acting poison and that Orpet saw her die. He returned to Madison the next day. The body was found on Tuesday.

Before leaving Madison Orpet is said to have tried to arrange an alibi. He wrote a letter to Miss Lambert and left it in the hands of Orpet at Lake Forest before he went to the university. He had left his room at a boarding house in a condition to suggest that he had occupied it Tuesday night.

Miss Youker is said to be an instructor in chemistry at a normal college at Dekalb Ill. It is said she is a schoolmate of Orpet at Lake Forest before he went to the university. The prisoner is an athletic looking young man. To a reporter he said:

I met her by appointment in the woods. I told her not to tell anyone I was coming. I messed up my bed in the boarding house at Madison so my landlady would think I had been there. I arrived at Lake Forest at 10 o'clock. I called her by telephone at her home. I told her I would be waiting the next morning at the Sacred Heart station of the Chicago and Milwaukee road.

Told Her He Was Done I saw her when she passed toward the station with her chum Josephine Davis. I was hiding behind a tree and beckoned to her. Soon she came to me. We started walking. I told her I was through with her. She cried and begged me not to give her up. We walked and talked in the woods about two hours.

Macon Ga., February 12.—Marvin Harris a negro was lynched in Twiggs county today according to news received here tonight as a result of his alleged murder of S. A. Fountain, prominent farmer of Wilkinson county.

Fountain was shot yesterday while he was plowing in a field near the Wilkinson Twiggs county line.

The negro Harris then is alleged to have walked to the home of the farmer and told Mrs. Fountain what he had done. According to the farmer's wife the negro threatened her life if she told any one what he had done.

The woman was badly frightened by the negro and she only told neighbors late in the evening that her husband had not returned from the field. A search was begun and the body was found at 10 o'clock last night. There were several bullet wounds in his body.

At the coroner's inquest this morning Mrs. Fountain told how the negro had told her of his crime and how he had threatened her.

WATSON ATTACKS PRESIDENT WILSON

Scores Democratic Administration, Which, He Says, Is Preparing to Violate Magna Charta Rights.

Thomasville Ga., February 12—(Special)—At a meeting presided over by John M. Barnes, member of the national republican executive committee from the tenth district, Thomas E. Watson today made a sensational attack on the administration of President Wilson addressing an audience which packed the McDuffie courthouse to suffocation and overflowed into the yard.

At the conclusion of the speech resolutions were passed protesting against the plan to reduce Wilson outside of Georgia and requesting the slanderous imputation that the jurists of other states are more loyal to their oaths than are the jurists of Georgia.

"Rights of People Violated."

Watson was cheered throughout his address. Several times he referred to the approach of that time when the people of the country must think of serious action and once when he asked if the democratic administration is preparing to do what King John did—Disregard the rights of the people and violate Magna Charta—a man in the crowd yelled: "That will only mean another war."

Watson went over plank by plank the Cordele platform adopted by the seventh Georgia rally of Farmers unions and urged that the people prepare to put it through. He attacked President Wilson's administration from the day it started to date declaring that though Professor Wilson had said the democratic platform was not made of molasses to catch flies, that the democrats let the flies go to Hades until they need them again.

He charged Wilson with whipping the administration into passing the All ch money bill in the interests of Wall street barons of giving money that belonged to the people to American globe trotters to get home from the war that the country has not been paid back and never will be. He scored the Catholic church and foreign missions but particularly pointed to the church devoting the greater part of his speech to that and charging that the pits under the houses of 1,000,000 in Mexico were filled with skeletons that in Savannah the same thing had been found when a priest's house was torn down.

Militarism and Catholicism.

The Wilson policy is one of militarism he said and the purpose is to "appoint some more Tumults as chaplains."

Every regiment formed will have a Catholic chaplain he declared and every chaplain ranking as a captain will give orders within the desires of his creed. He said the purpose of the administration is to bring about a reunion of church and state for which our fathers shed their blood to bring about a division. He told the people that the time had come for them to get ready to shed their blood and be prepared to shed your blood.

The Magna Charter he said, guarantees to every citizen the right of trial not only in his own community but in his own village or district, and asked if Attorney General Gregory had forgotten the teaching of Blackstone, or merely intended ignoring them.

He told the audience it would be to their interest to see that they did not permit the government to override the laws which he intends to cite in support of his effort to prevent trial outside of his circle of villages. In this connection one member of the audience yelled it will mean war again if there is any such attempt.

Reviews Frank Case

The Frank case was reviewed and pictured as vividly as it was printed. He charged that a young man whose name he did not give had come to his office and told him he both saw and heard Governor John M. Slaton in that last office directing the preparation of the appeal for a new trial for Frank. That Slaton directed the work of the detectives including

Burns, and the reports made to him that Slaton was one of the lawyers in the case, and that was the reason Rosser had told Ollie James "he need not hesitate to take the case to appeal before Slaton, one of Frank's lawyers, because he couldn't lose it."

The speech throughout was of that nature which is calculated to work up an audience, and it did. The fact that the meeting was presided over by Barnes a republican of national reputation was quite a feature in attracting attention.

His attack and the exhortation of President Wilson was a strong or stronger than those speeches delivered by him the last time he appeared on the stump in opposition to the democratic party, and were delivered probably with even more force.

Resolutions Adopted.

The following resolutions were adopted upon the conclusion of Watson's speech:

Resolved That we, the people of Georgia, assembled in the full enjoyment of our rights under the constitution, earnestly and solemnly protest against the statements coming from the department of justice at Washington which call for the indictment of a citizen of this state by the jurists of other states which do not respect their oaths as such jurors and return a verdict according to the law and the evidence.

That remembering the inherited rights of a free people we protest against such a revolutionary invasion of these rights as is contained in the press reports to the effect that if Mr. Thomas E. Watson is not convicted in Georgia under the new indictment that shall be ordered, then he shall be extradited to another state for trial.

That we do solemnly resent the slanderous imputations that the jurists of other states are more loyal to their oaths than are the jurists of Georgia.

That we demand of our representatives in congress that they investigate the charges against the jurists of this state and if they find that a covert attempt to take from the state the sacred rights of the citizens and to place upon our citizenry the blight of outlawry.

Feeling that we have a right to know the names of the men of Georgia who have said to the attorney general that the government cannot get justice in the trial of Mr. Watson in Georgia we demand that our congressional request of this department the names of these twenty men who have thus slandered this state.

Great Progress of Y. W. C. A. Described by Miss Anna Rice

Stress was laid on the progress made by the Y. W. C. A. since it was first conceived in Boston in 1858, and particular attention was called to the democratic spirit of the whole work.

March 3 is the anniversary of the association and the cities of Boston and New York will have particularly elaborate services on that date.

New York the association will have several speakers among whom will be Mayor Mitchell and former President Theodore Roosevelt.

"Miss Grace H. Dodge, daughter of W. B. Dodge of New York, gave ten years of her life and thousands of dollars from her private fortune toward the upbuilding of the national association. She died about a year ago. To her is credited the vision of the possibilities of the national association. At her death she bequeathed $500,000 toward an endowment for national work. It will be the amount of the national association to bring this amount to a half million, and it is hoped that the largest part of this will come in during jubilee month in the form of jubilee gifts."

Miss Rice is a believer in equal suffrage and marched in the recent suffrage parade held in New York. She manifested considerable interest in the efforts of the Atlanta women for municipal suffrage. Nation-wide recognition of the fight of women to vote is surely coming, she said. Miss Rice does not believe that giving the ballot to women will cure the ailments of the body politic for the states that some elements among the women will be buyers and sellers of votes just as is true now among the men.

Miss Rice will deliver several lectures from her private fortune and Monday night will be one of the speakers at the jubilee celebration of the association to be held at the Ansley hotel at 10 o'clock. Other speakers on the program will be Miss Millie Rutherford of Athens, Miss Sarah Converse, Mrs. A. M. Wilson, Miss Mildred Wingo, Tom Glenn and George Winship, Jr.

Hot Contest Is On For Job as Teacher Of "Deestrick Skule"

Pretty Girls and Prominent Men Will Take Part in the Performance to Be Staged by Shriners.

"The Old Deestrick Skule" with the most prominent men and women and the very prettiest girls in Atlanta as teacher scholars, trustees and casual visitors will be presented by the Shriners of Yaarah temple at the Auditorium on the evenings of February 25 and 26.

Old timers in Atlanta having read that are now wiping their glasses and remarking:

"I remember I remember. And I'm going to see it too. Yes, I am, daughter. I don't care if I haven't been out at night in seven years. I'm going to see that. Why I was in it once myself and if I do say it myself, I showed real talent too—real talent, that's what everybody said."

Governor Nat E. Harris with a dog-eared copy of Webster's famous blue back speller will be a front row pupil. Forrest Adair and St. Elmo Massen gale will be in the infant class. Pontate Walter P. Andrews threatens to recite. The Boy Stood on the Burn. Jim Deane and Stewart and Tom Armstrong will have leading roles and Professor W. F. Dykes, of the city high schools will be given a taste of his own medicine. Those are just a few of the male members of the cast.

The Last "Deestrick Skule"

It has been fourteen years since the Deestrick Skule was presented in Atlanta, with its crying girl and giggling girl and the fat boy the stern teacher and the pompous old deacons on the board of trustees. Thomas Corigan was the teacher then and Major W. F. Slaton and Governor Allen D. Gardner were among the trustees. It was the talk of the town for weeks before and afterward. And this year when the Shriners were planning an entertainment for the band fund they thought of minstrel shows and circuses and everything else and all agreed that nothing but a funny one the old school play could be offered. They telegraphed around to locate Miss Sallie Battelle who staged it in 1899 and found her and persuaded her to come again and take the scholars in hand. She is now busy getting up the cast.

The Shriners intend sending a big delegation to the annual convention in Buffalo this summer and of course they are going to take along the band patrol and the famous band which Fred Wedemeyer bosses. So they decided on an entertainment that is necessary funds and at the same time to have a bushel of fun. The Shriners themselves will be among the scholars and already a hot rivalry has developed among them for leading places in the cast.

Many Covet Teacher's Place.

"That's the reason we can give you any more names just now one of the committee said confidentially. We have three very prominent members desirous of being the teacher. Three of the very biggest men in town you know and I really don't see how we're going to make a choice. We've had a popular election. But the cast will read like a combination Dun & Bradstreet report and a society page. And give—say we've got to give one of that something great. It will be the all starrest all star—cast that ever was presented to a palpitating public here. That for a good time on a billboard."

Miss Battelle, busily engaged in selecting players for the production, refused to give out any names of those for publication just now. But she admitted that the women's side of the cast would include a D. A. E. son and the invitation list at the delectable's ball.

I have had a dozen governors and several United States senators in school in other cities she said. And I believe Atlanta has as just as much talent in high places as any other city. The rehearsals will begin Tuesday night, and it is likely that the identity of more players will leak out then.

The five men to whom the medals were awarded rescued them after a long battle against the wind in a blinding rainstorm.

Wife Leads Police In Long Auto Chase To Arrest Husband

Manager of Princeton Hotel and Actress Arrested at Local Hotel—Didn't Get Right Woman After All, Says Wife.

C. R. Cannon manager of the Princeton hotel and Miss Lillian Martin actress at the Columbia theater, until Saturday afternoon forfeited collateral of $15.75 each, upon their non-appearance in police court to answer to the charges of disorderly conduct booked against them at the instigation of Mrs. C. R. Cannon, wife of the hotel manager. Call officers Jones and McWilliams.

Cannon and the Martin girl were arrested at the Oliver hotel early Friday morning following a thrilling chase by call officers after an automobile in which Cannon and several actresses were said to have been riding.

Mrs. Cannon phoned Station Sergeant Guy Lindsay at police headquarters Thursday night, telling him that her husband was out with another woman.

and requesting that he send police officers to go with her.

The automobile containing the call officers called for Mrs. Cannon at the corner of Forsyth and Mitchell streets shortly after 1 o'clock Friday morning.

In front of the city hall Cannon in his machine with several friends passed the police automobile. The latter turned around and gave chase to the Cannon car. At the Southern hotel two girls alighted from the machine, which soon managed to evade the police car.

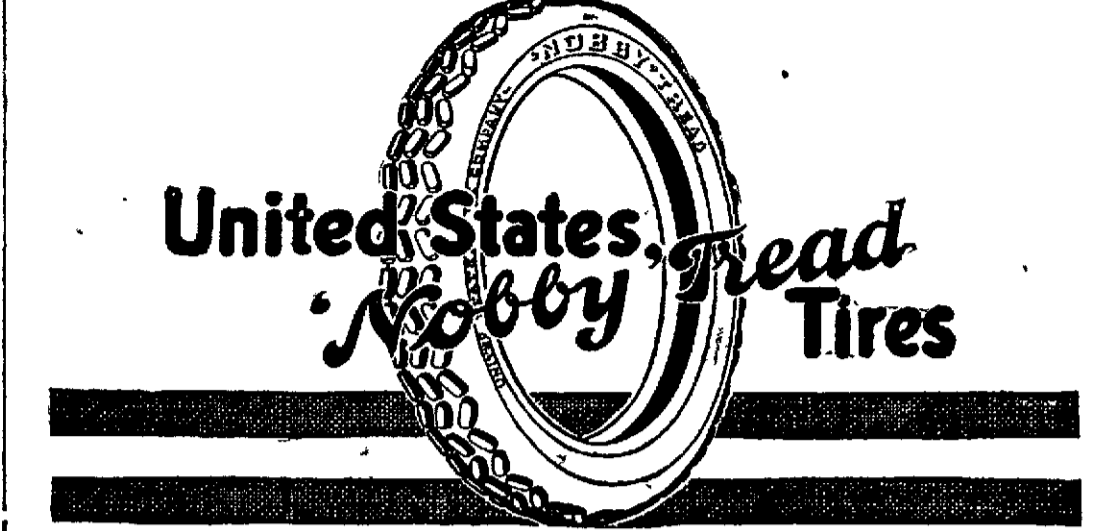

Under the direction of Mrs. Cannon, the police then visited the Oliver hotel, where the Cannon machine was found in front and Mr. Cannon inside. After going to a room in the Oliver hotel, Miss Martin and Cannon were taken to police headquarters, where charges of "disorderly conduct" were booked against them.

Mrs. Cannon stated to a Constitution reporter that her husband had been going with another woman until she was tired of it and so she had taken the action necessary to have him and the girl punished. She stated that the wrong girl had been arrested, but added that one was just as good as another, because they all knew her husband was a married man, and he had no business running around with other women.

JEWELRY IS STOLEN FROM MEIGS PHARMACY

Thomasville Ga., February 12—(Special)—The drug store of Dr. E. R. Aultman at Meigs was broken open at an early hour yesterday morning and about $250 worth of jewelry was stolen, a lot that was being carried in stock. A back window showed where it had been pried open for the entrance of the thieves. Sheriff Rheberg went over from here with the county dogs but so far as could be learned there has been no definite clue found of the microcants committing the robbery.

The Grip in the Knobs

The knobs on the 'Nobby' Tread "bite" the road-surface like a file on metal.

The traction is so intense that it is next to impossible for the tread to slip or skid.

It is the angle, height, thickness, toughness and resiliency of the knobs that make 'Nobby' Treads the surest of anti-skid tires—the Aristocrats of the Road.

While 'Nobby' Tread sales have increased phenomenally, adjustments (on the basis of five thousand miles) have gone down to an almost unwritably small fraction of the total sales.

I HAVE BEEN THRU A PRINT SHOP! They told me it was a "model shop" before I saw it. I believe it is. I've never seen another where men work quite so efficiently and happily and steadily. They love their work, which is a mighty good thing in any shop.

I've seen tiny, cold pieces of steel—thousands of them, lifted from separate boxes and set side by side to form words and paragraphs and pages. Wisdom that eventually carried the selling arguments from merchant to customer.

I've seen attractive Catalogues, interesting Booklets, dainty Letter-heads, even Magazines grow from an IDEA! I've seen the process of evolution in type—and it's very interesting. At this Print Shop men mix brains and cold type on white paper, and the result is—Quality Printing. But these men are trained and educated employees, who specialize and enjoy their work.

I know now why the business of this Print Shop is growing day after day. I know now why they are pleased to give you the names of dozens of satisfied customers—which is pretty good proof of Quality Printing—Quick Delivery and, of course, the Right Price.

Webb and Vary are young men. That accounts for their enthusiasm and success. But I would say that a large amount of credit is due their organization. They call themselves GOOD PRINTERS—and they are. Their plant at 38 West Alabama street is equipped with economical, up-to-date machinery which hums with activity. YOU have a standing invitation to call and inspect it yourself. It will be well worth your while. Webb and Vary are always within speaking distance on both phones.

UNITED STATES ROBBED, ASSERTS GEN. GOETHALS

Canal Governor Alleges Gross Fraud in Settling Canal Zone Claims.

Washington, February 12.—The liberality of various joint land commissions in settling claims for property taken in the canal zone has robbed the United States of millions of dollars, General Goethals today told the house interstate commerce committee in urging the passage of the Adamson bill to force the commission to settle for lands on the basis of their value when the treaty was entered into with Panama in 1903, rather than their increased value, as has been the custom.

QUITMAN IS PLANNING TO BUILD HOSPITAL

Quitman, Ga., February 12.—(Special.)—The movement to build a hospital here is assuming definite shape and it is believed this will be one of the successful projects of this year. Dr. E. L. Jinks appeared before the city council to ask if that body would appropriate $50 per month toward the support of the hospital, the idea being that the county would appropriate $100. While no official action was taken each member of council expressed himself as being in favor of the appropriation. With this assurance as a basis, a meeting of those interested in the project has been called and the project will be discussed in detail. Judge J. G. McCall has already expressed himself as willing to donate his one-third interest in a very valuable piece of building ground to the hospital if the other two owners will take similar action, and it is believed they will if the matter develops.

CITY SALESMEN MAKE MERRY AT A BANQUET

City salesmen affiliated with various Atlanta wholesale and jobbing houses held an enjoyable dinner at the Ansley hotel last night. There were a number of short speeches upon the close of the dinner.

You'll Feel Like a Boy Again!

If you will only clean up your whole system, relieve it of the stagnation of blood and the consequent toxins that poison its action, and aid your breathing and digestion by gently clearing the way for their perfect working.

Colds, coughs and grip are the symptoms—not the cause—of catarrh, either acute or chronic, local or systemic. Catarrh is inflammation of the mucous membrane, that substance through which you breathe the air and absorb your food. If it is inflamed—filled with stagnant blood—whatever it absorbs must be tainted; and Nature gives warning and then fights to throw off the stagnation.

When this warning is given, by a cold, a cough, indigestion, or fever, it means the catarrhal process is getting the best of the body. Go to the rescue with a good, reliable tonic for the membrane, a helping hand that will aid digestion, restore appetite, overcome stagnation, relieve inflammation and bring back health.

Peruna Has Done This

Thousands of people who have suffered long have been healed. Hundreds of thousands have prevented more serious troubles and been restored. Forty years of success have made Peruna the family remedy in the homes of America.

It invigorates. It clears up the mucous membrane, so that it may restore the breathing and the digestion to normal. These two functions are the body builders. Build your body to health, and you will "feel like a boy again."

Experience is the safest guide. Does anybody ever question the story of the many thousands who praise Peruna? The Peruna Company, Columbus, Ohio

Peruna may be had in tablet form for convenience.

Maximum Number of Troops

The maximum number of troops provided for by the bill is 500 for each congressional district, or a total peace strength of approximately 200,000, an increase of 70,000 over the present strength of the national guard. They would form a separate branch of the regular army in time of war when called into the federal service. The act would take effect July 1, 1914.

The bill provides also for organization of a junior guard composed of boys between 12 and 18, available for active service in the event the class of militia had been called out. The juniors would be divided into two classes, cadets, or those of fifteen and above, and boys of the second class, those under fifteen.

An enlistment contract would be required in which the boy would bind himself to serve the federal government "within or without the continental limits of the United States" for a period of one year, or until discharged, should the guard be called out at any time during his three-year enlistment period. The enlistment period of any soldier was to expire at the expiration when his regiment was called out would be extended automatically.

It is proposed to do away with choice of officers by election, and commissions would be limited to specified classes and grades and after examination by the war department. Promotions during active service would be made by the president from the commissioned force or ranks of the organization, dependent upon the grade to be filled. This clause is aimed at appointments from civil life.

POISONED SOUP SERVED ARCHBISHOP'S GUESTS

Deliberate Attempt to Murder Charged—Employee of the Club Suspected.

Chicago, February 12.—Virulent poison was found today by city chemists in samples of the soup served at the banquet in honor of Archbishop Mundelein at the University club Thursday night. The discovery, coupled with the disappearance of a kitchen employee of the club and the finding of similar poison in a private laboratory in his room, together with literature classed as anarchistic, led the police to believe that the illness which overcame more than a hundred of the diners was the result of a deliberate attempt to poison the guests.

Several Guests Affected.

The nature of the poison discovered and fear that it was a virulent agent had also been mingled with the banquet viand prompted the city health commissioner, Dr. John C. Robison, to insist a warning to all who attended the banquet to place themselves immediately under the care of a physician. Several of the distinguished guests were so affected that they have not yet recovered. Two are still confined to their beds and a number of others today said that they still felt the effects of the poisonous soup.

Archbishop Mundelein was not affected. He ate very sparingly of the soup. The absence of Robison, the assistant chef at the club, was noted by the manager, H. J. Doherty, and his suspicious were aroused. With a policeman he went to Green's room, where he recovered the laboratory and found poison flasks.

Involved Against Society.

Green, according to the club officials, was employed last September and was found of discussing economic questions and was said to have often inveighed against the present order of society with its straits of rich and poor. In the room which he occupied at the police say they found many volumes by anarchistic authors, explosives and weapons. In addition to the poison vials he was said by the police to have come to Chicago from St. Louis and his description was sent to various cities.

Among the guests at the banquet who were affected by the poison were prelates, judges, bankers, noted physicians, representative business men and manufacturers prominent in the affairs of city and nation.

GARY SCHOOL PLAN GIVEN HIGH PRAISE

Mrs. Frances Whiteside Believes Atlanta Would Be Gainer by Giving the New System a Trial in Local Schools.

The Gary school plan would be a good thing for Atlanta to try and might help solve the problem of overcrowded schools in the city in the opinion of Mrs. Frances Whiteside.

Mrs. Whiteside has just returned from a visit of six months to New York city, where she made a thorough investigation of the Gary system.

Mrs. Whiteside has been the principal of the Ivy street school for several years and is on a leave of absence for the term. She is thoroughly conversant with the school situation in Atlanta and having studied the Gary system she believes it should be given a trial in the city schools.

The Gary system was inaugurated at Gary Ind. and is said to have worked a complete revolution in the public schools of that city. William Wirt is the author of the new plan. It has been approved by the school authorities of New York.

The Gary Plan.

As Atlanta has long been seeking some plan to take care of all the school children with no money to build the necessary schools, what Mrs. Whiteside has to say about the Gary system will doubtless be interesting to a large number of people.

William Wirt of Gary Ind., who originated the Gary system of vocational teaching applying the departmental plan to the grammar schools of the town, is now employed by the public school board of New York to inaugurate the same plan in that city.

Mrs. Whiteside stated to the Constitution yesterday "The plan as tried so far has met with the general approval of the board. Personally I think it might be made applicable to the schools of Atlanta, but not below the sixth grades. I do not think that such a plan can be made beneficial to pupils below the sixth grade. The Gary plan which is very similar to the system used in the colleges of the country and is based entirely on the system of departmental instruction is now being tried out in two of the schools in New York. During the past several months there has been a general upheaval in the public schools of New York, with much apparent dissatisfaction. The result of this was that it was decided to employ Mr. Wirt. He claims that his method will give instruction to twice as many pupils as any other way. Under his plan two sets of children are taught in every building. It supplies two schools in every building in this way greater use is obtained from each. While one set of children is being taught one branch of their work, another set may be receiving instruction in another entirely different branch. The buildings are provided with locker rooms and other things to suit the convenience of the pupils. The hours of the schools have been increased from about five and one half to six each day.

Departmental Work.

The system calls for departmental work in every grade. It has met with some opposition among certain members

They go to capture the 1917 convention for Atlanta, and indications are that they will bring home the championship. Those who will make the trip are Fred Houser, Dan Carey, Daniel A. Farrell, Charles M. Bernhardt, T. T. Flacker, C. B. Brant, and J. H. Houser.

Chattanooga will send fifteen delegates, who are pledged to Atlanta.

The convention will establish headquarters at the Emerson hotel, where convention sessions will be held. Signs, booklets and other material, especially by the convention bureau for this convention, together with the usual booster buttons and souvenirs, will be displayed.

While in Baltimore Mr. Houser, together with a number of Atlanta Rotarians, who will make the trip later in the week, will attend the third district conference of Rotary clubs on the 22d and extend to them an invitation to attend the convention of International Rotary in Atlanta.

Before returning home Mr. Houser will visit the Rotary club at Buffalo and attend the Ch. Phi. fraternity convention in Schenectady N. Y.

"War Brides" Is Given Place as Greatest Drama of the Moment

So many requests for a reprint of Miss Lina Dooly's impressions of "War Brides" have followed Manager George H. Hickman's announcement of his celebrated sketch as a part of this week's Forayth Keith vaudeville bill, that The Constitution herewith publishes some notable excerpts from the article. Miss Dooly's impressions of Marlon Craig Wentworth's great appeal for universal peace, written when "War Brides" was played here last year, were published in The Constitution under the heading "World Has Woman's Message," and it is against all wars—"War Brides" Greatest Drama of the Moment." At the time of its publication it was the subject of much favorable comment, and has been widely recalled following the announcement that "War Brides" is to return to the Forayth this week.

Miss Dooly declared "War Brides" to be "the greatest drama of the moment."

"A man or woman interested in history making should fall to see it," she says, "for the drama will be recorded as one of the incidents of the war destined to follow a significant part in influencing the public opinion of the world."

"War Brides" is not defined in place of action. It is not the drama of any one nation. It is more than that. It is the drama of the race in her present nearest expresses what is the vital problem confronting the race.

"The woman with a direct grasp on her complex subject, the 'Woman Question,' portrays it through the lives of four women. They tell the story of the evolution, stirred by the cries of a war that has tested the endurance of womanhood and motherhood in a way that no other war ever has.

"War Brides" reached the mind of the public with meteoric quickness. Almost simultaneously with the play came the interpretation by Alla Nazimova, who, throwing into the star role all the intensity of her intellectual and emotional qualities grasped her audience and held them enthralled with interest, first, then deeply disturbed them with the force of the great truths the drama literally drives in upon the public mind.

The passionate meaning of it is told in a very few minutes, when Joan, her frail woman form trembling with the anguish of her mother's agonies and the news that Franz, her husband, is killed in battle, cries:

"Oh, it is an insult to our womanhood! You violate all that makes marriage sacred. Are we women never to get up out of the dust? You never asked us if we wanted this war, yet you ask us to gather in the crops cut the wood, keep the world going, drudge and slave, and wait, and agonize, lose our all and go on bearing more and more. Do you—do you want them shot—the very men for you, why don't you let us say what is to become of them? Do we want them shot—the very breath of our life?"

"One day we will stop giving you men. Look at mother. Four sons torn from her in one month, and none of you ever asked her if she wanted war. You keep us helpless. We didn't want dreadnaughts and armies and fighting, we women. You tear our husbands,

Winn, expires during the present year, will be a candidate to succeed himself, it is known. The news that Mr. Winn is to retire from the board to get into the tax receiver's race on the ticket with Mr. Wood will not come altogether as a surprise. He has met with a great deal of success in public affairs, serving as a member of the general council of Atlanta two terms and later becoming a member of the board of county commissioners.

CITY HALL GOSSIP

THE LATEST MOVE. The latest move in council. They say is no film-flam. It is to have employees get jobs by an exam.

Then under civil service will city jobs be held—To start examinations. They all will be compelled. It's "pull" they say they're after. To wipe out all the states. And make them stand on merit. When they are candidates.

TAX OFFICE WILL GIVE CHROMOS TO CERTAIN OF THE TAXPAYERS

City taxpayers, they say, are very slow the about making returns. The tax books opened on February 1, and up to date very few taxpayers have made their annual visit to the tax office.

Do now comes this proposition from the tax office. Beginning Monday morning every one-hundredth person who pays taxes will be presented with a fine chromo. The first person to get a chromo will be No. 100, the second No. 200, and so on. The numbers will not be made public until after a chromo is given.

THE SINGLE INSTANCE WHEN WATER BOARD PAID BACK CASH

It has long been a note that the water board never gives back any cash that is once paid into the city treasury. If a bill for water in excess of the amount due is paid, but never a cent of cash.

But this rule was once broken. A few years ago a family living on Rhodes street ceased to get a supply of water. The plumber was employed, but the trouble could not be located. Finally the waterworks department discovered that by mistake the board had credited the amount.

It is said that the family framed the letter that accompanied the check, and took it to this day as a very valuable souvenir.

CITY DEPARTMENT HEADS DIVIDED IN CIVIL SERVICE

There is a diversity of opinion at the city hall about Councilman Sam Pressman's plan to institute civil service among all city employees. Some think it would be a very good thing, while others believe it may work a hardship. A head of one department says that such a plan would cause the men under him to boss him, and that he could not run before the people without stating whom he intended to employ.

Still another department head says that it will be all right, as the board over him has long ago established civil service.

The matter is sure to cause quite a heated debate when it comes up in council Monday afternoon of next week.

Councilman's Torpedo Model Delight to School Children

Claude L. Ashley's model of the Whitehead torpedo.

The children of several of the city schools have heard a most entertaining and instructive talk by Councilman Claude L. Ashley on the submarine and the submarine torpedo.

Since the councilman has started his school lecturing tour all the schools have been extending him urgent invitations to visit them.

Mr. Ashley has a complete working model of the torpedo now used by the German submarines that have been the cause of so much international correspondence between the United States and the German empire. In his talk he gives a history of the submarine and explains the operation of the torpedo.

The torpedo is a small boat of itself, with the most complex machinery to carry it through the water, to steer it in a straight vertical line, and explode the load of gun-cotton when it strikes a ship. As shown by Mr. Ashley, it is a most wonderful and dangerous implement of war.

By the time the councilman finishes the school of the newly arrived every boy and girl in Atlanta will thoroughly understand how a submarine and its deadly cargo operate, and the kind of vessels on the seas. The talk of Mr. Ashley, accompanied by his model, is becoming a great educational feature of the public schools.

Mr. Ashley has furnished the Constitution with the following brief of his lecture. Synopsis of Mr. Ashley's Talk. The Whitehead torpedo is used by all the navies of the world, and was the invention of an Austrian engineer by the name of Whitehead in 1867. It was first used with success by the Russians to blow up a Turkish guard ship in 1878. It was next used by the Chileans to sink the Brazilian warship 'Aquidaban' in 1883.

"Japan used torpedoes to destroy five Chinese warships in her war with China. Japan again used them to destroy the Russian fleet at Port Arthur in 1904. The United States made a very poor showing with them in her war with Spain."

The government is demonstrating that the torpedo is the most effective weapon known in her war with Germany. The Whitehead torpedo is cigar-shaped, 18 to 20 feet long and 18 inches in diameter. It is made of steel and contains five compartments. The first, known as the "war-head," contains about 300 pounds of gun-cotton in the end of the war-head is piston, the firing pin, known as the "war nose."

The next compartment is a steel cylinder, known as the "war tail," in which a flask is charged with 2,000 pounds of air pressure to be used in working the engine for propelling the torpedo through the water. The other compartments contain the engineer, the propeller gearing and the steering devices.

How Torpedo Operates. The submarine sinks under the water by filling compartments with sea water. A man on watch looks into a mirror in which is reflected, through a periscope sticking out of the water, the passing ships. He knows the kind of ship it is, how fast it is going and when and how to fire the torpedo.

The torpedo is expelled from the submarine through a tube with a door that automatically opens and closes to keep out the water. The torpedo runs on compressed air and goes from 18 to 25 miles an hour. It is kept from rising or sinking by a valve, which causes the compressed air to keep a rudder straight. It is made to move in a straight line by another rudder, that is controlled by a gyroscope, which moves the rudder when the torpedo tries to deviate from its course.

All of this is made perfectly plain when Mr. Ashley exhibits his model. There are many other interesting things about the torpedo which cannot be explained unless they are shown with the model.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

If Mixed with Sulphur It Darkens So Evenly that It Can Not Be Discovered.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or breaks the face. When it fades, turns gray, streaked and looks dry, wispy and scraggy, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic; you can get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color, thickness and lustre of your hair and remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dab on a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.

ATTACK PROBATION SYSTEM IN FULTON

Changes Favored by Which No Men Will Be Placed on Probation Except on Recommendation of Probation Officers.

A rumor which appears to be based on a strong foundation was current in the courthouse yesterday to the effect that the next session of the general assembly will be asked either to rescind the law providing for the probation system or to amend it in such a manner as to provide that convicted persons in the county courts shall be put on probation only upon recommendation of the probation officers.

The rumor gained circulation following a meeting of the board of public works at which the probation officers of the county were present, but from which the public was excluded. Members of the board and probation officers were unwilling to discuss the meeting at any great length, although it is known that the officers were asked for figures as to the number of men who are on probation at the present time.

The rumor gained circulation following a meeting of the board of public works at which the probation officers of the county were present, but from which the public was excluded. Members of the board and probation officers were unwilling to discuss the meeting at any great length, although it is known that the officers were asked for figures as to the number of men who are on probation at the present time.

Officers Wessels and Scoggins are said to have been questioned at great length along this line and concerning the character of some of the men who are under their care. They are paid by the public works commission and it is known that the latter organization has been considerably handicapped recently by reason of the large number of convicts taken from the roads and put on probation. It is said that during the past sixteen months more than 200 men have been put on probation and that such a course has been recommended to the judges of the county courts by the probation officers only in 39 instances.

There appears to be no disposition on the part of the public works commission to oppose the probation system if worked in a manner which they believe satisfactory. However they feel that it is being carried to extremes that men are being placed on probation who should be serving terms for their crimes. No objection has been raised to the placing of first offenders on probation although it is stated that there was considerable dissatisfaction expressed at Saturday's executive meeting with the placing of older criminals in charge of the probation officers.

Interesting developments in regard to the county probation system are expected at the next session of the general assembly and it is certain that the public works commissioners will leave nothing undone to have the law rescinded or amended.

The action of the commissioners and the probation officers Saturday was of considerable length and it is understood that there was no lack of ideas expressed and many phases of the situation overlooked.

NEWSOME WAS WOUNDED IN FIGHT WITH NEGRO

Not Known Whether Negro Was Killed or Made His Escape.

Valdosta, Ga., February 12.—(Special.) The mystery surrounding the shooting of Barney Newsome, Jr., the Clyattville farmer, was cleared up today by statements from friends of the wounded man. According to these statements, Newsome was shot in an attempt by a party of white men to run Will Clark, a negro, off a farm belonging to his mother and which the woman had rented to a Mr. Davis. Clark showed fight when the party reached the place and opened fire with a shot gun loaded with buckshot. Almost the entire load struck Newsome in the side and struck one other member of the party getting a ball in his arm.

Reports vary as to the fate of the negro. Sheriff Gornito, who went to the scene to make an investigation, was told that Clark made his escape through the woods. Other reports say that he was killed. Newsome is in a precarious condition tonight, but the doctors say he has a chance to recover.

ALEXANDER WANTS TOM WATSON TRIED IN SOUTH GEORGIA

Hooper Alexander, district attorney of the United States court, stated Saturday to The Constitution that he would not ask for an indictment of Thomas Watson in this district. He said that he had not received any instructions for the drawing of papers of indictment and would not have anything to do with the case if he could help it. He stated that he had enough troubles in his routine business without taking on any more and as the last trial of Watson was held in the southern Atlantic district before Judge Lambdin he preferred to let the coming trial to be held before the same court.

LEADER OF SHRINE ARRIVES THURSDAY

Imperial Potentate, Who Is on Tour of the South, Will Be Lavishly Entertained While a Guest of Atlanta.

A large delegation of officials of the Imperial Council of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine will arrive in Atlanta Thursday, February 17. The delegation will be headed by J. Putnam Stevens, imperial potentate of the Shrine of North America, who is making an extensive tour of the southern states on business connected with the order.

One important feature of his visit is to make arrangements for the annual imperial council session which will carry some 100,000 Shriner to Buffalo next July. With the ladies and others the events attract probably double that number will attend.

In Atlanta Potentate Stevens will meet the officers of Yaarab Temple. After his business conference with them he will participate in the lavish Shrine entertainment. On part of his trip Mr. Stevens is accompanied by other officers of the imperial council, among them Imperial Recorder E. W. Rowell, Imperial Chief Rabbi Charles E. Ovenshire and others. George K. Staples, of Buffalo, will be in the party for part of his trip to Atlanta. He visited the entertainment that will be provided when the imperial council session is held in Buffalo.

Mr. Stevens is devoting two months to his tour of southern temples, making a swing through cities of Virginia, North Carolina, Florida, Georgia, Tennessee, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas, Arizona, California and the Hawaiian islands.

The pilgrimage of nobles of the Shrine to Buffalo, N. Y., which is the big event of the potentate's trip, Mr. Stevens gives promise of being the greatest in the history of Shrine freedom. Arrangements are being made by Isabella Temple for entertaining their guests in a manner that will make the pilgrimage of the nobles one of the most enjoyable of their lives. Besides the natural attractions of Buffalo and the Niagara frontier—Niagara Falls, the Buffalo and Erie electric generating plants at the falls and steel plants of Buffalo, Fra Eibert Hubbard's Rock Island station, Inal Chautauqua, nearby Canada with its Port Erie, Brock's monument and other historic spots—the United States are arranging an extensive entertainment program. They have developed a fund of $100,000 into the entertainment fund, and the best there is will be none too good for their guests.

Shrine delegations will come from the Philippines, the Canal Zone, Alaska and every section of the United States and Canada. The longer journeys will be made by special train, but many delegations will make the pilgrimage by automobile, and over the old post road from Albany to Buffalo, the day before the session opens a procession of 2,500 cars from eastern cities will travel to the Erie Hotel. The caravan that moves by special train will be more elaborate. One trainload from California, which is making a sight-seeing tour en route, has a fund of $100,000 to finance its journey. None of the pilgrimages of old compare in ease of appointment and splendor of equipment with that to the Shrine imperial council session of July 11, 12 and 13 this year.

An elaborate program has been compiled for the coronation session of Yaarab Temple February 17. On the front page appears a large portrait of the imperial potentate, J. Putnam Stevens. The colors are red and green, the temple colors.

The following page appears a picture of Potentate W. A. Andrews and wife taken at Granada, Spain. A communication urging the presence of all the nobles of the temple at the coronation appears on the next page and attention is called to the need for a large temple.

A list of the officers of the temple is printed with the concert program of the Yaarab band. The remainder of the program is taken up with photographs of the three past potentates of the temple with much facetious advice to nobles, songs, verses and sayings of a wise Arab.

RECEIVE APPLICATIONS FOR TECH NIGHT SCHOOL

All Attendance Records Have Been Broken During the Present Session.

In preparation for the opening of the registration books for the spring term of the free night school of the Georgia School of Technology on February 23 announcement is made that beginning tomorrow applications will be received and placed on file up to the date for beginning registration. All attendance records of the night school for past years have been broken during the present session. For the year ending 1915 the total enrollment was 240 and it has already reached 320 for the year ending in the summer of 1916 and this does not include the enrollment for the spring term which is still to be added. Although this department of Georgia Tech is only a few years old it has already sent forth many of its students to high positions in the electrical, engineering and mechanical world. With the free advantages it offers for advancement along these lines an excellent opportunity is opened up for boys and men who could not otherwise acquire such education and Atlanta citizens are coming to realize this more and more as time passes. The students of the night school range in age from 16 to over 40 many of them seeking to fit themselves for some particular profession while others are already successful in the business world are seeking to further perfect themselves along certain lines or are engaged in some line of research work. The state of Georgia has generously donated the free use of Tech plant, equipment, class rooms and services of the regular faculty for the use of such students as are unable from lack of funds or time to attend the regular day classes of the institution.

Don't Wear a Truss

At best the truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. This binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment. But science has found a way, and every truss sufferer in the land is invited to make a FREE test right in the privacy of their own home. STUART'S ADHESIVE PLAPAO-PAD is unquestionably the most scientific, logical and successful treatment for ruptures the world has ever known. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—impermeable. To be used whilst you work and whilst you sleep. When adhering closely to the body slipping or shifting out of place is impossible, so cannot chafe or pinch. No straps, buckles or springs attached. Learn how to close the hernial opening as nature intended so the rupture CAN'T come down. Send your name today to Plapao Co., Block 310 St. Louis, Mo., for FREE trial Plapao and the instructive information necessary.

Third Term of First Session Begins February 23—Hicks' Splendid Work.

An educational mass meeting will be held at Taft hall, Auditorium-Armory, today at 2:30 p. m. by friends of the Atlanta Normal and Industrial Institute to give encouragement to practical education for the negro masses.

Prominent white citizens of Atlanta and other parts of the country who are interested in the purity and usefulness of the colored youth are lending their influence to the practical, strong and interesting program being widely circulated in every part of the city and country, with the names of Charles J. Haden, president Georgia Chamber of Commerce; John M. R. Williams, ex-president Atlanta Chamber of Commerce; Captain James W. English, president Fourth National Bank; Professor L. D. Hicks, superintendent city public schools; W. O. Foote, president Foote & Davies printing house; Rev. Dr. James W. Lee, superintendent Methodist Episcopal church, south; St. Louis, Mo. Joseph A. McCord, governor federal reserve bank Edward H. Ingham, president Bishop Joseph S. Ripper, head of the diocese of the African Methodist Episcopal church in Georgia; and Warren Chapel Methodist Episcopal church.

Thirty-nine persons from among the foremost business men of all walks of life are to be seated on the platform. The school authorities ask that all colored people who are employed by white friends be excused between the hours of 10 and 11:30 a. m. to attend the meeting.

Principal Richard D. Stinson feels grateful to the friends of useful education for the help they are giving to the school and says he believes that in the next few years the work will not only be a blessing to the masses of the negroes, but to both races, to the end of raising the standard, the efficiency and usefulness of the school. The school was chartered by prominent white citizens.

Says glass of hot water before breakfast washes poisons from system.

Physicians the world over recommend the use of hot water in the treatment of nearly every ailment. It is of such importance that outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do. Men and women are urged to drink each morning before breakfast a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, sour bile and toxins, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

WINTER TOURING AND GOOD ROADS ARE SYNONYMOUS

Good roads and winter touring are now almost synonymous. A motor trip in the dead of winter from cold, bleak Wisconsin to Jacksonville, Fla., a year ago would not have been thought of as a possibility. This year, however, good roads, well kept by the various state highway commissioners, make a winter trip of this kind not even an unpleasant experience.

STARS, STORIES & MOVIES

Conducted by L. E. Winchell

"THE FOOL'S REVENGE" AT STRAND MONDAY

Followed Wednesday by "The Cave Man," With Robert Edeson as Star.

The opening attraction for the week at the Strand is a William Fox production, "The Fool's Revenge," with the leading parts taken by Maude Gilbert and William Tooker. The play is written and directed by W. E. Davis and tells of a clown who, seeking revenge, unknowingly gives his daughter into the hands of a wealthy libertine. William H. Tooker, a new player on the screen and who takes the leading part in "A Fool's Revenge," was formerly starred in grand opera; upon losing his voice entered the ranks of the legitimate stage players and later took up pictures. "A Fool's Revenge" will be presented for two days, Monday and Tuesday.

Man," with Robert Edeson in the main role. "The Cave Man" was written by Gelett Burgess and originally produced in Providence, R. I. as a legitimate comedy-drama with Mr. Edeson in the portrayal of the leading character. His familiarity with the leading character's possibilities became apparent when he began work on the story for the screen, and when the limitations of the stage left wide divergencies in the continuity of the story, the camera caught the various scenes in that sequence of deftly fitted in situations impossible to the stage, that rounds out a story leaving no essential point to the imagination.

Pretty Women Feature Many Silent Dramas of This Week

PAULINE FREDERICK AT GEORGIAN TUESDAY

The most lavish week of picture offerings in its history is the program claimed for the Georgian theater the coming week.

Maclyn Arbuckle Olga Petrova, Edith Storey, Fannie Ward, Pauline Frederick and Sussie Hayakawa are among the stars in the masterful dramas that have been booked.

Olga Petrova, the celebrated emotion artist, Rupert Hughes' most notable fiction success, "What Will People Say," will be Monday's treat.

"The Eternal City" is a story that fascinates, thrills, appeals.

"The Eternal City" the dramatization of Hall Caine's great story, in which Pauline Frederick will be presented Tuesday only, marks another milestone in film history. It is a poignant drama, with many big, stirring scenes, but none of its elaborate sets or trappings overshadow the tremendousness of the story. It moves with the speed of big stories produced by big directors and featuring big artists.

The interest grows constantly in "The Eternal City" until the final scenes, when it is suddenly brought full against the dramatic climax, one of the most masterful ever attempted upon the American screen.

Maclyn Arbuckle makes his first screen appearance before Atlanta audiences Wednesday in the first-run drama, "The Reform Candidate," an stirring picture of his famous stage success, "Love creates peace and harmony out of chaos" is the predominant theme of this masterful story, and Mr. Arbuckle has been given a commendable cast for his support.

Edith Storey, the daintiest and most attractive of film stars in her most recent success, "The Price of Folly," in which she is supported by such noted artists as Antonio Moreno and Arthur Hovey Seward, is the Georgian offering for Friday. This is Miss Storey's greatest undertaking and, in the role of the bewitching dancer, proves her immortalizing versatility to the delight of all who witness her work.

Fannie Ward will be presented Saturday for the week's final treat in "The Cheat," the stirring Jesse L. Lasky production, written by Hector Turnbull, especially for the screen, but which created such a decisive success that big New York legitimate stage producers have undertaken to put it before the footlights. Miss Ward is supported by the famous Sussie Hayakawa, Jack Dean and James Neil.

At the Selecta.
Lou Tellegen who has won fame not only by his sterling worth as an actor on the stage, but also as a screen actor, is being chosen by Geraldine Farrar as a husband they have been married the last few days will be the picture of the Selecta theater on Monday. He will be chosen in the Paramount production, "The Explorer."

The picture is an exceptionally fine film, full of thrills and carries a story which Mr. Tellegen's portrayal of the leading part in this picture stamps him as a great actor.

The Seven-Passenger Six-40 Chalmers Makes a Gallon of Gas Deliver 16 Miles of Easy, Sparkling Flight

The day of the racing car is done. This is the age of the road car. It isn't a question any longer of mile-a-minute speed. Nobody but a college sophomore or a Ralph Mulford wants that kind of a car.

But there is a quiet, growing, insistent demand for a car of spunk, that picks itself up neatly and gets itself under way with a spirit—the same kind of spirit that responds in a lively, high-nerved horse to the light touch of a whip.

This is the kind of a car that rolls up to the opera quickly, quietly, without groan or complaint, and rolls away again into the night with a grace and smartness and a liveliness that the traffic cop notes and admires.

For he is, after all, a good judge of things automobile. He knows the sluggish cars from the peppery ones, the "light-footed" from the "heavy-footed," and the gear-changing kind from the always-on-high variety, and he mentally salutes the lively.

Spunk in a car is needed most not at 70 or 75 miles an hour, but 5 and 10 and 15 and 20 and 35 miles an hour.

It comes in handy when you want to go out and go by the man ahead, when the cop's whistle blows, when you are taking the other man's dust, every time that you turn a corner, every time you hit a grade, every time you wind your way up a hill.

And the men who are driving this kind of a car express it in the lines of their faces—a certain ease of control, a peculiar note of confidence, the absence of fret, the feeling of having something secure and sure beneath the right foot.

Watch for them. You will find them driving Chalmers Six-40s. Hang on to one of them in traffic or in open country. It takes a good car to roll along with one. This is because a minimum of fuel is translated into a maximum of power through the valve-in-the-head, overhead cam-shaft type of engine.

You will observe there is no tire-burning speed, no roar of gears, no pell-mell driving.

Just a keep-a-going pace, wonderful acceleration, an arrow-like direction, always four wheels on the ground, no sidesway,—and a peck of pep if you try to tickle the speedometer needle up to 60.

Few can pass her. If you want more speed than that, the Chalmers Six-40 cannot give it to you.

You had better go buy a Rolls-Royce. Pay the price.

But don't buy a low-priced racing animal. Get a thoroughbred. It's an interesting kind of a car to own.

And for day-in and day-out use get one of these Chalmers Six-40s. It's got room—124 inches of wheelbase; French finish upholstery; nice clutch action; good braking properties; every button and dial within finger's reach.

And a name on the radiator that has always stood for quality.

The newest Six-40 has just arrived. There are some twenty notable developments, hidden from the eye, in pistons, connecting rods, gas chambers and so on. All serving to speed up acceleration.

Bring your wife. She will make discoveries you never knew existed in a car before.

Also bring your check-book. Because the price goes up March 1st to $1450 Detroit. Now, and until March 1st, you pay $1350 Detroit for your Six-40. So come prepared.

In the fourth episode of this great Essayay serial, in which Hubert Walhall and Edna Mayo are featured, the district attorney closes his case with what seems to be convincing evidence that Mary Page murdered Dave Pollock.

The room where the murder was committed. Mrs. Page, Langdon asked, "I repeat my former question, 'did your husband ever strike you when he was drunk?'"

Notes of Films. Dixie Stratton continues to display unusual daring in "The Extra Man" and previous experience with wild animals.

Tom Forman, playing opposite Blanche Sweet in "The Ransom," a bed to finish up the attack of pneumonia with which he was stricken during the filming of the picture.

For the first time the police jitneys and patrol wagons are being used for advertisement purposes. Placards on these machines bear the announcement of the coming production of "Alias Jimmy Valentine," which will be revived most elaborately by the theater.

At the time the former policeman is about to be married, Doyle, the detective, makes his appearance. He is after Valentine for an old job. A battle of wits between the sleuth and Valentine follows, and Jimmy has apparently gotten the better of the detective when his pal rushes in and tells him that Kitty, Rose's little sister, has been locked in the new bank vault.

Spring Silks

KEELY'S SILK DEPARTMENT has long been the rendezvous for Atlanta's smartest shoppers and it is here that the largest volume of fine, beautiful silken fabrics finds the greatest outlet.

It is an interesting experience for one unaccustomed to the expressions of bewildered women, before a fountain of filmy flosses, to hear the exclamations of feminine charm.

The dawn of the Spring season is now in the ascendancy and the past week, to us, has been of genuine inspiration, for on all sides we are greeted with the comforting assurance of supremacy.

At no time during the history of this department have we been so splendidly prepared to supply the newest and freshest creations from the silk looms over here and over yonder.

Striped Taffetas Seem to Have the Lead

This is true of both street and evening shades. Descriptive matter will not properly convey to your mind just what we would like to say about these beautiful Taffeta Silks; therefore, imaginative powers must be active while we enumerate the following:

Taffetas: with self-colored satin stripes; with self-colored silk stripes; with monotone stripes; with hairline stripes; with gros-grain stripes and with awning stripes.

Each idea containing many beautiful color combinations.
36-in. wide $1.50, $1.75, $2.00 Per Yard
36-in. Plain Colored Taffetas $1.19 to $2.00

32-in. Washable Sans Gene Crepe Silk at $1.50

Here is one of the most beautiful silk fabrics for blouses and for men's shirts you could well imagine. It is extra heavy weight, fast color, non-shrinkable and comes in a most attractive range of brilliant colored stripes as well as a full range of the newest 1916 plain colors.

Children's Party.

Mrs. W. N. Gallaher gave a party Saturday afternoon at her home on 16th street in honor of the tenth birthday of her daughter, Evelyn Lucile. Games were played, after which the children were taken to a nearby decorated table and served ices and cake in white and pink.

To You This Secret We Confide Improve Your Hair With HERPICIDE

The value of Newbro's Herpicide for saving and beautifying the hair is a secret known to thousands. More men and women probably have obtained positive results from the intelligent use of Herpicide than from all other hair remedies combined.

In the majority of cases it is dandruff contagion that makes the hair dull, brittle and lusterless, followed later—in many instances with white, scaly deposits, itching scalp and falling hair. Newbro's Herpicide eradicates this enemy of beauty and (except in cases of chronic baldness) enables the hair to resume its natural luster and luxuriance.

Discriminating persons speak of Newbro's Herpicide in the highest terms for its almost magical effect upon the scalp and also for its excellence as a regular hair dressing. Just begin the use of Herpicide without anyone's knowledge and see how quickly your friends will notice the improvement in your hair.

Send 10 cents in postage or silver to The Herpicide Co., Dept. 120-B, Detroit, Michigan, for trial bottle and booklet. Sold and guaranteed at all toilet goods counters. Accept only genuine Herpicide. Applications at the better barber shops.

Swings Into Its Second Week

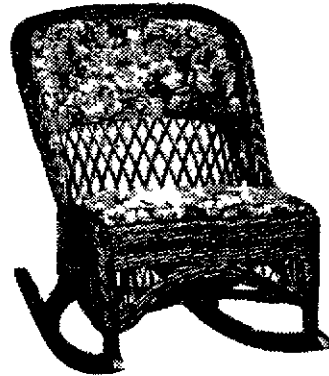

Prices Are Reduced One-Fourth to One-Half---On All Furniture and Rugs

The Sales Results of the past week have been extremely gratifying—adequate testimony of the fair and square business methods of Robison's, and the liberal fairness of our price reductions

—We've put forth still greater efforts to make the second week of our February Furniture Sale better than the first—better from the standpoint of merchandise values—better from the standpoint of variety in selection. New lots have been added, and here and there we've made still further revision of our prices. As a result, we feel no hesitancy in stating that here—now—are the best opportunities for everyone seeking Furniture of any description—and Rugs

—Come in Make comparisons—and we know that your good judgment will rule in our favor

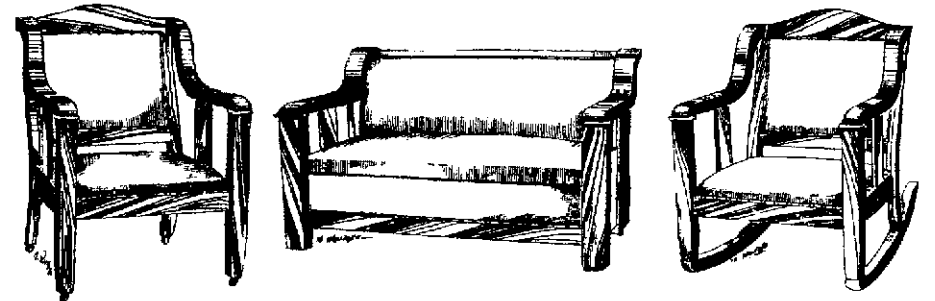

—We've a vast deal of confidence in these Furniture offerings, because, unlike most Furniture Sales, this is NOT a sale of specially acquired lines—discarded patterns—job lots—nor inferior qualities—every piece shown is from our regular lines, and in our showings because it is fully up to the Robison standard

Nemo News WOMAN'S HEALTH, COMFORT AND BEAUTY Interesting to Every Woman Every woman worthy of the name, wants to be well and look young as long as she can. On those rare days when you haven't a single ache or pain, you look and feel years younger than you do on the many days when you have that nervous, dragged-down, worn-out feeling. How much would you be willing to spend to be rid of those backaches, headaches and the other aches that line your face and make life a burden? Would $5.00 seem too much? The Self-Help Nemo Wonderlift Corset, at $5.00, can help you to make every day of your life one of your "well days." Do you ask how? Simply by the way it supports the internal organs. Every organ held in its natural place. No pressure on nerves or blood-vessels. Complete hygienic and comfortable support without any bandages that wrinkle and slip out of place. Are you thin? Many thin women think they have nothing to support. They have exactly the same internal organs as their stout sisters, and are in even greater need of support, because their organs are nearer the surface and more easily affected. The Nemo Wonderlift Corset is made for extremely slender women with prominent hip-bones and concave abdomen, as well as for large women with quantities of flesh, and women of medium build whose flesh is evenly distributed. Choose from these four distinct models: No. 554--for short stout figures No. 555--for taller stout figures No. 556--for slender to medium figures No. 557--for slim figures with prominent hip bones $5 If to-day is one of your "well days," you probably will put the Nemo Wonderlift Corset out of your mind; but to-morrow, when your back and head ache and you feel so wretched that you almost wish you had never been born, you will begin to think about the Wonderlift again. Then go to your nearest dealer and ask to be fitted to the Nemo Wonderlift Corset that is suited to your particular type. If he hasn't it, go to some one else, and keep on until you DO get it. Refuse everything "just as good." There is NO SUBSTITUTE for a Wonderlift. It will help you to be WELL, and when you are well you are young, no matter how old you are. WILSON!

President Wilson has demonstrated himself in every test demanded of him the "big man" of the democratic party.

His proven qualities of leadership in an unbroken line of critical situations, business and political problems, make it a foregone conclusion that he will be the nominee by practically unanimous vote of the St. Louis convention.

Take the whole list throughout from the establishment of the federal reserve system, which has been declared the most satisfactory plan of national finance ever devised, to the settlement with national honor and without war of the Lusitania case and similar problems, and now the firm advocacy, in the face of obstacles, of a plan of national security that has commended itself to the people of the country, and it is always the president who leads and leads aright.

In the face of this record, which few presidents have made through all national history, it is the duty of the democracy of the United States to hold up his hands.

More than all is it the duty of a democratic congress to stand with him and support him in these policies of proven efficiency and proven popularity.

Every incident, every situation with which he has had to deal, has strengthened President Wilson in the popular mind; his nomination must come in response to the popular will.

Equally the popular will demands that a congressional majority, upon which rests a burden of responsibility for the party's future, shall so strongly stand with him as to insure party victory in the coming contest.

There is no question as to the party nominee. It will be— Wilson!

Whatever question may be raised as to the presidential succession will be raised by the attitude of the democratic majority in congress.

If it divides against the president in the trying days that are just ahead, it must bear the burden of national party defeat. For at the door of the congressional majority with all the power at its command will the responsibility be placed.

If it stands where it should for party unity and party prestige, back of a leader whose strength and ability are recognized and applauded from one end of the country to the other, even by his political enemies, the next president of the United States will be— Wilson!

EMORY FUND GROWING.

Every week of quiet but determined activity witnesses the marked growth in the $500,000 fund which Atlanta will raise for Greater Emory University.

The Emory campaign has not been a swift or spectacular one. There was no intention to make it so. It was the plan to inform the public as it progressed of its vast and important significance to Atlanta; and as that has been done, the fund has grown from week to week with every gratifying assurance of its ultimate abundant success. That Atlanta has raised approximately three-fifths of this fund already is a tribute to her citizenship; and to those who have led in this splendid effort for the founding here of one of the greatest institutions of learning in all the south. It means that the rest of it will be raised, and that if anything, before the campaign is over, Atlanta will go beyond the half million mark, because Atlantans see and feel the true meaning of the splendid work they are doing.

If it had not been for Emory, Atlanta would probably have lost an institution which singly and alone was worth to the city commercially half a million dollars every year—the Atlanta Medical College. In addition to that, Emory brings the Lamar Law school, which will have no superior, north or south, in its possibilities of development of the legal mind. It brings literary, theological and other departments in which there will be gathered hundreds of students from all parts of the south, and even from other countries.

In all her history Atlanta has never made a more valuable investment than this half million she has put into Emory university. The fund should be completed quickly.

THE MARTIAN PROBLEM.

"Mars is a dead world, of extinct volcanoes and desert-wastes."

So Professor Antoniadi is quoted, and he claims the advantage of the most powerful telescope in Europe, through which he has studied the planet for the British Astronomical association.

But the followers of Professor Lowell, of the Flagstaff, Arizona, Observatory, say that while Antoniadi had, as he claims, the advantage of a great telescope, he did not have the atmosphere suited to perfect observation, and therefore the Lowell theory of the existence of intelligent life on the planet still holds good; for but recently Professor Lowell announced that the Martian spring season was on, there being evidence of colorful vegetation fringing the banks of the artificial canals.

"If the canals were there they could not be seen," is the Antoniadi comment. "Mars is dead."

So another Martian controversy is in sight, with the possibility of pamphlets and books to deepen the mystery.

But since Herschel declared that the analogy between Mars and the earth is perhaps the greatest in the whole solar system, the red planet has been viewed and reviewed by astronomers, with the result that we have, from Mr. Lowell, "Mars as the Abode of Life," and "Mars and Its Canals," as well as other fascinating studies of what has been seen of its surface by eminent astronomers the world over.

Now that the red planet is nearer to us, the imagination leans to the Lowell theory of the existence of life there, perhaps like earth-life, and feels the force of Professor Lowell's words as to Mind striving to communicate with Mind—intelligence making itself felt "across the far stretches of space."

So belief in life on the planet may persist; it imparts a sense of companionship in the star-journey! If there be life on Mars, who knows but that through the wonderful developments of science we may yet succeed in exchanging signals?

It may be too early to class our red, aggressive kinsman with dead and desolate worlds.

A PATRIOT'S DEATH-SONG.

It has been said that Kipling is too absorbed with his work as war correspondent, and in other lines of patriotic service, to produce anything equal to his best in song; but one English singer—Rupert Brooke, who was singer and soldier, too—dying for his country in the first flush of manhood, left a song of love of her and pride in dying for her, that should be immortal:

If I should die, think only this of me: That there's some corner of a foreign field That is forever England. There shall be in that rich earth a richer dust concealed; A dust whom England bore, shaped, made aware, Gave, once, her flowers to love, her ways to roam, A body of England's, breathing English air, Washed by the rivers, blest by suns of home.

And think, this heart, all evil shed away, A pulse in the eternal mind, no less Gives somewhere back the thoughts by England given; Her sights and sounds; dreams happy as her day; And laughter, learnt of friends; and gentleness, In hearts at peace, under an English heaven.

It was his last tribute to his country, and through it shines the spirit of a lofty love and patriotism—the love worth dying for.

It is this love of country on all sides that keeps the battles going; hate is the word of weakness; patriotic love is the strength of the soldier, as it is the beauty of the song.

A TARIFF COMMISSION.

President Wilson's recent pronounced advocacy of a tariff commission has aroused no end of talk, and for several interesting reasons. Particular comment has been made upon the fact that a tariff board was advocated both by the republicans and the progressives, and that the president has therefore taken up the policy of the enemy.

If a tariff commission is a good thing—and if it can help in separating the tariff from politics, it is a good thing—why shouldn't President Wilson advocate it?

There might easily be tariff commissions of several kinds, but the important thing is to propose and advocate the right sort of a tariff commission. There might be, on the one hand, a commission which, as The Jacksonville Times-Union points out, would have the function only of deciding "what this or that industry needed to take out of the pockets of the people." Perhaps that is as the republicans would desire to make it.

There might, on the other hand, be created such a commission as the president suggests—a board "as much as possible free from any strong prepossession in favor of any political policy and capable of looking at the whole economic situation of the country with a dispassionate and disinterested scrutiny."

If such a commission can be constituted, one which would view the whole tariff situation in the light of its business and economic aspects, it would not only save the country from the tremendous amount of political buncombe from which it has suffered, but might ultimately get the whole question down to a rock-bottom business basis. Tariff agitation has had a tendency to disturb and upset business conditions, particularly in political years, simply because a political issue is made out of a purely business problem.

The tariff is going to continue to remain with us for a good many years to come, and the best service that can be rendered the country in connection with it is to get it just as far away from politics as possible.

The objections made to the republican and progressive proposals of a tariff board were directed more against the nature of the proposed board than to the general principle of providing a means of eliminating politics, either partially or wholly, from the question.

Whoever brings about any genuine divorce whatsoever between the tariff and politics will unquestionably render the country an important and far-reaching service.

BANKER TO THE WORLD.

The United States is rapidly becoming banker to the entire world, according to a recent statement of Paul M. Warburg, of the federal reserve board. Through marvelous financial development of the last few months, Mr. Warburg looks into a future that looms bigger and bigger for this country.

Of all countries of great financial development, England has perhaps approached nearest to the position of world banker. But even she has had to share with France, the United States and, to some extent, with Germany, the honors of world finance.

If the war bankrupts the three great European powers as it has nearly done already, and as it must do completely with a few more months' duration, it leaves the United States financial supremacy established, both by reason of the latter's unhampered peaceful progress and the fact that European gold has poured in here in payment for war's necessities.

Mr. Warburg, who is one of the country's most eminent financiers, takes the very gratifying position that we should welcome every possible increase in our gold resources, regardless of whether it comes from England, France or any other country. We were told as an argument in behalf of the half a billion dollar loan to the allies, that we should not insist on further shipments of gold, because it would lead to inflation.

Mr. Warburg does not hold that view. He contends we should continue to demand payment in gold, but he takes also the position that the United States should marshal and control their gold resources even to the extent of withdrawing all possible gold from the pockets of the public and holding it to still further strengthen the national reserve.

The fact is, Mr. Warburg points to a splendid financial opportunity for this country and he wants to see full advantage taken of it. He believes this can best be done through the continued building and conservation of the national gold reserve, and the great financial force that has been created by the federal reserve bank system.

Go ahead and get the gold; get all the gold you can, and when you get it protect it and conserve it. Let your foreign loans be of short duration, so that control of this country's gold may be kept in case there is necessity for it. That is Mr. Warburg's idea, and it is upon that view that he bases this statement:

That will give us a strategic position at the end of the war so strong that we shall be able effectively to face the various duties that will confront us, not only toward our own country, but toward the world-at-large. If a policy of general conservation and judicious expenditure can be systematically maintained, thereby securing the strength of our banking position, we shall in due course reap our rewards.

And that reward, as Mr. Warburg sees it, is banker to the world. Others have foreseen, in a very general way, our approach to financial supremacy, but not with the eye of the trained financier, not from the viewpoint of the man accustomed to deal in millions, or who understands the great power and far-reaching effect of the federal reserve banking system.

We want gold, we want all the gold we can get, according to Mr. Warburg, and when we get it we want to take good care of it and conserve it. The possession of it will place a power in our hands we can get in no other way; and the proper use of it will be not only of advantage to ourselves, but to other nations whose interests we may safeguard and protect better than has been done by other powers.

Banker to the world! It is a wonderful opportunity that is offered us; we may have it if we only will. We may make it ours for always, if we work for it. But we must grasp it now, for if we wait and do nothing it may slip from us before we know it.

"Congress won't be advised," says one critic. And still another thinks that what's the matter with it is that it takes all the advice that's coming to it.

If it isn't a vain hope that the president can "get congress in working order," perhaps it will make a feint at catching up with business.

A Valentine Story

By FRANK L. STANTON.

I. THE Valentine Man, he says, says he: "You're one o' the mystery-folk to me! For here you are, in the same old way, Right in line for Valentine Day! O, you're not as old as your hair is gray,— With eyes that sparkle with lights o' May! An' here, with the valentines tossed about, I smile as I see you sort 'em out— To watch the way that your fancy runs,— You're still for the lovin', old, sweetheart-ones!"

II. HE TALKED that way—for he likes his fun— Till I found "Two hearts that beat as one;" With the little Cupids, brave an' bold,— Not a rag more clothes than they had of old, Shootin' the shiny arrows straight As they did that night, at the old home-gate, When she said that she'd be my true sweetheart, To travel together "till death do part." Then the Valentine Man, he says, says he— Edgin' closer, an' nudgin' me: "Valentine-trouble is 'bout to begin, For here's your old woman, a-comin' in!"

III. SWEETEST surprise of Valentine Day!— For the Valentine Man, he heard her say: "I've come for you! And I know," says she, "There's one that's comin' from you to me!" An' there, two lovers—by Time made gay, Who never forgot it was Valentine's Day, Made sweet exchange! An' as we went From the Valentine place, in heart's content, We heard that valentine feller say: "It's mighty sweet when they act that way!"

The Holland Letter

President Wilson's addresses to the people of the mid-west really began in New York city, but this first of the series was a test made in not exactly the most auspicious spot expected. It would be made when he came to New York to speak to the members of the Railway Business Association. Although the president of the association, George A. Post, began in October an attempt to persuade the president to be the associate speaker at the honor and to make the only speech at the banquet, it was not until about two weeks before the meeting that the president accepted the invitation, intimating that he would feel honored if he were to address those business men.

An incident took place when the committee of three—President Post, Herman Westinghouse and William L. Saunders—met the president at the white house to invite him to be the guest at the banquet. President Post said to Mr. Wilson that the Railway Business Association had no railway man in its membership. The members of the association were manufacturers and dealers who sold railway equipment and other supplies to the railroads, but in the account of the association had been compiled to face and absorb no small part of the criticism which was directed at the railroads.

Quick as a thought, the president replied: "Ah, I see. You are the shoe-leatherers." It was evident from the spirit then revealed by the president and by his manner that he looked forward with pleasure to a gathering where he could face a great company of business men, representing, on a whole, the entire United States, and speak to them. He, however, gave no intimation of the character of his address, but did say that he had the association know until the address was delivered what the president would say.

The True Inspiration. President Wilson knew when he faced that great company that at least 75 per cent of the membership were men of republican persuasion, and he knew that his place at the guest table and realized that at no time in his public career had he received such spontaneous and almost tumultuous recognition, the great company sending tributes to him in the way of their appreciation of his office and of his services, he was visibly moved and even warmly moved at that moment, presumably, that he determined to cast aside the address which he had prepared and to rely upon the inspiration of the moment to say the appropriate things he had in mind.

That is who knew that the president was not speaking from memory or from manuscript notes, but wholly under the inspiration of the moment, have since the meeting referred to this instantaneous change as something which reflects a very unusual mental quality, temperamental also. Some, probably a good part, of his hearers were under the impression that the president in the course of his address would make some references to the railway situation. But there was no hint of a thought of that kind in his mind. As he went on, he seemed still to be more and more dominated by the spirit of the gathering, so that he was able to say without any previous formal preparation those things which are contained in all the addresses made on the tour.

While he was upon his speaking tour, he found among his audiences some of the members of the Railway Business Association, and very likely knew that they had carried to their homes enthusiastic reports of his address in New York, and the way in which it was received. These business men realized, too, that it was not necessary for the president to allude to the railroad situation, since he had done that in a satisfactory manner in a former communication to congress.

An Unexpected Revelation. Very likely the members of the Railway Business Association upon their return to their homes told their friends of an unexpected and highly-interesting experience which the entire body—thirteen hundred in all—who saw and heard the president met with. As the minutes passed, it was made evident that the president was entering into the spirit of the occasion with something like the ardor of a young man who is enjoying his first experience in activities that are healthfully stimulating.

Frank Trumbull—who is of high authority in the railway world—was seated at the guest table near the president. In a moment after an introduction, they seemed to have known each other for years, and each listened to the other's anecdotes with evident pleasure.

President Frisco Exposition Thanks Constitution for Help in Making Exposition Success

Editor Constitution: Analysis of the influences which combined to make of the exposition such an unqualified success has still further convinced us that one of the most important contributions has been the loyal, patriotic and most effective support of the press.

Frankly we admit that in common with the thousands of our visitors, we close to the exposition and responsible for it, have marveled at the symmetrical success—a success despite adverse world conditions, unsettled national conditions, an almost overwhelming conjunction of difficulties and handicaps which militated against such a result.

All Americans should feel gratified that more foreign governments participated in this than in any previous American exposition. Accepting the invitation extended by this government and respecting American interests and claims, they joined in the effort to make of the exposition an international success. American states contributed public funds with the hope that through such participation American institutions might be better understood. Exhibitors spent vast sums in their efforts to show the vitality and vigor of their respective countries.

Very truly yours, CHARLES C. MOORE, President, Panama-Pacific International Exposition, San Francisco, Cal.

A Georgia Good Roads Message

(From The St. Louis Republic.) Clark Howell's ringing plea for preparedness—not military preparedness only, but preparedness in the social and economic conquests of peace through vocational education, good roads and sane legislation—will not soon be forgotten by those who heard it yesterday at the members' conference of the Business Men's League.

The editor of The Atlanta Constitution has followed the leadership of his men of vision; he backed up his plea with a recital of the highway conditions in every field of vision; he backed up his plea with a recital of the highway conditions in every field of vision; he backed up his plea with a recital of the highway conditions in every field of vision.

Not often shall I speak your name, For what would strangers care That once a sudden tempest came And swept my garden bare? And then you passed, and in your place Stood Silence with her lifted face.

Not always shall this parting be, For though I travel slow, I too will come to you, And find the way you go; And so I do my task and wait The opening of the shut gate.

FOODS They Build or Destroy

Amazing But Rarely Suspected Truths About the Things You Eat.

By ALFRED W. MCCANN. (Copyright, 1916, by Alfred W. McCann.)

CHAPTER XVI. Without the twelve food minerals wantonly destroyed by man no vegetable or animal could exist on this planet.

Dr. J. Reynolds Green, Cambridge, has demonstrated that even in the life of the plant the minerals play many parts and are necessary for the assimilation of the food of protoplasm. Protoplasm is the soul and essence, the vital, growth-controlling, life-maintaining material of the vegetable and animal cell.

Pfeffer performed a number of experiments in order to show the importance of mineral salts to a growth of plants, which, unlike the animal, possess the power to utilize mineral food as it exists in the ground.

He made a solution of water, calcium nitrate, potassium nitrate, magnesium sulphate, and potassium chloride. Then he put buckwheat to grow in this solution. He also made other solutions in which he omitted from the mixture one or more of the minerals of the normal solution in order to determine what effect such omission would have upon the development of the plant.

Through these experiments he proved that the plant, deprived of any of the minerals mentioned, is affected at once injuriously. He proved, for instance, that in the absence of iron the development of chlorophyll did not take place. Chlorophyll is the green coloring-matter of the plant and corresponds with hemoglobin, which is the coloring matter of the blood. Without chlorophyll and hemoglobin there could be no vegetable or animal life.

He proved conclusively that in the absence of iron faulty nutrition is at once set up. In the five jars illustrated here it can be easily seen just how the growth of the plant was affected by depriving them of the food minerals mentioned.

These food minerals of plants can be divided into four groups, each of which serves a different purpose. In the first group are found sulphur and phosphorus. All analyses of proteins, the fiber of meat, the albumen of egg, the gluten of wheat, the casein of milk, show that sulphur is an essential constituent of them. As plants are immediately affected by the construction of protoplasm, it can be seen that sulphur is contained in every living substance.

Phosphorus is found to be directly associated with the nucleus and is always present. The second group comprises potassium, magnesium, calcium, and iron, all of which have been conclusively demonstrated to be essential to the development of the plant.

The third group consists of sodium, silicon, manganese, chlorine and iodine. In the fourth group is found fluorine. In plant life it has been shown that potassium is connected with the construction of carbohydrates (sugars and starches), but in just what way is not clearly known. It occurs most frequently in the organs in which the food is stored and storage of sugars and starches are most actively carried on, such as in the leaves and tubers.

It has been shown that magnesium has a distribution much like that of potassium and that calcium is essential to the health of all great plants. One of its functions which has been clearly established is that it is active in neutralizing oxalic acid, a poison elaborated in the nutritional processes of vegetables, and therefore finding its way into animal life.

If we compare the influence of potassium, sodium and calcium on the development and growth of plants we find that the presence of potassium leads to a development of stems, flowers and fruits, or to what may be regarded as the maturing of the plant, while in the absence of sufficient potassium and in the presence of sufficient calcium and sodium the growth of the leaves is more directly favored, but the crop remains backward and immature. The fruit does not develop.

It has also been established that the nitrogen so essential to the life of animal and plant is combined with the food minerals of the soil in the formation of nitric acid. The minerals are thus taken up, not only for their own sake in the performing of other functions in life's processes, but also for the sake of the nitrogen which they must carry to the plant. In other words, they are nitrogen carriers as well as oxygen and carbon carriers.

Cats mature less fully and completely in the absence of silica, thus establishing evidence of its acid in the metabolism of that plant. Until quite recently little was known of manganese as a constituent of many plants, but it has now been determined that it exerts a powerful influence on various oxidative processes which are carried out by a somewhat widely spread enzyme known as laccase.

A curious feature of these facts stands forth when we consider that many of the food minerals, even in moderately dilute solutions, are extremely poisonous, yet when they are combined in the extreme manner of assimilating and combining them are not only not poisonous, but actually benevolent in their effect upon plant and animal.

Potassium is a deadly poison, yet in the absence of sufficient potassium, as we have seen, the degree of development of the plant is limited by such deficiency. When the effects of such deficiency are so well marked, even in the case of the plant, it is not surprising that the same is true when the food of his children, through entirely unnecessary and useless processes, to be deprived not only of their potassium salts, but also of every one of the other minerals which we are beginning to see in their true significance.

What effect upon the vigor of American childhood, considered apart from the deaths every year of nearly 400,000 children under three years of age, would be the removal of these food minerals from our national diet? We shall see.

(Chapter 17 Tomorrow) The Dead Patriot's Message. "Go stranger, and to listening Lacedaemonians tell That here while fighting for their liberties, we fell."—Herodotus. In ancient days, so this just tribute read— Inscribed on tomb to Sparta's noble dead; There, at that famous pass, where heroes died And mighty hosts of Xerxes were defied; Where all, who passed that glorious spot, Might see, and might be glad to read, And take this message of Thermopylae.

In modern days, a finer message sent— Inscribed on that grave on soil of Flanders' rent: "Tell England, ye that pass this monument, That we, the dead, who rest here, died in content." No finer message can from patriot come To those he loved in country and to home.—EDGAR LA ROCHE CLARKSON, Atlanta, Ga.

Atlanta Theater Goers Are Offered This Week Brightest Stars of Drama, Comedy and Dance

Top: John Drew, Laura Hope Crews and Thais Lawton in "The Chief," at the Atlanta Monday and Tuesday. Bottom, left to right: Siebel Layman and Sylvia Chaulsae in "Nobody Home," at the Atlanta Wednesday and Thursday; Giovanni Zenatello, dramatic tenor, with the Boston grand opera company, in conjunction with the Pavlova Ballet Russe at the Atlanta Friday and Saturday.

John Drew.
(At the Atlanta.)

You who have seen John Drew in many of his well-known roles will surely like him so it is hard in the one Horace Annesley Vachell furnished him with in his new comedy of modern life and manners, entitled "The Chief." The comedy has had a run in New York, been seen in Boston and Philadelphia, and is to be made known by Mr. Drew at the Atlanta Monday and Tuesday, with a Tuesday matinee. The play is so well recommended for its brightness, the cleverness of its situations, the interest contained in its story, its air of gentility and refinement and its genuine humor, that it would look as if Mr. Drew were to be congratulated on its possession.

Of course, you expect to see Mr. Drew in the role of a well-bred gentleman in this play, but he is to be seen in the role of a well-bred gentleman and a likable one. There is the slight one it is his amiability—a gentleness that permits his mother-in-law to rule the household, instinctively you do not like this mother-in-law, and as the play proceeds you find cause for remaining daughter. Being clever and alert, it looks as if she would succeed when Cynthia comes upon the scene to ask her influential friend for other days to sell some pearls for her and secure for her a position in the world. She has nothing more tangible than memories. The mother-in-law and engages Cynthia as his secretary and then his old law to dispossess Cynthia out of the way. She makes this attempt in changing her with having purchased a banknote and of having sold pearls she knew to be false.

This brings about a scene of much dramatic strength, in which woman is pitted against woman—one honest and admirable and the other cold, clever and scoldingly for herself and her own all the time.

Now, you know you would never like the author if he allowed virtue to go unrewarded and heartlessness to go unpunished, and you will like this play for it ends just as you would like to have it, but not before you have had a few anxious moments, when justice seemed to be asleep and paying no attention to business.

It was said upon the production of the comedy that the role of the Chief was one of the best that Mr. Drew has had in years. One may expect a portrayal that is clear-cut, polished and of admirable finish. The actor is surrounded by a competent company that includes Laura Hope Crews, Thais Lawton, Katherine Stewart, Conaudo Bulley, George Graham and Vaughan Trevor.

That delightful musical comedy "Nobody Home," which John Drew will present at the Atlanta Wednesday and Thursday, with a Thursday matinee, has the record of being one of the successes from the Princess theater in New York and also the musical comedy hit of this season during its long run at the Wilbur theater in Boston, and when it was necessary to extend the Boston season "Nobody Home" continued its successful season.

"Nobody Home" is by Paul Rubens and Jerome Kern. The lyrics fit naturally in the story, which is told and sung in dainty surroundings with harmonious music and songs that fit in the situation and are not dragged in by the heels.

"Nobody Home" is a laughable one. The scenes are laid in New York. To that city comes Rosanna D'Amorini, an Italian furniture dealer from Grand Rapids, Mich. Mrs. D'Amorini, his strenuous and zealous manager, accompanies him and their niece, Violet Brinton, is one of the party. Arriving in New York they go to the exclusive and fashionable hotel Elitz. The gay young-old boy, D'Amorini, becomes much delighted with the society of the show girls and every possible hour he can be away from his family is spent with enticing ladies of the Winter Garden. The prices of food at the Elitz and the expensive supper bills of her husband afford Mrs. D'Amorini much amusement. Vernon Popple, a society dancer, wins the heart of Violet Brinton, the niece of the D'Amorini's, but the aunt is much opposed to Vernon because of his acquaintance with Miss Tony Miller, prima donna of the Winter Garden, upon whom the furniture dealer has his eye.

Reaching the Elitz, Freddy, who is a typical silly-ass type of Englishman, because he lacks the usual good sense one expects to find in a class, unable to secure a room at the Elitz and does not know where to go. At the moment of his greatest dilemma, comes in the hotel office and when she finds Freddy Popple of London, she places at his disposal her new apartment in swaggar upper New York, which she has not yet occupied. Freddy moves himself and Platt to the ladies' rooms and then complications follow quickly, involving all hands and especially the furniture dealer from Grand Rapids. But, at last, Freddy wins "Tony Miller" rather she kidnaps him.

The scenery and stage decorations have been planned and designed by Miss Eliza de Wolf, this being the first theatrical production ever staged by this noted art decorator. He has secured effects in the New York and Boston critics say are just a bit different from the usual garish effects of the average musical comedy production.

Mr. Slocum has selected a cast of exceptional ability for the production, which includes Fercival Knight, Isabelle Randolph, Mabel Withee, Della Lynn, Harry B. Gordon, Miss Kate Vincent Cassidy, Helen Post, Seibel Layman and Sylvia Chaulsae.

Among the numbers from "Nobody Home" are "The Love of Three Kings," "That Wonderful Thing Called Love," "The Magic Melody," "The Little World," "Ten Little Barmalides," "Bed Wonderful Bed," "Another Little Girl," and "Any Old Night."

Grand Opera-Pavlova.

On Friday (at the Atlanta) will offer the Boston Grand Opera company and the Boston Ballet Russe appearing simultaneously in three operas and dancing exhibitions. The most famous of the operas will appear with the two organizations, Mme. Pavlova having her organization, which last year with the Boston company comes with the noted singers seen here last season.

For the opening performance "L'Amore del Tre Re" ("The Love of Three Kings") will be sung with Louise Willard in the role of the friend when the opera was first produced at La Scala; Thomas Chalmers, Jose went to Elvira, Lovroni and Giovanni Zenatello as Avito. The opera will be followed by Mme. Pavlova and the Ballet Russe in "The Nutcracker."

At the Saturday matinee the offering will be "Mascara" with Tamaki Miura in the title role. Riccardo Martin will play Lieutenant Fingert and Graham in the role of "Sharpless." This will be followed by Mme. Pavlova and the Ballet Russe in the complete ballet "Coppelia," which is in two acts.

For the final performance the two Grand Operas will present "La Boheme" with Maggie Teyte as Mimì, supported by Thomas Chalmers, Jose Mardone, Joseph Randolf and the Ballet Russe. The Spanish dances given by Mme. Pavlova and the Ballet Russe.

The opera engagement is attracting great attention as a musical and dramatic event, and it is being followed from out of town to Atlanta. Mail orders have been received for seats from all parts of the city. The people are ranging any number of parties and the event will be notable from a social as well as in the matter of the blended arts of music, drama and terpsichore. Seats are now on sale for the engagement.

Keith Vaudeville.
(At the Forsyth.)

Most intensely and humanly appealing of all present-day vaudeville acts, Keith Vaudeville bill this week. The most popular and the most emotional sketches are Pat Rooney and Marion Bent, mirthful pair, ever welcome. Making their debut in the exceptional merit, and various other artists in the best among variety offerings.

"War Brides" is Marion Craig Wentworth's never-to-be-forgotten appeal for universal peace. Nazimova, the great emotional actress who first appeared in the play, personally selected and released the cast. The part is played by the beautiful and emotional of Joan, leading role, was entrusted to Sara Blala, a remarkable emotional actress, declared to be second only to Nazimova herself.

The drama of "War Brides" is neutral and universal. It represents any country at war, the world over. The play is pronounced the greatest conflict in Europe. It is a vivid portrayal of "who pays the price of war." It also heralds the day when all war shall cease because women will refuse to have the right also to say what becomes of them.

"War Brides" is the rebellion against the sending of children for war. The heroine's protest against being made a "human breeding machine" is made refusal to bear her child until there is promise of no more war.

In Pat Rooney and Marion Bent, two of variety's favorite mirth-makers have been secured by Manager George H. Hickman. Pat and Marion have a strong, engaging and witty repartee, and do this, that and the other in their

John Drew Ofttimes Amused By Stories Told on Himself

There is much that is often said and sometimes written regarding John Drew that tickles that amiable actor's sense of humor. Occasionally he laughingly refers to these things to his intimates, and he is not a bit slow about recounting good stories on himself.

While lunching at a club the other day one of Mr. Drew's friends asked if it never irritated him to have continually said that he acted himself.

"Rather it amuses me," answered the actor, "finally the ones that say that have no way of knowing whether I act myself or not, because they don't know me, have never seen me off the stage. So how can they say I act myself? They are like the man in Fielding's 'Tom Jones' who says 'Garrick as Hamlet and reported that he didn't think much of Garrick, but he liked the man who played the king because he acted all over the place. They do not realize that art in acting is disguising the actor's own character more closely you simulate a character in a conventional way, just as I am talking now, I must know how to pitch my voice, how loud to talk so that it will sound natural across the footlights, what to do and what not to do in order to appear natural."

"Do you ever get tired of hearing yourself called a success?" asked the actor on the American stage?

"That is a touch of bucolicism that I have grown used to. It reminds me of the 'way-down-east' expression, applied by Yankee farmers with a grain of contempt to the city-bred man in a collar: 'He's got Boston dressin'." Or of the actor, whose name shall remain in oblivion, who would be called a success challenged me for the championship belt as the best dress-suit wearer on the American stage. Naturally, he continues a fine dress-suit actor."

Mr. Drew is credited with being today the ens actor who is able to keep alive what has for many years been known as the "drawing room" comedy. In his time he has played over 100 roles. To some people he is essentially an actor of modern roles, but his range has been from farce to light comedy and Shakespearean roles. Some of the actor's greatest successes have been scored in Shakespeare's plays. Mr. Drew comes from theatrical stock, his mother, Mrs. John Drew, was one of the most talented actresses that ever graced the American stage. The actor is the uncle of Ethel Barrymore.

MANY WAR TIME SONGS IN "HEART SONGS" BOOK

Music That Has Stirred and Soothed Easily Obtainable.

The songs that were sung during the great civil war—that had their origin directly from the hearts of the people while the fierce four years' struggle was going on—these songs deserve a place in history. They served to soothe the fears and allay the anxious moments of many a crisis when the humming wires might flash a message that meant the destruction of the union. They calmed and comforted the women who were left at home—with grief and suffering paramount in each of the days that dragged out the weary length. They served as the outpouring of that silent agony which must find utterance or break the heart. They were the audible and visible applications of the millions that could only watch and pray—while the gallant boys in blue and gray fought the battles at the front.

The music and the words of these war songs cannot be reproduced today. It needs the inspiration of a momentous war to produce their like. And it is eminently fitting that they should be gathered into one volume such as "Heart Songs."

This treasury of song is offered on own inimitable style. Pat Rooney is one of the few dancers who originates his own dances and more imitators than anyone else on the stage.

Keith Vaudeville, a violinist who will appear this week, comes to Atlanta with the reputation of being one of the best violinists in the country. Vaudeville Miss Ball has risen to fame by sheer merit of her playing, and her playing is so good that she is called "The Girl Who Plays Like a Man."

There is a comedy sketch this week called "Boy From Home," in which Sharon Stephens, the author, J. Moy Bennett and Carl Borson appear. Meade Ryan and Charles Innes will appear in an unusual comedy turn in which the author, J. Moy Bennett and Carl Borson appear. The play is punctuated with bright songs.

Howard Field's "Dining Car Bizarre" is a comedy sketch, which is a novel feature of the week will be the original "Big Jim," a big bear that wrestles rattlesnakes, tangos and who's about, does almost everything but talk.

The program will open with the latest of the Bray animated cartoon, closing with the current Pathe news weekly.

FABLED SPARROW OF WHITE PLUMAGE SEEN AT DALTON

Dalton, Ga., February 12.—(Special.) Colonel Julius McCamy, a prominent attorney of this city, states that the fabled white sparrow has taken up its abode near his residence on Thornton avenue, and that he may be seen almost any morning with a large drove of English sparrows, and that the Albino sparrow seems to be king among the other birds. Colonel McCamy describes the bird as being similar in appearance in size to other sparrows, but snow white in plumage.

The bird is very rare, and just whether it will bring the good fortune described in the story is a matter of opinion. McCamy's old reader cannot be answered. The Dalton bird is most easily seen early in the morning, and is usually has a good audience about 6 o'clock, when he puts in his appearance. No effort has been made to capture the bird, and the community rather prides itself on the distinction of having such a rare visitor.

IF BACK HURTS TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Says Backache is sure sign you have been eating too much meat.

Uric Acid in meat clogs Kidneys and irritates the bladder.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally. In the kidney region, severe headache, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, actinic, muscular stiffness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys soft and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from a good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with bicarbonate of soda, and it flushes out the kidneys and stimulates them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts, a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clear, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Scarcity of Dry Goods, With Prices Steadily Advancing, Causes Local Houses to Send Out Special Letters to Salesmen—American Prints Show Big Advance.

The advances which are almost daily coming in prices on dry goods and notions has put the big wholesale houses in this section on their mettle to meet the conditions which they believe to be inevitable.

From practically all houses in this territory have representatives to the big markets of the east to get a better line on the situation and to prepare to take care of its trade in the north.

Most of them have been successful in securing goods and up to the present time have been able to keep their trade supplied and even hope to be able to continue to do so though there must come the advances to their customers which they are now having to meet.

Friday for instance, was received in the city a circular letter from the big house of M. C. D. Borden & Sons, stating that on account of the color situation and other conditions over which they have no control that all American prints would be advanced immediately to 6 cents while foreign prints were quoted at 6 cents. They also stated that in deliveries they could only guarantee 30 per cent dark against 70 per cent lights.

In order to get the situation more clearly before it traveling men, that they might better appreciate the situation and make it more clear to their retail trade one of the big jobbing houses Friday was sending out to its travelers a circular letter in which it said:

It is hard to convince the average country merchant that goods are going up when cotton is standing still or on the decline. If you are well posted on the situation we believe you can present these conditions to him intelligently, and you can mention that this country has got to supply practically the balance of the world with cotton and woolen goods for the next twelve months.

For instance in a single house in New York this week buyers in dry goods lines were registered from Russia, Greece, France, England, Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Venezuela, Cuba, Porto Rico, Mexico and Canada. We would not have as much merchandise as we have if ships could be secured to take freight out of this country. All the space has been spoken for in ships up until June 1.

Wide sheetings have been sold up and there is none to offer before May 1 from one mill and September 1 by others.

All solid and fancy outings are sold up until October and mills will take additional business after October 1 at 10 per cent advance over present high prices.

The situation in the fabric line is something that the oldest wholesalers and jobbers have never undergone before. It is absolutely necessary for a continual adjustment of prices to a higher level. There is only one-third as much wool in this country as we can use—not ninety days' supply of dyestuffs, and we are going to have to get out of the old stereotyped fashion of 'something to retail for 5 and 10 cents. Westerners are using all the goods they can get at the advanced price.

All of which is a good tip to the wise retail merchant to buy his goods as early as possible.

H. B. Wey, of Dobbs & Wey, has been confined to his house for a few days with cold. He hopes to be at his store on Monday.

One of the most important gatherings of the salesmen of the McCord-Stewart company was held on Saturday the 6th, when at the regular sales conference of the firming liners W. D. Williamson, secretary-treasurer of the company, made a special talk to the travelers. His address was along the lines of equipment for salesmanship, stressing the point that the individuality of the salesman stamped the individuality of the house. His talk was well received by the entire sales force, and the gathering proved one of the most interesting and profitable ever held by the sales force.

The picture herewith shows the large selling force of this well-known wholesale grocery concern, and gives some idea of the splendid strides this house has made in commercial circles since it began operations about thirty years ago.

Hardly a wholesale grocery house in this whole section has been so continuously in successful business as the McCord-Stewart company. When it began business in January, 1886, the company employed only three traveling men. Three office men handled the clerical work, and only a single driver was required to deliver its goods. The company then handled about a dozen articles five of which perhaps constituted its chief business. Today McCord-Stewart company employ from eighty five to one hundred people all

FAIN & STAMPS TO RETIRE FROM BUSINESS

Well-Known Wholesale Grocery House Winding Up Its Affairs.

After many years of successful operation in this city the well-known firm of Fain & Stamps, wholesale grocers, is retiring from business.

No house in Atlanta or this entire section has been better known or more popular than this house. It has counted its patrons by the score, but for the past few weeks W. O. Stamps, who has had a charge of the business since the retirement of W. P. Fain, several months ago, has been winding up the affairs of the company.

Just what Mr. Stamps plans for the future are he will not say just now. He feels that he has earned and needs a rest and after a trip perhaps to Florida or some other place, he will return and again enter active business. For several years the firm was located on South Broad street. For the past four or five years it has been

RAMSAUR WANTS TO STICK TO HIS FIRST LOVE

It's hard for a fellow to break away from his first love.

At least that is what H. E. Ramsaur, known to his hosts of good friends as "Sport," says about it. And "Sport" knows, for he has been one of the live wires in the wholesale grocery business for twenty-one years.

Mr. Ramsaur is just now in a sort of quandary. Nearly all his nature life he has been buying, receiving and shipping groceries for some big wholesale house. He has waited on the grade, he has kept up stock, and they kept up with the orders of as many as fifteen busy salesmen, but now he is temporarily out of a job.

For the past four years he has been with the well-known house of Fain & Stamps. They are retiring from business and he has kept up the stock, and they will have wound up their last trade.

Several opportunities have been opened to Mr. Ramsaur, but they were not in the grocery line. "That's about all I know," says "Sport." "I have been at it from morning till night for twenty-one years. Work work—that's what I like—in the grocery line. But I hate to start out at something else now that I am not familiar with it. If there's a big grocery concern looking for an expert hustler—one who can do more work to his inches than any in the country, and do it efficiently and quick—it might pay them to get in touch with "Sport."

A. C. BARNES LEADER AT J. K. ORR SHOE CO.

A. C. Barnes, North Carolina salesman for the J. K. Orr shoe company, landed in class AA last week on his sales record. His record for the week was unusually large. Coming next on the list was C. J. McKinley, of northwest Georgia, L. M. G. Oakes, of north Georgia, who secured a place on the A list. Other salesmen whose names were on the honor roll were P. C. Gregory, Cliff Johnson, W. A. Lightfoot, W. A. Brown, W. D. Beacham, H. D. Fain and Russ Bates.

BIG ATLANTA HOUSE PAID A COMPLIMENT

Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt Co. Given Splendid Write-Up in N. Y. Commercial Paper.

In the last issue of The New York Commercial and Financial World, the following editorial staff correspondence appears relative to Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, one of Atlanta's leading wholesale dry goods houses.

"Pursuing his investigations into general trade conditions in Atlanta and one of your correspondents called the other day upon Mr. P. D. Yates, president of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, wholesale dealers in dry goods and notions.

"Mr. Yates was found to be optimistic as to both present conditions and future prospects. He said, among other things, that retailers were buying with better judgment than formerly, and not in such large quantities as to run the risk of overstocking themselves. At the same time prices on dry goods, notions, etc., are lower than they are likely to be in the future, and this fact has the effect of stimulating judicious merchants to buy with reasonable freedom. For the future all discernible indications are full of promise.

"While the above named company may not be the largest in its line here, it is certainly one of the most progressive and carries as choice and as comprehensive a line as any, and has a constantly growing and extending all over Georgia and the neighboring states in dry goods, ladies' and children's ready-to-wear garments, notions.

"The company have been at their present address at Pryor street and Auburn avenue for eight years past, but this is rapidly becoming a retail center, and some time ago they decided to locate in the great wholesale center of the city, and so it comes about that they have a new and handsome building in course of construction at Pryor and Mitchell streets, to which they will remove about the middle of March. It will be four lofty stories in height with a deep basement, comprising in all some 25,000 square feet of floor space.

"This will be one of the finest and best lighted and equipped wholesale dry goods stores in Atlanta—or in the south, for that matter. The company will carry a larger stock than ever before, and the goods will be better displayed than has heretofore been possible.

"Mr. John F. Ridley is secretary and treasurer of the company, and there is a strong board of directors.

"No Atlanta concern enjoys a more honorable reputation than this one, or is more highly spoken of."

TUB CLOTHES CO. NOW TURNING OUT GOODS.

The announcement made in this firming line of the new company just beginning the manufacture of boys' wash clothes was heard from in many sections of the south.

"We had a number of inquiries," said Oscar Strause, of the Tub Clothes company, "some of them coming from as far as Texas. We have already about finished our sample lines, and are showing some extra fine values in boys' khaki and Palm Beach pants. Our boys' blouses range in price from $1.50 to $12 dozen and from the way in which we have started off we are expecting a big season. We have a large force now at work and have already had to increase it quite a good deal."

The LEAP YEAR VALENTINE

"He Is in Her Hands This Year!"—How Will This Affect the Valentines of the New Feminist Era?

Miss Mae Morse, Member of the Debutantes' Club, Pledged to Propose Marriage Before the Year Is Out.

THIS is leap year, tomorrow is St. Valentine's day—and we are living in a "Feminist" era. Figure the combination of circumstances and judge for yourself what the consequences may be. Before Feminism came to be the significant force it is credited with being today, leap year was a whimsicality. There were traditions, strange stories handed down to the credulous, of actual cases where women proposed marriage under the privileges assumed to belong to the leap year calendar. And the joke was always good. It helped social merriment. It excused merry jests. It gave point to certain harmless escapades of parlor and summer resort.

Then, along with so many other changes, in dress, in manners, in customs as well as costumes, came changes in the mating formulas. It became apparent that women occasionally did propose, without waiting for leap year. And Feminism, that spectre dreaded of timid men, began to flourish amazingly, and to recognize woman's rights to take initiative in business, in society, in personal relations. We-Won't-Get-Married Clubs as well as We-Will-Get-Married Clubs began to spring up, often as a joke, but often, too, quite plainly indicating a rebellious disposition. Here is the Debutante's Club, organized by twenty young women in Brooklyn, N. Y., and pledging each member to ask a man to marry her before the year is out. Miss Adele Huhn was elected president, Miss Mabel McKeever was elected vice-president and Miss Mae Morse secretary. The club insists that it is not acting jocularly, but has the serious purpose of defying a tradition that has hampered women from the beginning of time.

What effect will such movements, such attitudes of mind, have on the venerable traditions of St. Valentine? Shall she send the tender symbolism to him? Is Cupid's whole game to be revised? The question is not trivial. Under the influence of the new rebellion it is possible that a revision of the time-honored sentiments are to find an actual, practical beginning. Many a social change has begun in jest. Many a temple has been pulled down, many a statute rewritten, under the spell of what at first appeared to be but a whimsicality. St. Valentine's day may make no open revelation. But its secret history may tell a story just the same.

If we could know this secret history, if we could know of all the valentines, if we could know all that was said as well as written under the spell of St. Valentine and his festival, we should have a profounder knowledge of human nature, a deeper critical insight into that business called Love. We should know whether it is true that the coming of Feminism really is changing our social system, however subtly, or whether masculine and feminine hearts are remaining pretty much the same as they always have been. In the end we shall discover, probably, that, though fashions may change, even fashions of proposal, the eternal elements that determine the social partnership will go on being what they have been since the beginning of time.

Miss Adele Huhn, President, and Miss Mabel McKeever, Secretary of the "Propose-This-Year" Debutantes' Club.

EIGHTH INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS

Little Helen Holmes, daughter of General Holmes, railroad man, is rescued from imminent danger on a scenic railroad by George Storm, a newboy. Grown to young womanhood Helen saves Storm, now a fireman her father and his friends Amos Rhinelander, financier and Robert Seagrue, promoter, from a three-year feud. Satebreakers employed by Seagrue steal General Holmes' survey plans of the out of line for the Tidewater, fatally wounding the general and securing his father's estate badly involved by his death. Helen goes to work on the Tidewater. Helen recovers the survey plans from Seagrue, and though they are taken from her, finds an accidentally made proof of the survey blueprint. Storm is employed by Rhinelander, Spike and his confederate satebreakers steal Rhinelander's roll money. Helen pursues and, with a policeman's aid, captures two of them and recovers the money. Spike, befriended by Helen in his turn saves her and the right-of-way contracts when Seagrue kidnaps her.

THE RACE FOR RIGHT OF WAY

What to do with Spike after he had turned over his first leaf in the book of gratitude proved a difficulty for Helen. But it seemed to her the first thing to be attempted was to get him well away from Seagrue's influence. Seagrue, with the ample backing at his disposal, had established an elaborate construction camp well out on the desert, where he coupled with his railroad building enterprise as much of fraudulent deceit and force as he dare display toward Rhinelander and the men in the Copper Range & Tidewater construction work. The prize for which both roads were playing in the tremendous effort of each to get ahead of the other was a substantial one and Seagrue was never called to account at his headquarters for his strategy in the construction trenches.

On the morning that Helen took Spike down street to a Las Vegas clothing store, had him fitted out with new clothes and provided him with some pocket money, Seagrue was on his way over to his camp, accompanied by the two strong-arms, known by no more respectable names than Bill and Lug. He saw Helen on the street with Spike and watched the two for a moment. Dispatching Bill then to the garage for his motor car and bidding Lug, on his life, not to lose sight of Spike, Seagrue, himself, hastened to the office of the local sheriff, whose interest, as a precautionary measure, he had enlisted on his side the moment he reached the desert.

Explaining to this official, already made complacent by generous offerings, that he had on his hands a contract laborer who was trying to jump his job, he engaged his promise of vigorous cooperation to bring Spike to time. In fact, the sheriff offered to arrest him at once.

No," objected Seagrue, as if he should hesitate to put a new friend to so much trouble. "Don't arrest Spike. I think I can handle him; but I should like you to be on hand to make sure. If he consents to stay here and finish his work, you may let him alone—understand?"

The sheriff nodded companionably, and Seagrue led the way with him to the machine, which Bill had brought up, and, getting in with the sheriff, Bill drove toward the station. Helen had returned with Spike to the office, she had paid for a railroad ticket which was to carry him to the city, where, she believed, freed from Seagrue's contaminating influence, Spike would have a chance to get back on his feet. And having said good-by to Spike on the platform and dodged his thanks as much as she could, she hurried into the office to prepare to meet the incoming train.

Spike, in a comfortable frame of mind, was looking down at the ticket in his hand and reflecting what an extraordinary friend Helen had been and how considerably she had treated him, when a quiet voice at his elbow spoke just two words into his ear.

"Hello, Spike!"

"Spike, who lived, as it were, at all times over a powder magazine of the unexpected, started a little and turned to look into the composed gray eyes of Seagrue. He stood a moment bound by their spell. Something in them seemed to chill and wither all the good resolutions he had taken to break away for good and all from his lawless associates and get back to the 'square' as he had said he wanted to do.

Seagrue's face was lighted only by a pleasant smile. "Where you going, Spike?" he asked in friendly fashion.

It seemed to Spike as if through some irresistible force his feet were nailed to the spot where they rested. He looked about him with in decision and as his eyes wandered he saw Seagrue beckoning to the sheriff to come over from the machine.

The mere sight of a sheriff raised in Spike's memory an extremely disagreeable picture.

Seagrue meantime put his hand in his pocket. From it he drew a worn little pamphlet, and affecting careful deliberation held it in his hand before Spike's wavering eyes. In the black faced type on the cover a name and description were printed but what Spike saw staring him were the figures and the word

"$500.00 REWARD!"

But to Spike that one line of type meant infinitely more than it could mean to any other man. Seagrue watched closely the changing expressions on the hunted criminal's face. He was even quiet and pleasant in his demeanor as he muttered, "You shouldn't try to leave me, Spike. At least not until I say you may go."

Something of hatred and aversion for the man whom he had served so long and in so evil a fashion flamed up in Spike's heart.

Seagrue he almost hissed. "I can send you to the chair man—do you know that?"

Seagrue lost none of his composure. He returned Spike's angry look undisturbed. "Do you know what will happen when you do?" he asked in even tones. "After they lift me out of it they'll lift you in for the next shock, Spike. When you're ready to commit suicide, I'm ready to go to the straps ahead of you or after you—that as the sheriff may prefer. But until that moment comes, Spike—a threatening intonation made itself felt within the studied utterance—"until that moment, Spike, you will take your orders from me—understand?"

Spike looked gloomily down at the ticket he held in his hand. He realized he was utterly helpless. "All right," he said gruffly.

Seagrue shook hands with the sheriff as he followed Spike across the platform. "I don't think I'll have any more trouble with him," he said in an undertone. "Thank you just the same, sheriff."

beside Spike and nodding to Bill directed him to drive over to the camp.

With the rival construction crews, matters were reaching a somewhat critical stage in their race. Both the Colorado & Coast and the Copper Range & Tidewater companies had reached the limits of the city of Las Vegas, where, owing to the topography of getting through the town, possible rights of way were exceedingly scarce. A section almost immediately in front now of both construction gangs was occupied by a weather-beaten pioneer who bore the name of Cassidy, and his comfortable cottage obstructed both surveys.

The advent of two railroads building neck and neck across the desert through the little town had naturally stirred every inhabitant of it to a high pitch of excitement. Small wonder that Cassidy's head had become in some degree confused as to values, and by the time Rhinelander got around to see the bronzed pioneer with a check for two thousand dollars—the price first put upon the property by its veteran owner—valuations had risen and Cassidy declared that he would sell for ten thousand dollars and not a cent less.

Rhinelander, considerably taken aback, impatiently assented to the exorbitant sum named, and going inside the cottage, wrote out his check for it.

dispatched him to a spot between Rhinelander's car and the main line with instructions to "lap in" and take whatever messages passed. Rhinelander thus sat in his own car watching the operator tick off his message to Helen, and her reply came promptly:

"Attorney will meet you on arrival. Special will be ready to leave any time after eleven."

But Seagrue's operator industriously copied both message and answer and turned them in to his employer.

Storm, in the meantime, was making the most of his opportunity, and with his men on Cassidy's place was preparing to push possession as far as possible.

"Run the steel cables around the house, George, and we will swing it in later."

After giving this order, Rhinelander had hastened to the station to meet the local train when it came in. So swift, however, had been Seagrue's dispositions that his redoubtable scouts, Bill and Lug, were already at the station with instructions from Seagrue to delay the special until midnight, by which time he reckoned he could make his possession secure on the Cassidy place.

These worthies had already reached the special and boarded it. On the platform, Rhinelander met down the platform and across the yard to rouse the crew and get them to carry her to Rhinelander. But though Soda Water Sal stood as peaceful as an old Dobbin munching her noonday repast, the switching crew was nowhere to be found. Beyond a doubt, Helen felt, they were all down town, eating their dinners, and to find them quickly was out of the question. She called out a few times, hardly hoping for a response, and none met her ears. There was steam up, and without loss of time Helen climbed into the cab, and, opening the throttle, gave Sal steam. A venerable mare, struck in the midst of her lunch, with a whip, could not have been more startled than the old engine at Helen's summons. Soda Water Sal started and trembled. Helen touched her heels again. The old machine let out an asthmatic wheeze, sputtered, coughed and with an uneven jerk started forward.

Certainly no such sight as she made was ever before seen on the main line of the Copper Range & Tidewater. If Soda Water Sal had been dancing a two-step on the rails, she could not have plunged and cavorted more wildly than she did as Helen, pushing her to a pace undreamed of in her long and peaceful yard career, achieved a miracle of speed with her.

Up the line, Rhinelander, the deputies, the train crew and the engineer and fireman of the stolen a few minutes Soda Water Sal, rounding the curve behind, shot past them with her reeling coach.

Overtaking the abandoned engine on a grade a few miles ahead, the coach was again coupled to it by the Rhinelander party, and when the queer-looking combination reached the first passing track, the engine of the special, almost dead, was vigorously kicked by Soda Water Sal, together with the car, out into the clear. And Helen, with the more venturesome of her legal lights clinging to the foot board and running boards of Soda Water Sal and others swarming in her tender and crowding the cab, again rushed the posse on to the scene of the trouble.

At the camp Rhinelander's forces were in trouble. Seagrue's strategy had completely blocked them—everybody was stumped by Seagrue's audacity. And while the leaders were trying to pull themselves together, Seagrue's men were rapidly extending their possession of the disputed ground.

Storm, realizing that at any cost the situation must somehow be recouped, ran over to where Wood was watching the enemy and whispered to him. Whatever the proposal, the old man was startled when George Storm made it.

Wood looked toward the camp dubiously. "I don't know," he said finally. "That's pretty radical medicine. But Rhinelander isn't here and I suppose we've got to do something. It's a cinch they've got us beat out of three months' time in another hour, for if they once get hold of this section, we've got to drag them into court. If you think the old man will stand for it, George, slam away. You know as well as I do. But I can't take the responsibility."

"I will," cried Storm emphatically. He turned to the foreman of their switching crew, who stood near, and pointed to the engine puffing at some little distance. "Couple on to that outfit car, Carty, as quick as the Lord will let you, and get ready for a run."

Carty hurried down the track. Storm, giving orders right and left, asked Wood to send a crew of men to throw everything movable in the outfit car out on the sand.

Seagrue, watching from a distance the sudden activity among Rhinelander's forces, watched the new developments with much curiosity and some little anxiety. He saw the switch engine speed down the line, couple to the outfit car and back away with it for a dash. In the cab all was excitement. Under Storm's orders, preparations were being made for a record dash, and as the engine stopped with the outfit car in front of it down below the second switch, huge volumes of smoke pouring from the stack into the blazing sunshine convinced Seagrue that something was up. Rhinelander's laborers and track layers under Storm's directions parted and stood expectant at each side of the run of track on which Cassidy's house had been so unceremoniously dropped. Seagrue saw, too late, what Storm's radical move in the night meant.

Storm, scent of battle in his nostrils, stood on the footboard as the sturdy switch engine started. On it came, accelerating fast from one, two, ten, twenty miles an hour up to thirty. With the safety valve popping and smoke streaming in a cloud from the stack, the engine with Rhinelander's movable hotel in front of it, bore down on Cassidy's house. Cassidy, himself, sunning on a pile of Seagrue's ties, with his pipe in his mouth and his two checks in his pocket, little suspected what was coming. But Rhinelander's men saw and undeterred it all. A mighty yell rose from the delighted gang as the engine and car sped on Storm, bareheaded, his black hair streaming in the sun—clinging with one hand for safety as he swung from the end of the footboard and stretched his left arm far out as a semaphore—signaled the cab.

The engineer checked heavily. A stream of fire ground from the driving wheels, the engine jumped in the grip of the brakes and the outfit car released headed like a catapult straight at Cassidy's house. Men jumped back as it hurtled past. The next instant, crashing and smashing ahead, it tore completely through Cassidy's house. A great cloud of dust and timbers rose as from an explosion and the next moment what had been a house lay torn into a thousand pieces along the right of way.

Like a spent cannon ball the outfit car drove on, men, amass, watching its wild flight. It struck the end of the rails, hung for a moment poised, tumbled and toppled headlong from the embankment into a borrow pit.

Storm sprang from the foot board of the engine, and before the dust of the crash had settled called his men forward. Rhinelander's gang responded with fresh hope and energy. Seagrue saw with wrath how completely he had been outplayed. He called his men together to rush the Copper Range forces for possession of the Cassidy yard. They ran forward with picks and shovels and it looked to Storm as if blood might be shed in spite of everything, when the long shrill whistle of Soda Water Sal was heard down the line and within a few moments Helen brought the old engine to a stop at the end of the steel.

The deputies, followed by Rhinelander and his attorney, poured out of the gangway. Storm met his boss. Just what view Amos would take of the summary measures he had adopted to clear their right of way the young man felt now a little uncertain about. Rhinelander looked ahead for the familiar landmark which he had just acquired at the rather extravagant price of ten thousand dollars and asked where the Cassidy house was. "Ah gahn't hell," interposed Cassidy (who stood listening), pathetically.

Storm pointed to the wreckage littering the right of way and told the story of what had been done by Seagrue and how his play had been defeated. Rhinelander's face lighted with enthusiasm and Helen's eyes danced with sheer joy. Seagrue, disgruntled and beaten had seated himself on his own right of way on the pile of ties vacated in excitement by Cassidy. In another hour Rhinelander's men had made their title to the disputed property good.

Cassidy, bewildered by the extraordinary turn things had taken, started to walk back to where Seagrue was, but on reflection he changed his mind and, lighting his pipe sat quietly down on a part of the roof that had for many years given him a peaceful shelter, to view the vengeance so swiftly taken on his former abode. He had less than Seagrue had to worry about. With both checks in his pocket, he felt sure he must realize on at least one, and he sat on the scene long after the men had quit work thoughtfully smoking his pipe and reflecting on the queer things that may happen in a real railroad war.

In exchange he received Cassidy's rather uncertain signature, on the customary legal form, granting to the Copper Range & Tide Water Railway company privileges over the Cassidy land as a freehold owner.

Seagrue, arriving from town, learned from his foreman of the status of the insignificant plot of ground, adverse possession of which might frustrate their persistent plans for obstructing Rhinelander. With his surveyors Seagrue hurried to the end of the work, and reached the ground just in time to encounter Rhinelander coming out of Cassidy's house and the agreement duly signed and delivered in his hand. And behind Rhinelander came George Storm ready to bring the men up to take possession of the Cassidy demense.

Seagrue and his followers halted them and Rhinelander, feeling the victory all his own, explained the situation to Seagrue, while Storm, amiably, but firmly, ordered Seagrue's men to get off the Copper Range property.

Seagrue, without saying anything to controvert what he had heard, walked straight into Cassidy's house. "I'm sorry to be a little late, Cassidy," he began, bluntly. "You know we want your property. And we're prepared to pay you a reasonable price for it—not an extravagant price," declared Seagrue, impressively, "nothing of that kind, but—" he added, buttonholing the old man with friendly emphasis, "just what is right and fair. I don't know what you consider your property worth," he continued, talking so fast the old man could not get a word in edgewise, "but I have written out a check here for fifteen thousand dollars. And if you will give me your signature to this right of way contract the check, old boy, is yours."

"But—" sputtered Cassidy, with difficulty. "I've sold this place this minute, Mr. Seagrue, to this man Rhinelander here for ten thousand dollars."

"Do you mean to say?" demanded Seagrue, impressively, "that you don't consider your property worth fifteen thousand dollars?"

"Sure, I do," agreed Mike, his eyes blinking with astonishment.

"Then," exclaimed Seagrue, solemnly, "this man has fraudulently imposed on you."

Cassidy, bewildered, looked to his friendly adviser for a suggestion. "Phwat the divvie 'm I to do?"

"Do!" thundered Seagrue, seeing now that he had his victim coming. "Tear up your fraudulent contract here and now and sign an honest one!"

To so far a proposal as this from so considerable a gentleman, there seemed no objection, and the sturdy pioneer, with a show of indignation, not only tore up his copy of Rhinelander's contract, but stamped it under foot, signed a more equitable one for the obliging Seagrue and put another and untainted check for fifteen thousand dollars into the same well worn pocketbook that gave countenance and shelter to Rhinelander's check. But he did not destroy Rhinelander's.

Seagrue beckoned to his posse of men and, headed by Cassidy, they told Rhinelander and his companions to get off the premises before they were put off.

Rhinelander, familiar with the bullying tactics of his enemies, saw the situation he faced. But he stood his ground before Seagrue and Cassidy, listening patiently to what the victimized old man had to say, but absolutely firm in his resolve to stand on his rights.

Helen and the attorney she had summoned, and with him, Rhinelander hastened uptown to get armed deputies—Bill and Lug now trailing behind to keep track of every move.

At Cassidy's, Storm was urging his men to speed on with their track laying. Seagrue's gang was almost abreast of them and setting a pace, too, that it was difficult to cope with—Seagrue, himself, directing the operations. The house, so long the peaceful abode of old man Cassidy, now became the very storm center of an extraordinary disturbance. Seagrue racked his brain for an idea that would hamper the advance of Storm and his energetic crew. And when the inspiration struck him, he put it instantly into effect.

"They're beating us," he said to his foreman, "that's fat. But I can stop them. Bring up the wrecker."

The word was passed and the ponderous wrecking car, its huge crane thrust threateningly forward, was pushed alongside Cassidy's house and surrounded by a swarming gang of men. Seagrue's order to throw out the whip was instantly executed and almost within a minute, it seemed, after the huge machine had been brought into play the house was enveloped in a network of steel. There was a sharp word of command; a rattle of pistons; the old house quivered for an instant in the grip of the mysterious monster—then it rose like a mad aeroplane from its foundations; hung and swung a moment doubtfully in the air, pitched headlong toward the other end of the lot and settled with a heavy bang down to earth exactly in the path of Storm and his perspiring men.

Rhinelander, the moment he secured the deputies, hastened back to the station and boarded the special train. A large engine coupled to one coach, stood in waiting, and as they pulled out, Helen wished him good luck. Unfortunately, Seagrue's two worthies, Bill and Lug, unobserved by anybody, hid on the head end of the coach, and as soon as the town was left behind, the two climbed over the tender and held up the fireman and engineer. The engine crew, taken thus unawares, could offer no resistance whatever and the two were forced over the tender to the head end of the coach.

Cutting off the engine as soon as they had accomplished this, Seagrue's men pulled away with the stolen locomotive and left the coach just where it abruptly stopped when the air went on, with the intention of putting as many miles as possible between the coachload of deputies and Rhinelander's chances for defending the right of way.

The conductor of the marooned coach did not lose a moment in getting into action. An emergency telephone was snatched from its bracket, connected up with the main line wires and the conductor called up Helen in the office at Las Vegas. In a few words he told her what had happened, and while Rhinelander and the deputies listened around him, he asked what she could do to help them out of their predicament.

Helen understood the necessity for prompt action. But how, she asked herself as she looked anxiously from the office window up and down the yards, to help them quickly? Her eye lighted on the little roundhouse away down at the lower end of the yard.

Resting within the friendly shade of its north wall she espied the crazy old yard switch engine, known irreverently among the switchmen as "Soda Water Sal." Soda Water Sal took her disreputable nickname from the fact of her misfortunes in being crushed white a good part of the time with alkali. The excited girl dashed at the top of her speed engine surrounding the marooned coach, searched the horizon vainly for a sign of assistance. The conductor, the moment after he had raised Helen on the wire and told of their plight out between stations on the main line, had not been able to get another word from the Las Vegas office. In his impatience and excitement, Rhinelander had taken over the telephone and used his best endeavors to make himself heard by Helen. The suspicion came to him that Seagrue, with some unsuspected deviltry, had succeeded in cutting off even wire communication from the helpless rescue party. But as he dropped the receiver in despair, a shout arose among the deputies, and, looking down the far perspective of the long tangent that separated them from Las Vegas, Rhinelander's men saw a faint line of smoke on the horizon. It grew rapidly more distinct and spread blacker and heavier. An engine was bearing down on them. The railroad men were nonplused. None of them could recognize in the distance the shambling gait of the queer flyer, and Soda Water Sal was well upon them before they realized it was she. None the less hearty, however, was her welcome, and when the expectant throng made out Helen's face at the cab window a chorus of shouts went up to greet her.

With her hair in the wind and her eyes burning with excitement, the white-faced girl brought the astonished old machine to a stop close to the coach Rhinelander and the conductor ran to greet her. Few words were needed in explanation, few were lost. Coupling the coach ahead of the switch engine and hustling the deputies aboard, the conductor from the rear platform gave Helen her signal. Helen opened the throttle again and away went Soda Water Sal, pushing the loaded coach up the line ahead. To Soda Water Sal a coach was a mere toy—a plaything, indeed, she felt as if she were only now coming into her own when she had something in her hands to push. And without showing the slightest appearance of strain Soda Water Sal ate up the miles ahead of her like city blocks and got within sight of Seagrue's two stalwart tools, who were trying to run away with the engine of the special. Indeed, the pair in the stolen cab felt quite secure in their quick getaway until Bill, acting as driver, looking back, saw a train behind and an ominous cloud of smoke pouring from the stack of Soda Water Sal—the conductor was firing for Helen and he understood his job.

In spite of everything, the two outlaws could do, Helen closed up the gap that separated the coach from them, and on the front end of the latter the fleeing rascals could make out the armed deputies. Had there been any doubt in their minds as to the temper of the men pursuing them, little puffs of white smoke rising from their ears would have whined of rifle bullets about their danger threatening conviction. Lug and Bill of the danger threatening two. Nothing of the disposition of martyrs had place in their make-up, and, abandoning the engine, Lug with a word to Bill to ease the pace, descended the steps of the tender and tumbled down a sordid bank to the right of way; his companion followed,

Projection of Partisan Politics Harmful to Philippines, Asserts Blayney; Not Ready for Independence, He Declares

Editor Constitution: There is a thought that occurred to me frequently as I traveled through the Orient during the past year and noted the wonderful opportunities for American commercial expansion throughout the east. The thought was this: That the time was surely at hand when our southern democracy, emboldened and justified by the ever-increasing commercial and economic prosperity of the south, would dare to lift its voice in urgent protest against the old-line democratic idea that Americans must needs be "stay-at-homes" in both business and statesmanship.

personally known to me. What reasons have we to hasten our decision about the islands, or to make any promises, when we have not the slightest idea what the next five or ten or fifty years may bring in the international situation in the Pacific, and when not 2 per cent of the population of the islands is yet able to pass the very lenient test entitling them to a vote? Marvellously fertile in themselves, and lying just at the door of the future great commercial Empire of China, already so friendly disposed toward us, and upon the direct route to India and Java, they seem destined to serve as a great clearing house for American products for the entire east.

The Review, by any other than the highest and most disinterested motives. have seen courageous administrators, men whom they at heart admired, but under whose efficient administration the "politicos" had chafed and who therefore had been mercilessly attacked by them, replaced under the new administration by inexperienced officials. And when they saw these new arrivals begin to curry favor with the politicians and to call themselves "friends of the Philippines," they became bewildered. And this bewilderment gave way to lessening of respect for Americans in general when it was seen that these inexperienced men of the new regime, by the frequent use of this word "friend," attributed by implication the contrary to the long list of the best administrative officers the American government in the past had been able to send to them, and whom it seemed now the fashion to consider as little better than "carpet-baggers."

in connection with the foregoing communication. The Constitution carries extracts from the following interesting and illuminating article on the Philippines, by Professor Blayney, of the William M. Rice Institute, Houston, Texas:

OUR ADMINISTRATION OF THE PHILIPPINES. (In view of much recent and current discussion regarding the present management of public affairs in the Philippine islands, we are publishing herewith an article by Professor Thomas Lindsey Blayney, of the William M. Rice Institute, Houston, Texas. Professor Blayney is a distinguished scholar, a man of great experience, and an admirer and supporter of President Wilson. All the circumstances of his visit to the Philippines, as well as his relations as a home reader, it is possible that Professor Blayney should have been situated in all instances, and

When historians of the future shall have spoken a dispassionate and final verdict upon the deeds and achievements of the first decade of our occupancy of the Philippine islands (before some of our less thoughtful politicians and papers at home had begun to make political capital out of the so-called "independence movement" in the islands), no more inspiring chapter in our national history will be found. Nor will there be found elsewhere a finer list of names of men representing the best type of American manhood and idealism than the pages that record the first twelve years of American administration and achievement in the islands.)

All Americans and foreigners of experience agree in feeling that it is not only a serious mistake studiously to curvy favor with disaffected politicians, but that it is a grave and definitely injurious judgment to bestirre either at Manila or Washington, in adopting effective measures and policies for fear of wounding the susceptibilities of the Filipinos. The contention seems established that the "policy" politicians demand of any Filipino official is that he ward the United States that therefore discarding all hope of appreciation in return, it should be our single purpose to give to the islands the kind of administration which may seem most expedient to the politicians of the hour, but under the approval of the Filipinos and the exaltation of future generations.

Certainly one of the most surprising things to the visitor, if he is fortunate enough to have heard to heart talks with representative Filipinos who are not themselves political aspirants, will be to find that independence is not desired at this time by the majority of types. Every one of them, however, is of the opinion that revolution would certainly follow the lowering of the flag. Not one of them would name a time now to be foreseen when he thought it would be granted. Each and every one should his sentiments become known he would be a marked man, and whether directly or indirectly, would feel the heavy hand of the politicians.

the feeling of Americans and foreigners in the islands concerning the "Jones Bill" is somewhat as follows: It is considered impossible to foresee what the most likely result will be if the Jones Bill is to be the international situation in the Pacific now so essential to us and to the best interests of the Philippines the new inventions constantly being made in aerial and maritime armament and our commercial interests in the islands in the hands of a party therefore it is believed that if an independence bill is passed, it will be an unnecessary preamble to such a bill and a revolutionary sound statement that it is a mistake to have a "stay-at-home" policy in the Philippines.

Thus far in our history we have never receded from following our star of destiny because of real or fancied dangers. And it is not believed that we are going to hesitate now, when millions of whom we have led to brighter days stand sorely in need of our strong helping hand to conduct them over the last and most difficult part of the way.

If YOU Don't CONTROL Your EMOTIONS, They Will RUIN Your VOICE and SPOIL YOUR PHYSICAL ATTRACTIVE

Delicacy of Woman's Nature Betrayed by Her Speaking Tones, Says Dr. William Lee Howard

AN IMPORTANT fact to remember about controlling the emotions and anger is that if they are not controlled they will in time show up on the face in the form of poor circulation and had complexion and give the girl a voice that is harsh, rasping and repelling.

So contends Dr. William Lee Howard, the well known author in discussing Sex Problems in Worry and Work.

The voice is one of the secondary sex characters of woman, he says, as the beard or body structure is of man. The delicacy of her nature and the inclusiveness of her femininity are told by the voice, he says.

Poets have sung of the sweet voice of the maid and matron, dramatists give to their heroines the soft, sweet voice of Juliet, writes Dr. Howard. "When you hear the loud raucous, rasping nasal tones of a woman you need not see her face or form—you can visualize it. Big boned, coarse in skin and hair dowdy in dress, and arrogant in attitude the voice fits the frame and its covering.

Voices Associated With Sex.

The voices of all animals including man are structural peculiarities associated with sex. The voice belongs to the complex of mating. It distinguishes the sexes in amphibians insects birds. It is used for capture and winning, which puts a premium upon its quality. It is a stimulant to mating and finally in man reaches the form of articulate expression.

A girl may be endowed with the voice for winning and soothing. She may possess as a maid that charm of sex attraction the pure tones of the female, yet through ignorance of its value to her and consequent carelessness acquire the harsh tones of a repelling nature.

Anger May Spoil Tone.

Anger lack of self-control, will do this in girlhood. Imitation of her brother's school or college cheering and shouting will certainly bring about a strident tone of voice which lasts throughout life. The harsh, coarse voice of the American woman one hears too often in public is due to that license we permit girls during the period of adolescence. I have witnessed over and over again a pack of high school girls at football or basket ball games howling yelling making all possible imitations of masculine voicings. Such girls cannot develop into full womanhood without losing one of the beautiful characteristics of femininity, without destroying a valuable sex function—the voice that attracts.

"The voice throughout all nature is one of the sex activities for mating and when a girl commences to injure it she commences to lose one factor for sex attraction. She would not willingly keep her hair short like her brother or try to get the angularity of his body yet in using her little throat as a male she is just as certainly obtaining a masculine characteristic.

During the developing period of the girl the voice is capable of being permanently injured. Like the youth there are changes going on in the structure of the voice muscles and cords and they may at this time become so stretched and coarsened that she never can again acquire the tones of sweetness and delight.

Schools Lax in Training.

The public schools are lax in this matter and instead of having a cheer leader they need voice instructors and silencers. One need only to get into a trolley car where there is a crowd of schoolgirls to realize the value and truth of this statement. Many will show the hands of Helen of Troy, but the voice of Xantippe.

Dr. Howard adds that if a girl grows up with lack of self-control she is morally and physically unfit to battle with life. The frequent loss of self-control causing paleness and blue lips, will end in a muddy complexion and mottled skin. The finger-nails will lose their pink of good health; the neck and bust their attractive plumpness.

"Twilight Sleep" Has Competitor

"TWILIGHT sleep," it is declared, will be superseded by the use of nitrous oxidogen gas to make childbirth painless. The latter gas, the new use of which was discovered by Dr. Carl Henry Davis, in Rush Medical College, is practically harmless, while "twilight sleep" is regarded by American doctors as being extremely dangerous to the patient.

Nitrous gas according to Dr. Davis deadens all pain but allows freedom of thought and action. A patient under its influence can follow instructions and it need be inhaled only in small quantities and at infrequent intervals to be successful.

This thoughtless yet dangerous habit is so common that it can be witnessed time after time at every cigar stand. Undoubtedly it has been one of the principal means of spreading infection among those who smoke cigars and it is high time that an agent so potent for harm was abolished.

Like Music for Its Mathematics

A STRANGE statement but no less a scientist than Helmholtz states that the two are coincident. Music discloses the habit of the human mind to enjoy definite and measured intervals of sound. We say music is sweet when it contains beats and recurrences of notes in certain sequences that tap our innate love for mathematical precision.

Helmholtz says: "It has struck me as a mystery peculiarly interesting and wonderful that in the theory of music in the physical and technical foundations of this art which above all things seems to create in the mind the most tender states of consciousness, incalculable and indescribable that especially in this the science of purest and strictest thought—mathematics—should prove itself pre-eminently productive. Music intervals divisions of time and so forth, numerical fractions and even at times logarithms play a prominent part. Mathematics and music—the most glaring opposites possible in human thought. And yet they are connected and mutually sustained."

This fact was ascertained recently by the government. The gigantic task of counting the number of birds in its borders was carried on by lovers of the feathered tribe all over the country and it revealed the fact that there were about 250,000 pairs of birds, or about a pair to the acre.

Each bird counted was responsible for an area of land not less than forty acres and not more than eighty acres in extent, and the census only included the birds nesting in that area.

This Cow Is World's Champion

BY PRODUCING 7214 pounds of milk, containing 35,536 pounds of butter fat, in seven days, Ormsby Jane Segis Aaggie, a pure-bred Holstein Friesian has surpassed the world's best dairy record and become the champion.

The World's Best Milk Producer—Ormsby Jane Segis Aaggie.

The lady with the ponderous name is owned by Pine Grove Farm in Elm Center N. Y. She is 6 years old and the test was officially made under the direction of the New York State Agricultural College.

The rules observed were: A large roomy box stall, light blanketing thorough grooming, cows exercised every day water always before them fed four times each day milked four times and the animals allowed plenty of time to rest by so arranging the work that nothing interfered with the quietness of the stables.

That the official figures may be readily understood by the reader, it is well to explain that 7214 pounds of milk is equivalent to over 320 quarts of milk. Therefore the seven day yield of this remarkable cow averages more than forty six quarts each day and furthermore, 35,536 pounds of butter fat when churned, will make over forty four pounds of commercial butter. At 35 cents per pound the seven day butter yield of this very profitable cow would be worth about $15.50.

While Ormsby Jane Segis Aaggie's breeding is not remarkable in ultra fashion able lines, she traces to some splendid individuals of the great black and white breed.

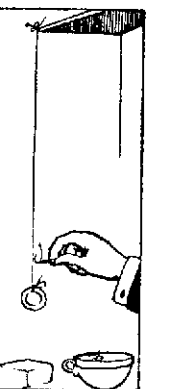

She weighs 1500 pounds has a straight back line and is well shaped enough to please the most exacting critic as to fulfilling the requirements of the ideal Holstein.

Science has lately discovered that if a person masters these habits which tend to nervous breakdown, he will acquire the power of lying absolutely still in bed at night in whatever position he assumes, and will find himself falling asleep in a quarter of the accustomed time. String Performs Seeming Miracle

RECENT experiments have brought the discovery that anyone can make a string which is still useful after burning up for its ash will hold a ring suspended in the air.

To make this magic string procure a few pieces of cotton string each about one and a half feet long and fill them well with soap. Prepare a brine by dissolving three table spoonfuls of salt in a cup of water. Place the strings in the brine and allow them to soak for two hours or longer. It is necessary that they be thoroughly saturated with the brine. When taken out of the brine and thoroughly dried suspend one of them from a nail on a ledge and hang a finger ring on its lower end. Apply a lighted match to the string and allow it to burn. The ring will not fall, but will hang by the ash.

Simple Cure For Dentist Fright

SINCE it is as good illustration of a well-earned freedom for the future.

The fatigue which results from an over-reaction of this dentist-tension is too often to be described as a nervous breakdown. It is a well-known teacher of the nervous system suffered from the dentist's work. The fatigue of the unnecessary strain of the nervous system is not from any acute infection. The result obtained by insisting upon making yourself a dead weight in the chair if you succeed only partially will prove this. It will also be a summary means of getting rid of the dentist-fright—that peculiar dread which is well known to us.

A well-known neurologist says one can get all this by a little effort and say to himself: "I will not cry till I am hurt."

crets and receiving trade secrets—and patents thereon. And they have worked hand in glove with the Berlin government, which, as everyone must admit, is the highest organized military government of the age, selling powder and receiving favors in the way of guarantees that the great German powder manufacturing concern should not invade American territory. It has also been said and never conclusively denied that the du Ponts furnished the Wilhelmstrasse office with records of every pound of powder sold to the United States government.

So, when the great war broke out and raged with ever-increasing fury, the du Ponts naturally got into the game. Not with their old friend, the German government, but with the allies. Not because the du Ponts had deserted the Prussian regime with which it had a harmonious "working agreement," but because the mighty sea power of Great Britain had shut off the seaports of Germany. Not for a day since the fateful August 1, when Germany declared war on rapidly mobilizing Russia, has the work of building additions to the du Pont powder works ceased.

Millions of dollars' profits have been banked by the many members of the du Pont family. But have these millions brought happiness and contentment? The answer lies in the suit and numerous interventions filed to get possession of the $14,000,000 worth of stock sold last spring by General T. Coleman du Pont, retiring president of the company. It will be remembered that General du Pont withdrew from the powder corporation to assume control of the Equitable Life Assurance Society. He sold his powder holdings for some $14,000,000 to members of his family, who organized themselves into the du Pont Securities Company. That stock is now worth nearly $70,000,000, thanks to the unparalleled flight financially heavenward of the "war brides," of which the du Pont company stock was one of the lightest.

It is true that the many descendants of the original Pierre Samuel du Pont de Nemours, French economist, chemist and revolutionist, have never been without their family rows. But now the entire family is divided into two hostile camps, as seems only fitting for manufacturers of war munitions. The breath of scandal has breathed heavily and venomously on the du Pont family. There have been elopements, divorces and suicides, estrangements and court rows, but never before have millions on millions been lined up against hundreds of millions.

When General T. Coleman du Pont withdrew to take charge of the Equitable last spring, he bought out the Morgan interests. More than $4,000,000 was involved in the transfer of stock. Just how much is a Wall street mystery. But he sold his stock in the powder works for a few trifling hundred thousand dollars over $14,000,000. Of the purchase price, more than half was supplied by the Morgan interests. The rest was paid for by the personal notes of the purchasing members of the du Pont family and by notes secured by stock. Then the "war brides" began to soar. Wall street reopened and now fully awake, realized that the war was a matter of years, not months, and that America had been converted into a vast munitions plant for the allies. Du Pont powder stock doubled, trebled, quadrupled in value. The fortunate members of the syndicate who had bought out the general's holdings were some $50,000,000 ahead.

"Let's get in on this," cried other members of the family, and forthwith Philip du Pont filed suit against the du Pont Securities Company to set aside the sale of defendants, the holding company, the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Company, a Delaware corporation, and the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Powder Company, a New Jersey corporation. Then things happened fast and thick; in a few days a chasm had been driven into the old and aristocratic du Pont family that perhaps all the years to come will never solidify. Pierre S. du Pont, president of the company since the retirement of General T. Coleman du Pont and formerly treasurer, was the principal target aimed at in the suit. With him in the Securities company were Irene du Pont, Lamont du Pont, Alexis Felix du Pont, Henry F. du Pont, Eugene U. du Pont and R. R. Morgan Carpenter, whose wife was Miss Margaretta Lamont du Pont.

Then other members of the family joined with the insurgent Philip until six of the most influential not included in the Securities company deal were lined up against Pierre. Mrs. Robeson Perot and her brother, E. Paul du Pont, filed suits to intervene, although they are brother and sister of A. Felix du Pont; one of the defendants. And thus the family row grew and spread. Alfred I. du Pont, vice president and general manager, legally called for cards by intervening. He only owns 75,524 shares of stock, and when it is remembered these shares are valued up in the hundreds of dollars apiece, it is seen Alfred can hardly be considered a poor relative. But Alfred was promptly chastised for his attitude. A special meeting of the directors removed him as vice president, showing that the entrance into the fight of this immensely wealthy and influential member of the family only added fuel to the flames of discord. Others, but less important members of the family, one by one added their interventions to the legal tangle. Francis I. du Pont, Delaware's pioneer single tax advocate, finally got into line.

So now Delaware and New Jersey, the homes of the principal activities of the du Pont family, are each split up financially and socially, for, besides wielding monetary influence second only to one family in the world, the du Ponts are recognized as the premier social arbiters of these two small but important states. As an indication of the importance of the du Ponts socially, the following is taken from a recent issue of a national paper devoted to social "Wilmington had its first assembly on Friday and it took the form of a bal masque, with a black and white setting that has rarely been equaled. The Century Club was wonderfully decorated with the ever popular black and white, and the stage setting with tall black trees on a white background, with an orange moon made a most effective picture. The patronesses were Mesdames Charles E. Miller, T. Coleman du Pont, Henry F. Scott, Charles William Curtis, Irusee du Pont, E. Paul du Pont, E. Tamm Warner and Willard Hall Porter. Before the dance there were dinners given by the Henry B. Thompsons, the Lindsey Curtises, the Lewis de Bieles and the Pierre du Ponts."

Colonel Henry Algerson du Pont, deceased senator from New Jersey, wielded a power in politics equal to that of any of the "old line" senators. General T. Coleman du Pont is still one of the country's most liberal philanthropists. The du Pont family, for a hundred years, has been one of the foremost in the country. The various companies are now capitalized at $240,000,000. Plants and factories are maintained in twenty-two states, and the holdings are spread over the world, the nitrate fields in Chile, rich beyond the dreams of a Cortes or a Hernandez, being but one of the foreign acquisitions. The collective wealth of the du Ponts and their connections through marriage cannot be estimated. Only the Rothschilds can exceed it.

But for a hundred years this rich and powerful family has been involved in trouble and scandal, which has slowly brewed until a quarter of a century ago it broke into a series of mis-happenings that has shaken the social foundations of this country's moneyed and familliar aristocracy. Here are a few of the painful and tragic occurrences:

On December 1, 1832, Louis C. du Pont, son of the late Irene du Pont, walked into the Wilmington Club, asked the steward for paper and while the latter went for it blew out his brains. The suicide was a brother of Alfred I. du Pont, then vice president of the powder company. A few years later Maurice du Pont's brother was estranged by many members of the family by marrying "Cotton" W.

T. COLEMAN DU PONT

About the same time William du Pont, an official of the powder company and a brother of Senator du Pont, went to North Dakota and procured a divorce from his wife, who was the daughter of Victor du Pont and now the wife of Willard Saulsbury, the Democratic leader of Delaware and a prominent attorney, in order to marry a Mrs. Zinn, of Wilmington, who was a stranger to the exclusive set of that city. In 1906 Alfred I. du Pont went to Dakota and procured a divorce from his wife, Mrs. Bessie Gardner du Pont. The same year Mrs. G. A. Maddox, the wife of Alfred I. du Pont's private secretary, the daughter of Federal Judge Edward G. Bradford of Delaware, and on her mother's side of du Pont blood, procured a divorce from her husband in Cumberland county, Pa.

On October 15, 1907, du Pont and Mrs. Maddox were married at the Plaza hotel, New York city. In November of the same year Madeline du Pont, daughter of Alfred I. du Pont, eloped from the home of her father, after a quarrel with her mother, with John Bancroft, Jr., son of the millionaire treasurer of the Joseph Bancroft & Sons Company, textile manufacturers, of Wilmington. In November, 1908, Alfred I. du Pont brought suit in the courts of Delaware for a divorce against his son, C. Mrs. Elizabeth du Pont, widow of Dr. Alexis de Pont, and Mrs. E. J. Bush, one of the society matrons of Wilmington. The suit, which was later dropped, was brought because Mrs. du Pont No. 2 was talked about and denied invitation to the Wilmington assembly dances.

In June, 1911, Henry Bancroft, Jr., brought action for divorce against his wife, Madeline Bancroft du Pont, alleging adultery and naming her son of a few months, whom he referred to in his bill as Max Hochler, Jr., as a co-defendant.

The same month James Gardner, a brother of the first wife of the powder company's millionaire vice president, committed suicide in Michigan by shooting himself in the head.

One month later Mrs. Bancroft brought a counter suit for divorce against her husband, naming two women of Munich, Germany, as co-respondents, and at the same time denying the allegations of his bill.

And on top of all this the squabble for a paltry $60,000,000 or $70,000,000 worth of "war brides"! Is it any wonder social Delaware and social New Jersey are in turmoil? Is it any wonder the minor vicissitudes of powder making, such as the explosion of the Upper Hagley yard, with the atomizing of some 60,000 workmen, or the burning of Hopewell, with its $2,000,000 loss, failed to shake the nerves of the du Ponts? Other and more important matters engaged their attention.

BATTLES are fought with powder. Wars are won or lost by powder. Naval supremacy, a trained and armed citizenry, Zeppelins, aeroplanes, submarines, are all effective through gunpowder, in some form or other. Now the du Ponts have been making powder for more than a century. They have furnished powder for Uncle Sam in all his great wars since the Revolution. They have worked hand in hand with the
